3 Men Taken, Loot Seized In Robbery Of 2 Banks

2 Suspects Arrested In D. C., 1 on Coast; Gang Was Betrayed By Auto Registration

Two 22-year-old Washington men were charged last night with the $28,000 holdup of the Shepherd Park Branch of the Hamilton National Bank last February, and the $35,000 holdup of the Spring Valley branch of the National Metropolitan Bank December 7.

A third prisoner was arraigned in Los Angeles earlier in the day, also charged with both crimes. They were held in default of $50,000 bond each.

The Washingtonians are Leon Miskin, 22, alias Leon Mission, alias Marty Bishop, 500 Nicholson st. nw., and Nicholas James Carrigan, 513 8th st. ne., who was inducted into the Army Wednesday.

They were arraigned at 7 p. m. yesterday before U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence, and their case was continued for a hearing January 4.

Police and the FBI announced jointly earlier in the day that arrest of the three had solved the Hamilton holdup.

"Several thousand" dollars of money taken in the Metropolitan holdup was recovered in Miskin's car, when he was arrested at his father's liquor store at 2449 Good Hope rd. se., the FBI revealed.

A "substantial part" of the $64,106 taken in both holdups has been recovered, police said.

Months of detailed investigation, which drew the praise of FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, went into the case before the arrest of Christopher Tassos, 34, in North Hollywood, Calif., Friday night.

Tassos was known to police as a suspected bank robber and was wanted for a $16,000 payroll robbery in New Jersey when the Hamilton bank was held up, the FBI revealed.

From hundreds of pictures of known robbers, Tassos was tentatively identified by eyewitnesses.

Stocks Race Ahead On Truman's Call For Mobilization

NEW YORK, Dec. 16 (AP).—War stocks raced ahead at high speed today in the market's first response to President Truman's mobilization call.

Orders to buy poured into Wall st. from all parts of the country. Popular issues jumped $1 to around $4 a share in heavy trading.

The market closed within easy shooting distance of the highest level in 20 years.

Among the most favored issues were aircrafts, textiles, rails, steels and motors—all of which would benefit from the rearmament program.

Most of the experts had expected anything but a sensational advance, the largest since May, 1948.

*The Grateful Child

The little child stirred restlessly
Upon her fevered bed.
"We lack the funds to save her now,"
The white clad nurses said.
A few more days of doctors' care,
Another nurse each night,
A few more drugs and once again
Her little eyes would light.
The people tried to save her too,
And those with good intent
Gave nearly all it took, in fact,
Within eighteen percent.
The fevered patient gently stirred
And whispered soft and low,
"I'm glad they gave almost enough
Because they loved me so."

*The Community Chest is now within 18 percent of its goal. Telephone MEtropolitan 6262 and help Washington change "almost enough" into enough.

MEtropolitan 6262

Today Is Last Chance to Give Via Chest's Emergency Phone

Today is the last chance for the more fortunate to help the less fortunate in Greater Washington through the Community Chest emergency drive.

Volunteer operators from the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. will be on duty at Metropolitan 6262 up to midnight to accept the sorely needed cash and pledges.

The 53,555 needy persons, whose requests will have to be turned down next year by the Community Chest unless it reaches its $4,260,000 goal, ask that this Sunday be made a real Sabbath with contributions or additions to earlier contributions.

A call to MEtropolitan 6262 will bring a volunteer Community Chest worker to pick up contributions at the givers' convenience.

By 10 p. m. yesterday, 647 persons had pledged $10,713 over the special telephone number since the emergency drive opened last Saturday. Contributions from other sources during the week amounted to $72,960, bringing the grand total to $3,456,673.

The total of $83,673 contributed during the week will care for 5578 persons. But the Community Chest still needs $803,327 to make its total goal. The amount still needed will care for 53,555 persons.

The Chest's total goal of $4,260,000 will help 284,000 persons, including 34,000 servicemen and their families.

These persons live in Washington, Alexandria and Arlington, Fairfax, Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties. The Community Chests in each of these places are united in a Federation and carry on their annual campaign as a single body.

Mailmen Seek To Clean Out Backlog Today

Work Through Night; Two Postoffices to Have Sunday Hours

BULLETIN
By the United Press

The National Mediation Board notified the "big four" operating railroad brotherhoods last night to be ready for a summons today to what will probably be a joint bargaining meeting with the carriers.

The four brotherhoods are the trainmen, the conductors, the firemen, and the engineers. All have asked for wage boosts.

Postal and transportation officials last night reported that Washington's backlog of mail and freight—thousands upon thousands of pieces—would be "cleaned out" by today.

The return to "normal for Christmastime" service, they said, would come even faster than they had predicted earlier in the day. Both postoffice and railroad employes worked through the night to break the log-jam.

The news is good not only for Washington area residents but for the rest of the Nation, since Washington is one of the great transportation "gateways"—a funneling point for freight and mail.

With the embargo on mail lifted, the city postoffice, North Capitol st. and Massachusetts ave., will be open from 7:30 a. m. to midnight today to handle mail and shipments, particularly Christmas packages.

The Benjamin Franklin substation, Pennsylvania ave. between 12th and 13th sts. nw., will be open from noon to 10 p. m. today.

Both postoffices are normally closed for parcel mail Sundays. They remained open last night beyond their normal closing times to accept packages.

Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson lifted the embargo at 11:15 a. m. yesterday, 39 hours after he ordered the Nation's postoffices to stop accepting parcel post, first-class mail heavier than eight ounces and all second-class mail except daily newspapers.

Donaldson ordered all postmasters to "make every effort to facilitate the convenience of the

*Hanley Receives $16,000 State Job, Thanks Dewey

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 16 (U.P.)—Lieut. Gov. Joe R. Hanley, author of the controversial "Hanley letter," will become special counsel to the State Veterans Affairs Division January 1 at an annual salary of $16,000, Director Leo V. Lanning said today.

Hanley, in a statement, said he was grateful for the "consideration, courtesy and thoughtfulness" of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in making the appointment. His term as lieutenant governor expires December 31.

Lanning said Hanley will give his "full time" to a study of how the division's entire facilities can be placed at the disposal of veterans returning from Korea and those being called into service during the present international crisis.

Allies Give Up Hamhung; Lines Of Beachhead Are Pulled Back

TOKYO (Sunday), Dec. 17 (AP).—Attacking Chinese Communists today pressed to within 3 miles of Hungnam, beachhead port for United States forces in northeast Korea.

The Chinese thrust through Hamhung, abandoned by the Americans Saturday, and covered half the 6 miles between the big industrial city and its port, Hungnam, a field dispatch said.

Air and Navy reports said increasing numbers of Chinese were massing around the steadily shrinking Allied perimeter.

Already an estimated 100,000 Chinese were swarming through the snow-cloaked hills overlooking the United States Tenth Corps beachhead.

Bridges and Tunnels Blown

Chinese patrols entered Hamhung almost as soon as United States Army Engineers blew the last of three bridges leading south from the once important manufacturing and rail center.

United States Engineers kept blasting as they moved back, destroying tunnels, bridges and roads.

Throughout Saturday night the Reds probed lightly but persistently at the American defense perimeter three miles southeast of Hamhung, AP Correspondent Tom Lambert reported.

The Chinese failed to pierce the defense perimeter, held by troops of the United States Seventh Division. But the Reds kept feeling out the beachhead defenses, disregarding night-long American illumination and artillery fire.

Air Activity Limited

Lowering weather hampered air operations in the northeast Saturday and a snowstorm permitted only a few strikes at the Reds in the west.

United Nations artillery, however, hammered at Red forces—identified as North Korean—building up a mile north of the thirty-eighth parallel in the center of the Korean peninsula.

The artillery fire at this concentration of 2000 Reds—with undisclosed results—was the only major engagement in the west Saturday, an Eighth Army spokesman said.

Artillery, too, was playing a major role in the defense of the Hungnam beachhead in the northeast. Big guns on the defense rim and inside the port city itself rained a steady hail of explosives on the Chinese.

Guns of the fleet standing off Hungnam helped hold the Reds at bay.

A small force of Chinese tried to enter Hamhung Saturday before demolition squads finished wrecking the city's rail and highway bridges and its buildings of military importance. These premature Reds were chased out of town by Puerto Rican and American patrols of the United States Third Infantry Division.

"It may be," Lambert said, "that the Chinese had taken such a beating in their fruitless at-

Wage Ceilings Also in Prospect For Automobile Industry Soon

By the United Press

The price of all new automobiles was rolled back to December 1 levels yesterday in the Government's first big move against skyrocketing prices.

The order, first of a series expected to affect basic industries, cancelled out a long string of price hikes started by the auto industry this month, including boosts of $60 to $195 on General Motors, Ford and Chrysler 1951 models.

The Economic Stabilization Agency announced the freeze—the first under President Truman's national emergency proclamation—will continue until March 1 to permit a full-dress review of the motor industry's costs, prices and profits.

No Rebates

Ceilings also will be clamped down on the wages and salaries of some 900,000 auto workers as soon as the Wage Stabilization Board completes its recommendations, probably late this week.

The rollback directly affects only manufacturers' prices, but it was expected dealers would mark down their showroom price tags to conform.

Thousands of 1951 models already have been sold, and ESA officials said the buyers would not be entitled to any rebate.

It was the first of a series of price control orders that Mr. Truman announced Friday night would be issued to hold the line against inflation in products and raw materials vital to the defense program and the Nation's civilian life.

Steel, copper, aluminum, nickel, lead, tin, zinc and rubber seemed certain to follow autos onto the controlled list in short order.

"Fair Standards" Planned

Mr. Truman said mandatory controls would be invoked first on critical materials that play a major role in defense and the cost of living. At the same time, he said, "fair standards" will be set on wages and prices in all other fields, which business and labor will be asked to observe as their voluntary ceilings.

Violation of the "fair standard" ceilings, he warned, may bring on compulsory controls and rollbacks where necessary.

The automobile price order was accompanied by an official promise that auto wage controls will be invoked "at the earliest possible moment," as required by the defense production law.

The order came less than 72 hours after the auto makers had refused to roll back their prices voluntarily.

Economic Stabilization Administrator Alan Valentine and Price Controller Michael V. DiSalle had asked the 10 major producers to cancel recent increases on their 1951 models and to forego any further boosts, at least until March 15.

Decisions on wage and salary stabilization in the industry probably will not be made until after

NATIONAL EMERGENCY—The President signs the proclamation placing the United States on an emergency basis. His proclamation issues the call for the Nation to marshal all its power against the threat of Communist aggression and Red ambitions for world conquest

Wilson to Take Top Mobilization Job on Monday; Powers Broad

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday took two long steps toward full mobilization to meet the "grave danger" of Red aggression.

The President proclaimed a state of national emergency and called on all citizens to "make a united effort for the security and well-being of our beloved country and to place its needs foremost in thought and in action."

Then he issued an executive order establishing the Office of Defense Mobilization "to coordinate all mobilization activities" with broad powers over production, procurement, manpower, wages and prices and transport.

Wilson Starts Work Monday

Chief of the new agency, with the title of director, will be Charles E. Wilson, 64-year-old president of General Electric Corp., who will resign his $275,000 job to work for the Government at $22,500 a year.

Wilson, who is expected to assume his new duties Monday, will supplant W. Stuart Symington who, as head of the National Security Resources Board, has been coordinator of defense activ-

Mr. Truman's emergency proclamation will make effective extraordinary powers granted by 67 laws and parts of laws, in addition to those already covered by legislation, notably the Defense Production Act of 1950. Most of the powers assigned by the President by virtue of his proclamation concern minor matters within Government departments or the recapture by the Government of airports and other property in the hands of local governments or private industry.

Powers Broad and Varied

But its force may be felt across the Nation if the President uses his powers under a state of emergency to:

1. Suspend the eight-hour work law in the case of contractors for the Government, providing overtime is paid.
2. Suspend the law regulating wages for laborers and mechanics employed by contractors on public buildings.
3. Suspend the eight-hour law for laborers and mechanics em-

'Free World Threatened'

*Inter-American Parley Sought By U. S. to Thwart Communism

By The Associated Press

The United States called yesterday for a conference of foreign ministers from 21 Western Hemisphere countries to consult on communism's threat to "the entire free world."

The call was announced by the State Department within a few hours after President Truman had proclaimed a national emergency.

The department said:

"The aggressive policy of international communism, carried out through its satellites, has brought about a situation in which the entire free world is threatened."

Edward G. Miller, jr., Assistant Secretary of State, said the move is a follow-up to the program of action laid down by Mr. Truman in his speech to the Nation Friday night.

Miller told reporters the United States hopes the conference can be held in Washington but wants to consult with other countries on this question.

He said the conferees will discuss "urgent problems in connection with the current emergency in the economic, political and military fields."

Miller said his best guess is that the conference can be held by mid-February at the earliest.

The United States is calling the conference under Article 39 of the Bogota Charter, a hemisphere-wide pact which lays down broad measures for the political, economic and military security of the 21 American republics. The United States request for the conference will go before the council of the Organization of American States. A two-thirds vote of the 21 countries represented is needed actually to convoke the meeting.

Under President Truman's instructions, the United States request for the conference will be

U. S. Blocks Red Chinese, Korean Assets

Ships, Planes Ordered To Avoid Red Ports; War Entry Held Cause

By the United Press

The Government cut off all United States trade with Communist China and North Korea last night and also blocked their financial assets in this country.

The economic sanctions will remain in effect so long as Red China continues it intervention in the Korean war, a State Department announcement said.

The orders prohibit any American ship or aircraft from entering any port or city under Chinese Communist rule. The blocking decree puts assets of Red China and North Korea under rigid control of the United States Treasury.

In addition to the outright trade ban, a Commerce Department order forbids American ships and planes from carrying any cargo anywhere in the world if there is reason to believe it is destined "directly or indirectly" for Red China.

The Treasury order directed a census be taken of all Chinese and Korean property in this country as of the opening of business Monday. This applies to both Communist and non-Communist property

*Auto Union Tells U. S. It May Scrap Wage Contracts

DETROIT, Dec. 16 (AP).—Union officials have warned the Government bluntly they intend to scrap entire contracts covering hundreds of thousands of auto workers if wage controls interfere with escalator pay systems now prevalent in the industry.

This was learned today within a week after the last of the "Big Three" companies—Chrysler—hitched its wages to the cost of living.

All the Big Three—including also General Motors and Ford—are operating under long-term agreements permitting no wage reopenings for five years. So are many of the smaller firms.

The warning, previously kept confidential, was given in a letter from UAW President Walter Reuther to economic Stabilization Chief Alan Valentine.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, Dec. 16 (AP).—What the Air Force hails as the longest nonstop flight in history by an F-80 jet fighter—a trip of 1560 miles—came to light belatedly today.

Sen. Taft Found Choice Now Of 24% of Republican Voters

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 16.—Senator Robert A. Taft's popularity as a Republican presidential candidate is up sharply.

The number of Republicans who want to see him nominated for President has increased from 15 percent in October to 24 percent today, following his landslide re-election in Ohio November 7.

In terms of presidential candidate popularity this puts the Ohio Senator well ahead of other frequently mentioned Republican possibilities with the exception of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. Moreover, Senator Taft is the leading second choice of General Eisenhower's Republican supporters in case the general does not enter the race.

These facts are revealed in a public opinion survey which also measured the effect of the November elections on the national popularity of two other Republican winners—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York and Gov. Earl Warren of California.

Congress is expected to approve a civil defense bill this week designed to afford protection of "life and property in the United States from an enemy attack."

This became a virtual certainty yesterday as the Senate Armed Services Committee gave unanimous approval to a draft of the bill. A House Armed Services subcommittee already has approved a similar draft, and full committee approval is expected Monday.

House floor consideration has been tentatively set for Wednesday. The Senate may get the bill Thursday or Friday. Congress may wind up the lame duck session on Friday, although final conference reports on the tax, appropriations and civil defense measures may require further sessions between Christmas and New Year's. The new Congress meets January 3.

The unanimous approval by both Senators and Representatives in committee appears to indicate easy sailing for the civil defense measure. After months of argument, the bill has been shaken down to the point where it has general approval of Federal, State and local government officials, although it contains some features objectionable to each group.

As a whole the measure would give sweeping power to the proposed independent Civil Defense Administration to be headed by former Florida Gov. Millard Caldwell. He already is serving as head of a temporary civil defense agency.

Passage of the measure would fulfill a hope expressed by President Truman in his Friday night radio address—that civil defense "can be greatly speeded up."

The bill—although the two drafts have language differences—would divide the civil defense jobs

Still Under Construction

Massachusetts Ave. Apartment May House Federal Agency

The Federal Government plans to take over a new apartment house, still under construction, at 1711 Massachusetts ave. nw., it was learned yesterday.

It is possible the building will house the proposed Defense Production Administration.

The building, known as Boston House, has 270 units, including efficiency and one and two bedroom apartments.

W. E. Reynolds, commissioner of Public Buildings Service, General Services Administration, said yesterday the Government plans to lease Boston House but has not yet decided what agency will occupy it.

The building's owner, James C. Dulin, jr., 5519 Hoover st., Bethesda, Md., said he has had no definite word the building is to be used by the Government. He said construction would not be completed for two or three months. He plans to complete it as an apartment house unless he gets other instructions, he added.

Earlier in the week, it was reported the Government also planned to lease the State House, a new building at 2122 Massachusetts ave. nw., which has 313 apartment units.

Reynolds said yesterday that Boston House and the State House are the only two apartment buildings the Government now contemplates using for office space.

Crisis Talk Realistic In West Europe View

LONDON, Dec. 16 (AP).—President Truman's call to the United States to marshal its strength against the threat of "Communist world conquest" drew expressions of general approval in West European capitals today.

Various officials and newspapers applauded his Friday night speech and his proclamation of a state of national emergency.

Communist dissenters took their cue from Moscow declarations Friday that the proclamation would be "a new step toward war."

London's Daily Worker, a Communist mouthpiece, said the speech "shows quite clearly that the United States leaders are preparing for a world war at the earliest moment."

Highlights of continental reaction included:

Athens—Greek Premier Sophocles Venezelos told a news conference, "Everybody now is convinced that America is taking a decisive attitude and has abandoned a policy of appeasement."

Bonn—A spokesman for the West German government said West German leaders were deeply impressed by the grave character of President Truman's speech. The government, he said, can be expected to take steps to tighten control over basic German industries.

Moscow—The Soviet press has not yet reported on the President's proclamation, but, in predicting the development, made clear Friday its attitude that this is "a new step toward war." Major newspapers carried an article saying the proclamation would be a propaganda measure aimed to offset the loss of American prestige in Korea. The theme was "bankruptcy of American diplomacy."

Paris — Government officials said they were "very favorably" impressed with President Truman's declaration. They were pleased, too, that he left a door open for discussions with Communist China and Soviet Russia. Non-Communist opinion was summed up by the conservative newspaper Le Figaro:

"Mr. Truman's appeal, coming 67 months after the end of World War II, puts American opinion face to face with the realities of a situation for which the USSR bears the entire responsibility."

Rome — The rightist independent newspaper Il Tempo called for strengthening of Italy's defenses against fifth columnists "to prevent our soldiers from being struck in the back." Approving the United States decision to prepare needed armament, Il Tempo said "if European powers do not wish to be an alluring bait for the Soviet colossus, they must take the same road."

Communist chief Palmiro Togliatti, who is leaving soon for Moscow, said "the declarations of the American President show that he has lost his head."

Copenhagen—The conservative Danish newspaper Berlingske Aftenavis commented that the President's message was also "an appeal to a Europe that has too slowly and reluctantly adopted the realistic view of the world situation long ago reached by the United States."

President Takes Overnight Cruise

President Truman left Washington at noon yesterday for an overnight cruise down the Potomac with friends aboard his yacht Williamsburg. The White House would not identify the friends and described the trip as a private party.

Mr. Truman is expected to return early this afternoon.

ployed by the Army, with time and one half for overtime.

4. Suspend or amend FCC rules and close or take over, with "just compensation," any radio station in the United States.

5. Control, inspect and, in some cases, take control of all vessels, foreign and domestic, in United States waters including the Panama Canal. One effect of this law, as applied in World War II, was the clearance and issuance of identification cards to all boat operators, including yachtsmen, on inland waterways.

6. Authorize the Navy to call retired officers and enlisted men to active duty and the Marine Corps to call back retired officers.

7. Authorize the Coast Guard to extend enlistments beyond their agreed termination.

In vigorous and simple language, Mr. Truman spelled out the goal of "the forces of aggression which have been loosed upon the world" as nothing short of "world conquest by Communist imperialism." He warned that, unless this aggression is halted, the people of this country will lose "the full and rich life they have with God's help built for themselves and their children." He called on:

All citizens to unite in placing foremost "in thought and action" the needs of their country in readying its full moral and material strength.

Farmers, industrial workers and businessmen to make a "mighty production effort," to eliminate waste and inefficiency and subordinate lesser interests to the common good.

Every person and every community to make whatever sacrifices may be necessary.

State and local officials to cooperate with the military and civilian defense agencies.

All citizens to "be loyal to the principles upon which our Nation is founded, to keep faith with our friends and allies, and to be firm in our devotion to the peaceful purposes for which the United Nations was founded."

In the name of the emergency but actually under provisions of the Defense Production Act, the first move toward controls was made last night when automobile prices were ordered rolled back to December 1 levels. The Economic Stabilization Agency said it hoped "self restraint" by other industries would obviate further controls at this time.

Charles E. Wilson, who will become mobilization czar, is a native of New York City who began his business career as a $3 a week messenger for a small electrical firm. When the firm was absorbed by General Electric, he went with the big firm and rose through sales and management jobs to vice president and then president. During World War II he served as vice chairman of the War Production Board from 1942 to 1944, when he resigned after a dispute with Chairman Donald M. Nelson. Once before, in 1933, he served the Government as Deputy Recovery Administrator under NRA.

MacArthur 'Man of Year'

Text of Proclamation of Emergency

Following is the text of President Truman's proclamation declaring existence of a national emergency:

WHEREAS recent events in Korea and elsewhere constitute a grave threat to the peace of the world and imperil the efforts of this country and those of the United Nations to prevent aggression and armed conflict; and

Whereas world conquest by Communist imperialism is the goal of the forces of aggression that have been loosed upon the world; and

Whereas, if the goal of Communist imperialism were to be achieved, the people of this country would no longer enjoy the full and rich life they have, with God's help built for themselves and their children; they would no longer enjoy the blessings of the freedom of worshiping as they severally choose, the freedom of reading and listening to what they choose, the right of free speech including the right to criticize their Government, the right to choose those who conduct their government, the right to engage freely in their own business enterprises, and the many other freedoms and rights which are a part of our way of life; and

Whereas the increasing menace of the forces of Communist aggression requires that the national defense of the United States be strengthened as speedily as possible:

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Harry S. Truman, President of the United States of America, do proclaim the existence of a national emergency, which requires that the military, naval, air, and civilian defenses of this country be strengthened as speedily as possible to the end that we may be able to repel any and all threats against our national security and to fulfill our responsibilities in the efforts being made through the United Nations and otherwise to bring about lasting peace.

I summon all citizens to make a united effort for the security and well-being of our beloved country and to place its needs foremost in thought and action that the full moral and material strength of the Nation may be readied for the dangers which threaten us.

I summon our farmers, our workers in industry, and our businessmen to make a mighty production effort to meet the defense requirements of the Nation and to this end to eliminate all waste and inefficiency and to subordinate all lesser interests to the common good.

I SUMMON every person and every community to make, with a spirit of neighborliness, whatever sacrifices are necessary for the welfare of the Nation.

I summon all State and local leaders and officials to cooperate fully with the military and civilian defense agencies of the United States in the national defense program.

I summon all citizens to be loyal to the principles upon which our Nation is founded, to keep faith with our friends and allies, and to be firm in our devotion to the peaceful purposes for which the United Nations was founded.

I am confident that we will meet the dangers that confront us with courage and determination, strong in the faith that we can thereby "secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity."

IN WITNESS whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington, this 16th day of December in the year of Our Lord 1950, and of the independence of the United States of America the 175th. (Seal)

Air Academy Plan Is Scuttled by House Committee

By the United Press

A proposed air academy comparable to West Point and Annapolis was scuttled yesterday by the House Armed Services Committee.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) said the committee wrote into a pending public works bill a specific prohibition against construction of the academy at this time.

The committee feels, he said, that this is the kind of project which must be deferred until after the present defense emergency.

Vinson said his committee also voted to bar use of $800,000, provided in an emergency defense appropriation passed by the House Friday, for plans for an Air Force medical center. The center would have been comparable to the Navy's medical center at Bethesda, Md.

Senate Committee Ups Corporation Income Tax to 47 Percent

The Senate Finance Committee voted yesterday to boost existing corporation income taxes from 45 to 47 percent under the House-approved excess profits tax bill.

This, coupled with earlier committee action softening other terms of the bill, was estimated to produce the net effect of increasing its first-year revenues by 150 million dollars.

Estimates of income from the measure as it left the House varied from $2,900,000,000 to $3,400,000,000.

Senate Committee action left it still far short of four billion dollars President Truman asked Congress to levy on "abnormal" earnings of corporations since the Korean outbreak to help finance defense costs.

The committee left the normal income tax at the present 25 percent, but it boosted the surtax from 20 to 22 percent.

The new tax on excess profits was left at the House-approved 75 percent of earnings in excess of 85 percent of the average income for a corporation's three best years from 1946 through 1949.

Chairman George (D., Ga.) said the committee will put finishing touches to the measure Monday, and he expects it to be called up for Senate debate Tuesday.

Senator Taft (R., Ohio), a committee member, told a reporter the amendments had made it "a far better bill." He said he sees no reason why the can't agree on send it to the Friday.

All the new tax load would be retroactive to earnings since last July 1.

In softening the bill's terms, the committee wrote in a provision guaranteeing that the combined tax could not take away more than 60 percent of any firm's net earnings. The House had proposed a 67 percent "ceiling."

Colin F. Stam, tax adviser to the committee, told reporters he and his staff were instructed by the group to prepare for consideration Monday a new provision to provide relief for industries that have a history of "feast or famine revenues—they operate at a loss for a period of years, then have a spurt of high earnings."

Another liberalizing amendment approved yesterday, he said, would allow telegraph companies enough exemptions from the Federal taxes to assure them a return of 7 percent of their total assets, the same as telephones, instead of 5 percent proposed by the House. The group had proposed Friday that the figure be upped to 6 percent.

Congress Set to Meet On New Year's Day

The eighty-first Congress looked over the "must" program of its lame duck session yesterday and decided it can't finish by Christmas.

And its leaders outlined plans for a New Year's Day session to act on an excess profits tax bill, one of the five so-called major measures on the docket of the session that started November 27 and must end not later than noon, January 3.

The eighty-second Congress takes over at noon January 3, and all legislation not passed at that time dies automatically.

House Clears 5 'Musts'

All five "must" bills already have cleared the House, which will spend the coming week debating civil defense legislation, a bill to give servicemen $10,000 in free Government life insurance, and some miscellaneous measures.

The Senate hopes to dispose of an emergency $17,809,304,424 defense appropriation bill and an excess profits tax bill during the week.

Both bills have passed the House.

Another measure passed by both the House and the Senate, authorizing 38 million dollars in drought aid to Yugoslavia, is ready to go through both branches again to adjust differences between differing versions. No trouble is sighted for the compromise bill.

Rent Control Set

Legislation extending the Federal rent control program for 90 days beyond December 31 has cleared Capitol Hill.

The fifth proposal which Administration leaders had hoped would win approval at this session is hopelessly snagged in the Senate. Already passed by the House, it provides, in two separate bills, for admission of Hawaii and Alaska to Statehood.

Both Senate and House plan to quit next Friday until December 26.

With an understanding that there will be no business transacted during Christmas Week, The House will meet again on December 28, again with a "no business" understanding.

The date for final, or sine die, adjournment of the eighty-first Congress isn't definite, but congressional leaders are aiming at January 1.

Prices Frozen on New Cars

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

AT DECEMBER 1 LEVEL—Alan Valentine (right), director of economic stabilization, yesterday signed the order freezing the prices on new automobiles at the level of the first of this month. Francis P. Whitehair, general counsel of the Economic Stabilization Agency, witnesses the signing. The action blocks price boosts on 1951 models of Ford and General Motors cars announced earlier in the month

New Car Prices Rolled Back

next Wednesday, when Federal Wage Stabilizer Cyrus S. Ching meets here with auto union and management officials.

The auto order provides that the price of each car model on December 1 shall be the ceiling price. If new models have been brought out since that date, the ceiling will be the December 1 price of the comparable 1950 model.

Manufacturers also are prohibited from omitting any accessories they normally supplied with their cars on December 1.

In addition, it will be unlawful to make a customer accept, as a condition of sale, accessories which were not standard on December 1.

Tie-in agreements, commissions, service charges and any other extras not normally charged on December 1 also are illegal.

In a joint statement, Valentine and DiSalle expressed "regret" that a voluntary agreement could not be reached within the industry to make the order unnecessary.

"We sincerely hope that self-restraint by various other industries will make it possible to avoid similar steps in their cases," they said.

Shirley Temple Is Wed to Son of Utilities Chief

DEL MONTE, Calif., Dec. 16 (AP).—Movie star Shirley Temple was married here today to Charles Black, son of a millionaire utilities company president, members of the family announced.

Mrs. James B. Black, mother of the bridegroom, confirmed that the wedding occurred at 4:30 p. m. today in Del Monte. The 22-year-old star divorced her first husband, John Agar, a year ago this month. Her decree became final December 6.

The couple originally met in Honolulu, where Black, 30, was working for the Hawaiian Pineapple Co. Black, a wartime naval officer, is the son of James B. Black, president of the giant Pacific Gas and Electric Co. of San Francisco.

Just 10 days ago, Shirley publicly declared she had no plans to marry again.

Former Ku Klux Leader Denied Freedom Writ

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 16 (AP).—D. C. Stephenson, 56, former grand dragon of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan, today was denied his freedom on a writ of habeas corpus, filed after he was arrested in a Minneapolis suburb November 15, as a parole violator.

Gov. Luther W. Youngdahl of Minnesota had ordered Stephenson sent back to Indiana, where he was to be returned to the State prison to continue a life term for the murder of Madge Oberholtzer, Statehouse worker, in 1925.

The application for the writ blocked his immediate removal. The writ was granted by District Judge Frank E. Reed, who today quashed it, but stayed the action for 10 days to permit Stephenson to appeal to the Minnesota Supreme Court. His attorneys have said they will appeal to the United States Supreme Court, if necessary, in an attempt to free their client.

Hamhung Given Up In New U.N. Pullback

tempt to trap the United States Tenth Corps inland that they must regroup and reorganize."

Cut-Off Platoons Got Out

A week ago, members of the United States First Marine and Seventh Infantry Divisions reached the Hungnam beachhead after an epochal fighting retreat to escape encircling Reds trying to block their withdrawal from the Changjin Reservoir area.

Associated Press Correspondent Stan Swinton, who with Lambert was covering the beachhead, reported that survivors from two platoons of the Third Division who had been surrounded by the Chinese Friday had now reached safety.

Just as the bridges and strategic buildings of Hamhung were demolished, so were the American supply dumps that Tenth Corps forces had to leave behind.

Fires from the burning equipment glowed across the coastal plain Saturday night. A great column of smoke rose above Hamhung. Landing lights twinkled at a new airstrip just built by American engineers inside the defense perimeter.

A Tenth Corps spokesman said the situation at Hungnam was "not disastrous."

While the United States Tenth Corps pullback in northeastern Korea thus proceeded according to plan, United Nations forces in western Korea still waited and wondered when and where the next Chinese Red blow would fall there.

There was no actual fighting front in the west. South Korean units clashed now and then with well-organized bands of North Korean guerillas, but the United States Eighth Army was not firing a shot.

Officially, no Chinese had crossed south of the thirty-eighth parellel, arbitrary line which for five years divided Red North and South Korea until the Reds invaded the south last June 25.

General MacArthur's Tokyo headquarters, however, reported a buildup of enemy strength, presumably Chinese, just north of the parallel.

Northwest of Kaesong, a South Korean town just below the parallel, 300 to 400 troops in blue and brown uniforms were attacked by Allied planes as they crossed the Yesong River.

A similar band in the same type of uniforms was strafed along a road near Onjong, in north-central Korea 85 miles north of the parallel.

Other bands of 150 each were noted moving southwest as near as 10 to 20 miles north of the para- as 10 to 20 miles north of the parallel in mid-Korea.

Southbound refugees continued to clog the snowy roads.

The only Allied combat units in the Eighth Army identified by the headquarters summary late Saturday were the British Twenty-seventh Commonwealth Brigade and Twenty-ninth Independent Infantry Brigade. Both were listed merely as "continuing patrolling and blocking tasks in their area."

Air Activity Curtailed

Lieut. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, Far East Air Force commander, announced that since November 25 his fliers had killed or wounded 33,000 Chinese Reds in Korea.

This was the equivalent of four divisions, or one-seventh of the Chinese frontline strength.

Snow flurries and low clouds curtailed air operations Saturday.

A few Mustang pilots got through to strafe targets near Wonsan. That east coast port, 50 air miles south of Hungnam, was abandoned by the Allies last week.

Maj. Gen. Earle E. Partridge, commander of the United States Fifth Air Force, said Russian-built jet fighter planes had made 72 sorties over Korea between December 9 and 15. A sortie is one flight by one plane. The number of sorties is not indicative of the number of jet planes in the Red air force, since in that period each plane could be expected to make several sorties.

In nine dogfights between Red jets on one hand and American jets and B-29s on the other, Partridge said, four Russian-made jets were damaged.

Aid Goods for Formosa

TAIPEI, Formosa, Dec. 16 (AP). C. C. Wang, secretery-general of the Council for United States Aid, today said Marshall aid goods valued at 10 million dollars will arrive in Formosa within the next few weeks.

Shrinking Beachhead Pressed

Associated Press Wirephoto Map

100,000 REDS—Estimates indicate at least that many enemy troops (arrows) are perched in the hills around Hungnam while U. N. artillery and warships plaster them with gunfire. Allied forces withdrew further yesterday into the dwindling beachhead (sawtooth line)

Differentiation Between Reds Asked

The Chinese Embassy formally asked the American people to differentiate between "Red" and "Communist" Chinese who are "tools of the Kremlin" and those who remain friendly to the American people.

The Nationalists—recognized by the United States as the only legal government of China—issued a statement to the press revealing that their embassy here has received "numerous reports from Chinese nationals residing in various parts of the United States that they have been subjected to uncivil remarks and maltreated in other ways and that some of their shops have been stoned by American citizens who apparently sought to vent their feelings in protest against the Chinese Communist aggression in Korea."

These manifestations, the embassy said, "however natural and excusable, are unfortunate and regrettable because the Chinese residents in this hospitable country have been known as a whole to be law-abiding and anti-Communist and to cherish the American way of life."

Army Finance Center Moving to Indiana

The Army Finance Center is being moved from St. Louis to Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., to make way for reopening of a small arms plant now housing the finance center.

An Army spokesman who disclosed this yesterday said the move will be made gradually and probably will not be completed for about a year.

2 U. S. Priests Protest as S. Koreans Kill Prisoners by Hundreds

By Peter Kalischer

SEOUL, Korea, Dec. 16. (U.P.)—Two Catholic priests, seeking to block the mass execution of political prisoners scheduled for Sunday, failed tonight in efforts to see President Syngman Rhee.

At least 800 persons described as convicted Communist collaborators, saboteurs and murderers have been executed with rifles and machineguns in the past five days. Many were women. Some were children.

The priests, Father Patrick O'Connor of the Catholic News Agency of Washington, D. C., and Father George Carroll of the Mary Knoll Fathers, also failed to gain satisfaction from Home Ministry officials.

A wave of disgust and anger swept through American and British troops who either have witnessed or heard the firing squads in action in the Seoul area during the last two days. The executions have been going on almost daily since the liberation of Seoul in September.

United States military authorities were reluctant to interfere because it was doubtful if they have authority since the executions are being carried out under sentences imposed by Korean courts against Korean citizens.

It was believed women and children were executed as members of the families of condemned men and that military police shooting them had no authority from government officials.

They were not brought to public notice until American and British units happened to move into an area bordering the execution ground about a mile north of the city. British troops said they would not permit any more mass shootings in their areas.

Friday the Americans and British were horrified upon seeing truckloads of old men, women, youths and several children lined up before open graves and shot down by South Korean military police with rifles and machineguns.

One Ameican, Capt. George Graff, reported he kicked aside the dirt lightly covering one of the bodies and found it still twiching.

Official estimates of the number of political prisoners vary. Gen. Lee Ho, vice chief of martial law headquarters, declined to give the total, saying merely there were "between 500 and 600."

The tempo of executions has risen sharply since the fall of Pyongyang and the threat of a Communist advance on Seoul.

General Lee said the exact number executed is a "military secret" but he admitted that 37 were executed in a snowstorm early Saturday on a hill north of Seoul.

"The prisoners dug their own graves," Lee said, but their families are allowed to claim the bodies afterward."

British troops on "execution hill" outside Seoul were perhaps the most indignant.

Fusillier William Hilder of Trimdom, England, a rear echelon clerk, described how a truckload of prisoners was shot less than 150 feet from the camp where the British were eating their breakfast.

"It was about half past seven in the morning when the first shot rang out," he said. "I jumped out of the office truck and saw some South Koreans in uniform herding the prisoners out of a vehicle parked only a stone's throw from our camp.

"They made them kneel down facing the truck with their backs to some trenches dug some distance away. They were roped together in pairs. I saw two women and two young kiddies aged about 8 and 13 among them.

"The guards led them in batches of 10 into the trenches and then shot them in the back of the head. The women were screaming and the men wailing. About 80 people stood watching including some American soldiers who seemed as angry as we were.

"Some of the guards went around with a machinegun firing bursts into those who didn't die immediately. I walked away when the kiddies were shot. I didn't like to see it.

"Afterward they piled earth on top of the bodies and went away. I went over in the afternoon and there was a foot sticking out of one of the graves."

Fusillier George Barker of Sheffield, England, said one small lad of about 13 kept shouting "GI" but that they shot him just the same.

A British corporal said the executioners planned to come back today to shoot some more but "we were waiting for them this morning."

Wu Dashes Hopes for U. N. Cease-Fire Move, Pledges Effort to 'Advise' Reds to Stop War

LAKE SUCCESS, Dec. 16 (AP)—Red China's Gen. Wu Hsiu-chuan today doomed United Nations efforts to bring about a cease-fire in Korea except on Soviet terms. But he promised that his government would "try to advise" Chinese Communist "volunteers" in Korea to bring the fighting to an early end.

Wu told a news conference in a prepared statement that the cease-fire measures overwhelmingly adopted by the General Assembly two days ago were a "trap of the United States ruling circles."

He indorsed Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky's terms for peace in Korea—the withdrawal of "all foreign troops," leaving the Korean problem to "be solved by the Korean people themselves."

Addressing 100 correspondents, the Chinese Ambassador also demanded that United States forces be withdrawn from Formosa and demanded a place for Red China in the United Nations. He did not specifically link these latter demands to the negotiations for peace in Korea.

Near the end of his 20-minute statement, Wu declared "we are also willing to try to advise the Chinese volunteers to bring to an early conclusion the military operations which they have been forced to undertake together with the Korean people's army in their resistance against the United States armed forces of aggression."

Wu's statement dashed any lingering hopes among U. N. delegations that the three-man cease-fire committee set up by the Assembly would make progress with the Red Chinese delegation here.

The committee is made up of Assembly President Nasrollah Entezam, Canadian Foreign Minister Lester B. Pearson and Chief Indian Delegate Sir Benegal Rau. Entezam conferred with Wu after he addressed the newsmen.

Informed sources said the cease-fire committee got nowhere in their first contact with the Chinese last night.

Shortly after the news conference, the U. N. said Wu and the entire Chinese Communist delegation would return to Peiping Tuesday. This leaves only two days for direct contacts with U. N. mediators here.

Despite Wu's strong statement, one of the mediators indicated there still was hope for the negotiations. He said the committee is only beginning its work.

Aide Translates Speech

The Chinese delegate read his statement in Chinese in loud, high-pitched tones. An aide of the general translated the speech into English at intervals.

Wu declared that the "peace-loving people of the whole world are demanding that the Korean problem be solved peacefully."

"Yet," he continued, "the Anglo-American bloc insists to maintain its aggressive forces and its aggressive actions in Korea, to continue its invasion and occupation of China's Taiwan (Formosa) and to carry out even more persistently its aggressive and war policy against the whole world.

"We have only to look for proof in the statement of President Truman which threatened to use the atomic bomb, in the joint communique of President Truman and Prime Minister Attlee (in their recent Washington conference) and in the proclamation of a state of emergency by the United States Government."

He asserted that the "real intention" of the U. N. cease-fire proposal "is to demand that the Korean people's army and the Chinese volunteers tie their own hands so that the United States armed forces of aggression may continue their aggression in Korea."

"The real intention," he went on, "is to demand that Taiwan be kept under the invasion and occupation of the United States armed forces. It is to demand that Japanese militarism be revived again by MacArthur. It is to demand that the American people be driven at will by the United States ruling circles into the abyss of war.

"Such a trap was set many times in China by Chiang Kai-shek with the help of General (George C.) Marshall. Hence, it is not unfamiliar to the Chinese people. We wish to unmask such a trap of the United States ruling circles to the peace loving people of the whole world."

Wu complained bitterly that his delegation has not had an opportunity to address the U. N.'s political and security committee yet on Red charges of American aggression against China. Discussion of this Soviet-sponsored item was postponed by the committee so that it could take up the Korean question. He said the postponement was brought about by the "manipulation of the United States Government."

Wu distributed a copy of the speech he had prepared for the political committee. It repeated Vishinsky's oft-voiced charges of American aggression against China.

In his news conference, Wu declared that the United States "has obstinately carried on a policy of wanton intervention in China's internal affairs," and has made "enemies of the 475,000,000 people of the people's republic of China."

Pan-American Parley Called

made formally at the regular meeting of the council on Wednesday.

In its announcement the State Department said:

"What is at stake in the present situation, with respect to this inter-American community of ours, is the survival of all that it stands for in the world."

Assistant Secretary Miller said President Truman is extremely anxious that the conference be held, for these two reasons:

1. "To demonstrate specifically to the other American republics that at this moment, when our interest appears to be elsewhere, we have our own hemisphere relations very much to the fore in our thinking."

2. "As we move into this position we want to have an understanding of each other's point of view about the situation."

Hydroelectric Project Slated for Operation

BOULDER CITY, Nev., Dec. 16 (U.P.)—America's fourth largest hydroelectric power project, which ultimately will turn out enough electricity to supply a city of one million, will go into operation next month at Davis Dam, it was announced today.

The first of five 45,000-kilowatt generators will be placed in service "late in January," Secretary of the Interior Oscar L. Chapman announced through the Bureau of Reclamation regional office here. It will deliver commercial power to Southwest users through the Davis-Parker Dam transmission system.

Cooper Going To Brussels With Acheson

By The Associated Press

Secretary of State Acheson is scheduled to leave for an Atlantic Pact defense meeting at Brussels today amid signs that President Truman is firmly determined to keep him in office despite Republican ouster demands.

One Administration official in position to know said Mr. Truman is "absolutely determined" to stand by Acheson for the reason that Acheson is "serving him exceptionally well." This official said the President considers the attack on Acheson to be an attack on his own foreign policy.

Meanwhile it was learned the group which Acheson will take to the Atlantic Treaty meeting will include a Republican adviser, former Kentucky Senator John Sherman Cooper. Cooper accompanied him to an Atlantic foreign ministers defense meeting earlier this year and has recently been serving as a member of the United States delegation to the United Nations.

The Brussels session will be a brief one devoted to formal approval by the foreign ministers of the 12 Atlantic Treaty nations of plans for creation of a western Europe defense force that would include both American and German units. General Dwight D. Eisenhower is expected to be named supreme commander of this force. Acheson is expected to return to Washington in mid-week.

[Also accompanying Acheson will be Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, jr.; George Perkins, Assistant Secretary of State for European Affairs; General J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, and Henry A. Byroade, director of the State Department's German Affairs Bureau.—Editor's Note.]

Vishinsky, Sailing for Russia, Holds War Is Not Inevitable

NEW YORK, Dec. 16 (U.P.)—Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky sailed for home today, saying he and President Truman agreed on one point, war is not inevitable.

"I have spoken in that sense a long time ago," he told reporters before he sailed aboard the French liner Liberte on his way home after attending the United Nations General Assembly.

Vishinsky said he slept through President Truman's speech last night but later amended his statement to say he was "busy" at the time of the speech.

Told that the President said war is not inevitable, Vishinsky said he agreed and added:

"Our position on that is known. Of course, it depends on the people of the world. Only those who want to make profits or who want world domination want to make war. In my view, these people are not quite normal."

Asked if he would return for the next permanent session of the U. N., the Soviet Foreign Minister said:

"Why do you think I would not come here? You must be a pessimist."

In Vishinsky's cabin at the time of the interview were Gen. Wu Hsiu-chuan of Communist China and representatives of the Soviet delegation to the U. N.

Vishinsky had the Liberte's two-room "Alsace" suite, the rate for which is $1150, but inasmuch as he was occupying the suite alone, the rate was $625.

He issued a formal statement that at the General Assembly meeting "rules and procedure were systematically and flagrantly violated whenever they happened to be inconvenient for the United States delegation."

Hosiery Workers Win 10½-Cent Wage Hike

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 16 (U.P.)—The American Federation of Hosiery Workers (Ind.) today announced a new agreement providing a 10½ cent hourly wage increase for 10,000 full-fashioned hosiery workers in 37 northern United States mills.

The agreement was reached with the Full Fashion Manufacturers of America at a meeting here yesterday under a wage reopening clause in a two-year contract which expires August 31, 1951.

The pact is expected to set a pattern for other hosiery mills operating under independent contract

Britons Reassured On Unity With U.S.

LONDON, Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Prime Minister Attlee announced tonight that he had pledged the British people to fight alongside the United States to preserve the authority of the United Nations.

But he held out hope of "honorable" negotiations with the Chinese Communists "before long" in view of the "improving" U.N. military position in Korea.

Addressing an anxious nation by radio just as President Truman had done the night before, Attlee also said:

1. The war in Korea must not spread, and attempts must be made to reach a live-and-let-live settlement with the Communists;
2. He hopes for a meeting with Russia soon;
3. The atom bomb is in the hands of men who will not use it "lightly or wantonly."

Critical Time

Unlike Truman, Attlee declared no "national emergency" in Britain. Britain already has stringent price and economic controls, universal military conscription and the highest taxes in the world.

His broadcast came on the eve of the proclamation in Brussels of an Atlantic defense force expected to be under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

It came as the Communist press howled at the American declaration of a national emergency as an outright step toward world war. It came as a grave Europe realized the chips are down in conflict—hot or cold—with Russia.

Reporting on his trip to Washington, Attlee said:

"I made it perfectly clear that Britain stands by the United Nations and will fight alongside our American friends in that cause. It was equally clear that, sooner or later, and the sooner the better, there must be negotiation.

Negotiations Anticipated

"The military position in Korea has been improving and we shall, I believe, before long, be in a position to negotiate on honorable terms," Attlee said.

"We and the United States have supported the initiative of the Asiatic States, led by India, to bring hostilities to an end."

Attlee told the British people they knew from experience what it meant to let an aggressor get away with the use of force. Chinese intervention in Korea, he said, has made a dangerous situation more dangerous.

He said Britain believes the Communists in Russia and China have the right to manage their own affairs—but the principle also applies to the Koreans, the Indo-Chinese and the Tibetans. And he said he wanted to see a strong Europe, so communism is not "forced on us here."

Jittery About Bomb

Attlee pledged the nation would not "fall into the trap" of spending so much on rearmament that her economy crashed, but he warned Britons, who now can buy just 14 cents worth of meat a week, that soon they will have even fewer of their everyday needs.

This congested island, a perfect target, is more jittery about the atom bomb than any other single matter. But he said:

There is no ground whatever for any apprehension that this weapon would be used lightly or wantonly, but the fact that this weapon exists and that all know the terrible consequences which would result from its use, is a powerful deterrent to those who might think of breaking the peace of the world."

Two Washington residents have arrived in Tokyo to work with the American Red Cross.

They are Robert N. Caldwell, jr., of 2430 39th pl. nw., and Miss Catherine Agnes Hasson, whose Washington home was at 2122 Decatur pl. nw.

Caldwell is a graduate of McKinley High School and Columbus University School of Law, where he received his master of law degree. He worked for the Bureau of the Census, War Assets Administration, Civil Service Commission and the Federal Bureau of Investigation before his Red Cross assignment.

Miss Hasson is a graduate of the Immaculate Conception Academy and the Emergency Hospital School of Nursing. She served with the U. S. Army Nurse Corps in this country and in Europe during World War II.

British 'Brutal' With Consuls, Poles Charge

WARSAW, Poland, Dec. 16 (AP).—The Polish government today released the text of a note informing Britain it would recall all Polish consular officials from Germany's British zone, on the ground that the British took away their privileges.

The note, which was handed to British Ambassador Sir Charles Bateman here last Wednesday, charged that:

British authorities broke into Hamburg consulate December 11, and evicted consulate employes, then warned all Polish consulates their premises would be required for occupation forces.

The note added that Poland was recalling her consular employes, because she was "unwilling to tolerate brutality and terror by British authorities."

(A British spokesman at Bonn said today that the unjustified accusations in the Polish note were designed to conceal the real reason the consuls were leaving Germany.

(He pointed out that about a month ago occupation facilities were withdrawn from Polish and Czech consulates in West Germany because they had refused to become accredited to the Allied high commission. The spokesman said that the Polish charges of brutality were untrue.)

Visitors Barred From TVA Works

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 16 (AP).—The Tennessee Valley Authority today announced that TVA installations will be closed to visitors because of the national emergency.

A TVA spokesman said the action, effective immediately, included power houses, switch yards, chemical plants, steam electric stations and sites where defense projects are under construction.

Traffic on highways over dams will be permitted for the time being, it was reported. During World War II, TVA's dams and powerhouses were closed from June 27, 1940, to September 1, 1945.

State Documents Show Roosevelt Balked Soviet Proposal for Pacific Pact in 1934

By the United Press

President Roosevelt repeatedly turned down Russian proposals for a Soviet-American nonaggression pact in 1934, diplomatic papers showed yesterday.

Maxim M. Litvinov, then Soviet Foreign Minister, wanted a pact with the United States alone. When Mr. Roosevelt refused this, Litvinov sought to extend the pact to all Pacific powers except China. President Roosevelt turned that down, too.

The behind-the-scenes negotiations are recounted in State Department papers just made public. The State Department published 848 pages of diplomatic notes and memoranda dealing with the Far Eastern crisis in 1934.

At that time, Japan was the aggressor, and Russia—who had been licked by the Japanese once—sought an anti-Japanese alliance.

Words Now Strange

Litvinov, in words that now sound strange in view of the latest aggression in Korea, said the only way to stop the 1934 aggression was by joint action of all the powers interested in the Pacific.

William C. Bullitt, then American Ambassador in Moscow, reported on March 13, 1934, that the Soviet Foreign Office again had raised the possibility of a Soviet-American non-aggression pact. Bullitt's dispatch referred to discussions on the pact held earlier by Litvinov and Roosevelt in Washington.

Litvinov had been in Washington getting American recognition of the Communist government in Moscow. But he got a cold shoulder on the pact idea.

Bullitt said that when the Soviet Foreign Office raised the point on March 15, 1934, he replied that Roosevelt had not changed his mind.

Cordell Hull, then Secretary of State, confirmed this view in a message to Moscow on March 17, 1934, when he said: "He (Roosevelt) views with disfavor the idea of any nonaggression pact restricted to less than the whole group of powers that have interests in the Pacific."

Litvinov then proposed a general Pacific pact, but excluding China on grounds that China could not be included without raising the question of recognizing Japan's conquest of Manchuria. The United States again turned down this idea, saying that it could not leave China out of any such pact.

"Buck-Passing" Hinted

Litvinov then had this to say about a possible Pacific pact with Japan invited to join:

"There are two ways to approach such a pact—

"(1) In the hope that such a pact may be concluded;

"(2) In the hope that such a pact may be proposed and rejected by the Japanese."

The papers reveal that on May 13, 1934, Litvinov told Bullitt:

"It is my impression, and I find the impression general in Europe, that the United States and Great Britain are engaged in tossing the ball of responsibility in the Far East back and forth between them, each one hoping that the other will take the lead.

"So long as that remains the case, the Japanese will be free to do what they want. It is still my belief that the only effective method of restraining the Japanese is to arrange at once joint action by all powers having interest in the Pacific."

The pact idea never got anywhere, and it was not until the Russian - American - British Yalta agreement on February 11, 1945, that Russia signed a pact promising to go to war against Japan.

Sharp Cuts Seen For ECA Nations In Next Quarter

PARIS, Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Sharp cuts in Marshall Plan aid for virtually all European countries were forecast today by informed quarters here, who also predicted Sweden would be the next to follow Britain's lead and suspend participation.

Sweden does not receive direct aid. It gets "conditional aid" to build up markets and improve credit.

Experts now surveying the economic position of each of the remainin Marshall Plan countries are expected to recommend cuts in almost all allocations for the third fiscal quarter beginning in January.

Their conclusion, informed quarters said, would be based not on an arbitrary campaign of "dollar-pinching," but a general improvement in the recovery of the Marshall aid nations, collectively and individually.

The basis for the expected cutback they said, would be the enormously improved credit position of many of the nations and their increased exports over imports.

Cherokee Wins Plea to Rejoin 'Dirty' Marines

INGLEWOOD, Calif., Dec. 16 (AP).—A Cherokee Indian mother today wrote the letter that will put her Marine sergeant son back where he wants to be—in the thick of the Korea fight leading his "dirty, stinking and loyal platoon."

T/Sergt. Robert J. Ward, 25, a full-blooded Cherokee, was in the bloody fighting until recently. Then his mother wrote Gen. Clifton B. Cates, commandant of the Marine Corps, that her son was the last of her boys—the other two were killed in World War II. She claimed the right to have her last surviving son put in a noncombat zone.

The mother is Mrs. Glenn Peterson, wife of an aircraft machinist. She is not immediately available for verification, but Sergeant Ward's father is believed dead.

Orders releasing Sergt. Ward to noncombatant duty were sent to him. But he tucked them in his hip pocket and continued leading his platoon up one bloody hill after another.

Put on Desk Job

It took follow-up orders to get him on a desk job in Tokyo.

From there he wrote his mother this letter:

"I'm no hero, but I also have responsibilities to Little Squaw (his daughter) and Bettye (his wife) and you.

"If these people aren't stopped here on their own ground, we will have to share the thing so many have died to prevent their loved ones from sharing—the sight of death in our own backyard; of women and children being victims of these people.

"I went on the warpath for the right to do my bit to keep our people free and proud and now I'm shackled to a useless job.

"I ask you, my mother, to free me so I can once again be free to help my boys.

"They placed their faith in me and I brought them all back and now someone else leads them and I know they need me.

His Dirty Platoon

"Maybe in a sense I need them, my dirty, stinking and loyal platoon.

"Once I cried before you when I thought I'd lost someone whom I loved very dearly, and once again did I cry when I was told I must leave my men.

"So, I ask you the one thing which your heart does not want to do, release me to fight.

"I pace my room feeling useless, being no good to anyone. I'm no barracks-parade ground Marine—I'm a Cherokee Indian and I'm happiest being miserable with my own people up on those mountains.

"I know you'll understand that your blessings will go with me into whatever the future holds in store for us.

"Write to the commandant and release me—explain to them as only you can that I have a job to do and that you understand."

1951 Israel Aid Need Put at $203,684,577

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Dec. 16 (U.P.).—American Jewry must continue in 1951 to meet the financial costs of increasing resettlement and reconstruction needs in Israel, the national conference of the United Jewish Appeal was told tonight.

These costs were set at $203,684,577, the amount the organization must raise among American Jews next year. The figure exceeds this year's goal by nearly $37,000,000.

Satellite Coal Shortages Hit Kremlin Aim

VIENNA, Austria, Dec. 16 (AP).—Coal shortages—caused partly by miners' opposition to Communist pressure—today appeared to be slowing the ability of Soviet satellites in East Europe to meet the Kremlin's industrial demands.

Informed Western sources here said the opposition of the miners has shown itself in widespread absenteeism, some sitdown strikes and the need for East European governments to offer incentives such as more pay, clothing and better housing.

[West Europe, too, has coal problems, with demand outstripping production in Britain and West Germany, but its annual output is millions of tons greater than that of the East.]

Shortages are reported in Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania and in Poland, the largest coal producer among the satellites.

Communist nations regard industrial statistics as military secrets, but Poland's coal production in 1947 was about 70 million tons—less than that of West Germany alone. The Kremlin's five-year plan for Russia herself was aimed at 250 million tons, in 1950, or just about Britain's output. United States mines turn out double that.

Hungary's No. 1 Communist, Matyas Rakosi, said recently that coal production had gone up "only 13 percent compared with a 36 percent increase in industry."

According to one report, coal production in Czechoslovakia now is less than it was in the prewar year of 1937. Hungary went so far recently as to order a five-percent cut in fuel use in heavy industry.

Son of General Faith Missing in Action

MISSING IN ACTION:
Lieut. Col. Don C. Faith, jr., 32, 3816 49th st. nw.

WOUNDED IN ACTION:
Sergt. 1st class John A. Hodges, 26, 112 Quincy pl. ne.

Two Washington men, one the son of a general, were reported as casualties in Korea action in the Defense Department list released yesterday.

A Seventh Division battalion commander, Lieut. Col. Don C. Faith, jr. was reported missing in action but details were not available, according to his father, Brig. Gen. Don C. Faith, USA (ret.)

A native of Washington, Ind., Colonel Faith received his education in various army camp schools and attended the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service from 1938 to 1941. He joined the Army in June, 1941.

He received his commission after a three-month course in the officer training school at Fort Benning, Ga., in February, 1942, and was assigned to duty with the Eighty-second Airborne Division as a staff officer.

While fighting with the Seventh Division near Seoul, Col. Faith was awarded the Bronze and Silver Star Medals for "gallantry in action," according to his father.

Hodges was slightly wounded on November 30, according to his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth B. Hodges.

Born and educated in Columbus, Ga., Sergt. Hodges enlisted in the Army in 1940. He joined the Twenty-fourth Division when it was activated in October, 1941, and saw action with the division in Dutch New Guinea, Biak and the Philippines during World War II.

Before the Korean war, Sergt. Hodges trained recruits to the Twenty-fourth Division in Japan, where he went in 1948.

$20,000 Price Put on Head of No. 1 Malaya Red

SINGAPORE, Dec. 16 (U.P.).—The Malayan federal government put a price of 60,000 Straits dollars ($20,000 U. S.) on the head of Malaya's No. 1 Communist today and offered hundreds of thousands more in rewards for the capture of other members of the Communist movement's "inner circle."

The announcement came a few hours after British High Commissioner Sir Henry Gurney said the Malayan jungle war must end next year.

The government's Christmas "price list" for Communist leaders either captured or killed offered the 60,000 Straits dollars for the secretary general of the Malayan Communist Party's executive committee, $16,666 each for members of the Politburo, and other sums on down through the organization to $666 each for ordinary members of the party, members of combat squads or "protection corps."

Volunteers, part-time employes and other unpaid categories of Malaya's "antibandit" forces are eligible for rewards.

Hooray for the Last-Minute Shopper!

For half a century (that I know of) people have been urged to do their Christmas shopping early. From every practical point of view, this suggestion makes eminent sense. You get a better choice of merchandise when you shop early, you shop in considerably greater comfort, and there is (I suppose) a certain smug satisfaction in knowing that you yourself are "all set" just when everybody else starts hurrying.

But somehow we Americans, usually sympathetic to logic, are as impervious to the "Shop Early" appeal as a duck's back is to water. And I, for one, think that's a good, healthy sign. After all, who can work up any excitement about Christmas in September? What's the fun of shopping for Christmas gifts unless there's a Santa Claus on every corner, carols are sounding in the air and the streets are crowded with frenzied, good-natured shoppers?

Sometimes, in the stress of the moment, we retailers might be tempted to get out of sorts when the pushing, shoving crowds overwhelm our facilities. But when the doors finally close on Chirstmas Eve, and we crawl home to wearily remove our shoes and relax, we all have a nice, comfortable feeling of having contributed a great deal to a lot of the next morning's universal happiness.

And so I say, "Hooray for the last minute shopper!" To honor him or her, we'll be open every evening until nine this week, except Saturday when we close at six. By that time even the last hanger-back should have finished his Christmas list. And I think you'll agree we will have all earned a rest.

Bullets Rake Saigon In Flare of Terror

SAIGON, Indo-China, Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Machineguns and hand grenades sprayed Saigon's sidewalk cafes, night clubs and Chinatown last night in the worst act of Communist terrorism in the capital in months.

One person was killed and 24 were wounded. In addition, police found the corpses of two anti-Communist Viet Namese natives mysteriously deposited on a street corner.

Police said Viet Minh bands hurled 13 grenades at eight spots during the dinner hour yesterday.

One group, wearing the uniforms of loyal Viet Namese troops, rode a small truck into the Saigon suburb of Dakao, where French troops were quartered.

The driver slowed near a crowded restaurant and the gunmen hurled four grenades and sprayed diners and pedestrians with tommygun fire, killing a young Viet Namese and wounding 11 others, including a French noncommissioned officer and an auxiliary servicewoman.

A passenger car sped through downtown Saigon's market area, its occupants tossing eight grenades, which wounded 10 persons, including a baby.

A woman cyclist threw a grenade into the Cafe de la Paix, a favorite eating place of Americans here, but a quick-witted diner seized the bomb and hurled it across the street into a park. It did not explode.

Police have been alerted for further demonstrations, December 19, the fourth anniversary of the bloody Viet Minh uprising in the northern capital of Hanoi.

Anti-Americanism Seen Spreading in Indo-China

HANOI, Indo-China, Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Anti-Americanism is growing and spreading in Indo-China, among the French and among the non-Communist Viet Namese.

Viet Namese bitterness is being carefully fertilized by Communist propagandists, who use every means to instill distrust of Americans in the minds of the Indo-Chinese.

By cleverly mixed truth and lies, the Communists have convinced well-meaning Viet Namese that the Americans are "aggressors," trying to deprive them of their independence and perpetuate French colonial rule.

Non-Communists have turned against America since our announced policy of all-out aid for the French and for the Bao Dai government. Most Viet Namese nationalists hate the French and regard the emperor as a French puppet.

Many pro-American Viet Namese have said they are becoming increasingly unpopular with their countrymen and have been threatened with death

Viet Namese nationals contend that had the United States supported the Viet Minh government in 1945 when it was a coalition of democratic parties the Reds never would have been able to take it over.

New Peace Law

East Berlin May Behead Warmongers

BERLIN, Dec. 16 (AP).—East Berlin joined the Russian zone of Germany tonight in proclaiming itself ready to imprison or even behead any German who classifies as a Western warmonger.

The Communist-controlled city government announced it also is putting into effect the new "peace" law enacted by the Soviet zone regime.

The action virtually places a new iron curtain on the Russian sector border of the quartered city. It means grave risk for any German supporter of Western defense who dares to cross the Spree River, even if only to shop.

The East Berlin announcement implies discarding a provision of an old four-power pact that even the Russians had been generally eager to observe. This is the agreement of 1945 which guarantees free movement of all citizens within the four sectors of Berlin, subject only to normal police controls.

In many other respects, the Soviets have held their sector of Berlin entirely separate from their Eastern Zone of Germany. The Russians saw to it from time to time that edicts applying to the East Zone were not applied to the east sector of the four-power city.

Editor Maximilian Mueller-Jabusch of the American sector newspaper Der Abend denounced the new law as "an attempt to legalize kidnaping."

(Frankfurt, in the Western Zone, meanwhile received a report from Bucharest that Romainia has adopted a "peace" law similar to that imposed by the Communists in East Germany and previously in Hungary, according to the United Press.

(However, said United Press, Romania and Hungary eliminated the death sentence provided in Soviet Germany for "war mongers." Romania provides prison terms of five to 25 years and confiscation of property, while Hungary has a top penalty of 15 years in prison.)

17 Chetniks on Trial

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Dec. 16 (AP).—Seventeen of Draja Mihailovic's former Chetniks, followers of the executed wartime guerilla leader, went on trial in the Bosnian town of Tuzla today, accused of burning to death the entire population of the Moslem village of Sopotnik, Bosnia, in 1941.

Assassin Gets 18 Years

BEIRUT, Lebanon, Dec. 16 (AP). A Lebanese court convicted Mohammed Ahmed Barazi today of assassinating Gen. Sami Hennawi, exiled Syrian strong man, in Beirut last October 30. He was sentenced to 18 years at hard labor.

German Arms Violate Pacts, Soviet Says

LONDON, Dec. 16 (AP).—Soviet Russia warned today that putting West Germans back in uniform to fight communism would violate Soviet pacts with Britain and France.

Formal protests were handed to the British and French Embassies in Moscow.

The Russian move came only a short time before the meeting Monday in Brussels of the 12 Atlantic pact foreign ministers. They are expected to approve a plan to bring up to 150,000 West German troops into the western Europe defenses.

The Soviet note to Britain declared such a move would violate the Anglo-Russian treaty of alliance of 1942 and the Potsdam agreement of 1945.

Timing Held 'Obvious'

"I think the timing of the note was obvious," said a British Foreign Office spokesman.

Diplomatic sources in Paris said the Russian note to France complained that rearming West Germany would be counter to the 1944 Franco-Soviet pact. This treaty calls for mutual assistance between the two nations against any future German aggression.

While the full text of the Soviet note to Britain had not been received in London, the Foreign Office said it took a similar line to the one sent to France.

A Foreign Office spokesman said the Russian note protested the Atlantic pact move to use German troops would violate articles two and seven of the Anglo-Russian treaty.

Article two binds Britain and Russia "not to enter into any negotiations with the Hitlerite government or any other government in Germany that does not clearly renounce all aggressive intentions and not to negotiate or conclude, except by mutual consent, any armistice or peace treaty with Germany or any other state associated with her in acts of agression in Europe."

Article 7 of Pact

In article Seven, Britain and Russia "undertake not to conclude any alliance and not to take part in any coalition directed against the other high contracting party."

Russia's note to Britain also protested any German rearmament would violate the Potsdam Agreement, reached among the U. S. S. R., the United States and Britain. Under it, the original machinery of occupation of defeated Germany was set up.

The agreement sets out that, among the duties of the occupation control council, was the abolition of all German military organizations "in such manner as permanently to prevent the revival or reorganization of German militarism and Nazism."

'Won't Hurt' to Delay Dispersal 30 Days, House 'Stumbling Block,' Whittington Says

The plan to disperse part of the Government into Maryland and Virginia as a precaution against possible enemy attack on Washington appears to be dead for this session of Congress.

Chief stumbling block is Chairman Whittington (D., Miss.) of the House Public Works Committee. He said yesterday that "if it takes two years to build those new buildings, then it won't hurt to take another 30 days to mature the plans so we'll know what it's all about."

Whittington won't be around in January, when the next Congress meets, however. He did not stand for reelection and yesterday was busy packing up to go home.

The Senate Public Works subcommittee, headed by Senator Holland (D., Fla.), will continue hearings at 10 a. m. Monday and there appears some chance the bill will at least come out of the Senate Committee. Monday's witnesses will be representatives of the Maryland Planning Commission and the Regional Development Council of America.

Holland has received the text of proposed amendments submitted by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. One amendment calls for allocating to the commission $380,000 so the planners can coordinate all plans in the dispersal area, 20 miles from the White House.

Whittington yesterday told a reporter he doubted if there is any "probability" of House committee approval at this session.

His own objections to the measure were: No details have been furnished the committee on exact highways to be used, built or rebuilt.

No plans are available for meeting housing, school or other related needs;

It is not at all clear that the A-bomb menace calls for going as far out as 20 miles.

No exact lists of what agencies or parts of agencies to be dispersed have been furnished by the Administration.

But, he added, the committee "feels the principle of dispersal is sound." It merely "wants a more thorough consideration of the mechanics of doing the job."

Truman Plane Goal Held 'Impossible'

EAST HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 16 (U.P.)—The president of United Aircraft Corp. said today that President Truman's goal of increasing aircraft production fivefold within one year is "impossible."

H. M. Horner said that the best the aircraft industry can do is to triple production in the next year.

Tells Committee

Radar Plans Are Confided By Finletter

By The Associated Press

Secretary of the Air Force Finletter gave a report on the Nation's "radar screen" yesterday to a closed-door special session of the House Armed Services Committee.

The Air Force is asking the committee to authorize immediately the additional expenditure of $66,897,000 to speed work on the partially completed, multi-million dollar system of radar stations to warn of approaching planes.

The money itself is contained in the $16,844,000,000 second rearmament budget request passed by the House Friday.

Usually, authorization for military expenditure is sought from the committee before the would-be spender tackles the Appropriations Committee.

This time, however, the Appropriations Committee approved a huge public works bill, of which the radar screen item is a part, before the Armed Services Committee had completed the authorization. However, the authorization is assured.

into two parts, one to come before and the other to follow a proclamation by the President of a national emergency for civil defense.

This proclamation would be separate from the national emergency declared yesterday by the President. It would come only if and when an enemy attack takes place or when the President considers such an attack imminent.

Prior to the emergency, Caldwell and his staff would do all the national planning, map the program, coordinate what the States (and, through the States, the cities) are doing, set up national standards for such things as warning systems and communications and train volunteers and paid workers at a new staff college and several new civil defense schools.

The bill would grant a blanket advance approval by Congress of compacts among the States for mutual civil defense aid. Caldwell could check on these compacts, but his approval would not be required, a change from the Administration draft of the bill.

Duties Outlined

The President could order any part of the Federal Government to provide men and resources to help a stricken area. The administrator would run the relief job, dole out funds to help the injured and hire practically anyone to aid in the job. Immunity from suit would be provided for civil defense workers trying to comply with the law. This would mean a worker could not be sued, for example, by landowners if he ordered a city block dynamited to prevent extension of a fire after a bombing raid.

The national office would stockpile medical supplies and buy air raid warning systems for the cities.

There is no money authorization in the bill, but it was generally agreed that the Administration's idea of a three-year, three billion dollar program will be set in motion. It probably will be speeded up once it gets rolling.

Money Details

Of the money (to be voted later) the States and local governments would have to put up 200 million dollars for hiring local personnel and supplying equipment to wardens and other volunteers. The Federal and local governments would split the cost of 200 million dollars worth of specialized equipment for fighting fires and other disasters accompanying any attack.

Cost of building shelters, estimated at $2¼ billion, would be split 50-50. The Senate version includes authorization for the RFC to lend up to $250 million for construction of combination air raid shelters and parking garages or subways. Many cities, but not Washington, have advanced such plans.

The Federal Government would put up $400 million to stockpile medical and engineer supplies—blood plasma and bulldozers, for example. It would also provide all the $32 million estimated necessary to set up a communication net to link the cities to the Air Force air raid warning system.

Caldwell would be paid $17,500, his assistant $16,000, and 22 jobs in the $11,200-to-$14,000 range would be authorized.

150 CAP Planes to Aid Philadelphia in 'Disaster'

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 16 (U.P.) More than 150 privately owned aircraft will take part Sunday in the first mass atomic "disaster" demonstration of its type in the United States, civil defense officials announced today.

The civil air patrol pilots and ground personnel, numbering more than 800 men and women, will bring medical aid to Philadelphia and evacuate "casualties" after three hypothetical atom bombs are dropped by the "enemy" at strategic locations in the city.

Reds' Internment Urged

MADISON, Wis., Dec. 16 (U.P.)—Gov. Oscar Rennebohm said today that all registered Communists should be interned "to prevent the growth of our already too-large fifth column." Rennebohm, a Republican, retires from office January 1.

D. C. 'Headed Right' in Defense

District civil defense officials had a chance yesterday to judge their progress from a check list of actions recommended by the Federal Civil Defense Administration.

Answers given to the 104 questions by Acting Civil Defense Director John E. Fondahl indicate:

1. The District is moving in the direction Federal officials think it should.

2. On the operational level it hasn't moved very far.

The general situation, Fondahl said, is somewhat similar to that of a coaching staff that has worked out some plays but doesn't yet have a team.

Most top-level key jobs have been filled, Fondahl said, although a permanent director is still to be named. But most of the thousands of volunteers required to do the work of civil defense haven't been recruited. Those that have signed up haven't been trained.

One question asked if programs had been started to train volunteer police and fire fighting units. Fondahl could answer that both had been authorized, but training hadn't started. The first training class for police auxiliaries is expected to begin the first of the year, he said.

Chief Warden Max C. Schwartz said 5000 persons have signed up as wardens. They have been given general instructions, but no detailed training. Schwartz said he needs a total of 60,000 wardens.

Fondahl said the District is making surveys—as the check list suggested—of bombproof structures, transportation facilities, engineering equipment and other needs. But most of the studies are in a preliminary stage.

Contracts are still to be let for the first air raid warning horns and radio equipment to keep in touch with nearby areas. Until the horns are obtained, the city will use Fire Department sirens.

Tydings Charges Fraud in Campaign by Butler, Who Denies All

Senator Tydings (D., Md.) charged yesterday that his victorious Republican opponent, John Marshall Butler, had "wilfully and deliberately printed and used false and deceiving statements," in the November campaign.

To which Butler retorted that Tyding's letter "appears to be the cry of a poor loser."

Tydings, defeated after 23 years in the Senate, wrote Chairman Gillette (D., Iowa) of the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee, to submit "certain facts and occurances" in the campaign.

The senator listed what he called four cases as a "few of the instances where totally false and fraudulent matter was used by or with the knowledge and approval of my opponent."

Refer to Paid Ads

Two of the instances referred to paid newspaper advertisements which charged that the Republican counsel on the Tydings committee which investigated Communist charges of Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) was "never allowed to question a witness." Tydings called the statement "totally untrue" and submitted part of the committee's printed record to show that the counsel, Robert Morris, "examined numerous witnesses without restraint." This was the case both in open and closed hearings, the senator said.

The third "case" referred to a four-page tabloid circulated just before the election. The paper was marked as authorized by Edward B. Freeman, chairman of "The Young Democrats for Butler" group. But Tydings said it was printed and distributed without Freeman's "knowledge, permission or consent."

The fourth "case" was the much-publicized photograph of Tydings and Earl Browder, the Communist leader. The photos were pasted together to make it appear they had "actually been photographed together in close conference," Tydings stated, while there "never was any such picture taken of Browder and me." He called the photo a "fake."

Cites Previous Cases

The Senator recalled that while he has been in the Senate seats were denied both to Senator-elect Vare of Pennsylvania and Smith of Illinois because of money frauds in their campains.

"By the same logic," he said, "I believe that a candidate for the Senate should be barred from service there if he has knowingly and deliberately made false statements in his campaign or used scurrilous and untrue printed matter calculated to deceive the electorate; or if such totally false statements or material were issued by other persons in his behalf, with his knowledge and consent."

The Senator said there is difficulty of obtaining "competent men for service in the public life because of the smears they must expect—quite often deliberate, calculated and totally untrue." He said he was submitting the material in the hope it "may be helpful in the formulation of a proper law to deal adequately with such practices in the future." He made no direct reference to a possible formal contest of Butler's right to the Senate seat when the new Congress meets on January 3.

"Nothing New In It"

Butler's statement said that he had not seen Tydings' letter "but from what I hear there is nothing new in it.

"The matters referred to were all debated and discussed thoroughly during the campaign and the voters of Maryland have rendered their most decisive vote against Mr. Tydings.

"The campaign literature of my opponent contained false, fraudulent and misleading statements as shown clearly during the campaign by correspondence with J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

"If there is to be an investigation by the Senate of campaign literature in a political contest, a broad field of inquiry will be opened that will cover the entire country and occupy the attention of the Senate for a considerable period.

"However, with the world in its present global unrest, I believe the members of Congress have more important issues to turn their minds to than a rehash of the recent political campaigns."

"The letter appears to be the cry of a poor loser."

Mails Normal By Monday

general public in the mailing of Christmas packages."

He told a press conference the postal service wasn't affected nearly so much as people thought, adding that the war effort was impeded more than the mails.

As soon as news of the lifting spread, Washington area postoffices reported major pickup in their activities. Around the city, substations' reports varied—Kalorama (rd.) Station officials said lines there were 10 deep, the Columbia Heights Station experienced just a "little more" business than a normal pre-Christmas Saturday.

The Railway Express Agency last night reported it had begun to accept shipments, except perishables, "subject to delay." The embargo on perishable goods will be lifted at 12:01 a. m. Monday. No shipments via Railway Express are being accepted for Chicago, however.

The embargo here produced one startling statistic: In the 24 hours before it was lifted, there was a 1000-percent increase in air parcel post in Washington.

Two thousand sacks of air parcel post had accumulated when Donaldson reactivated rail parcel post. Twelve hours later, between 1000 and 1500 sacks were still to be moved.

U. S. Pushes Rail Peace As Yardmen Come Back

The Government yesterday pressed hard for a peaceful solution of the months-long railroad dispute as most of the 10,000 trainmen staging a wildcat strike heeded President Truman's return-to-work plea.

The back-to-work movement began here at 2:30 a. m. and soon fanned out to all but two of the 13 major rail centers where trainmen had been reporting "sick." By evening yesterday, the wildcat strike was still in effect only at Nashville, Tenn., and Birmingham, Ala.

As a result, the Postoffice Department quickly lifted its mail embargo, and the Railway Express Agency began to ease its ban on movement of packages. Freight trains, jammed up in the railroad switching yards, began to move again, many of the cars loaded down with vital war materials.

Federal officials worked through the night—following President Truman's broadcast appeal to the wildcatters to get back to work because the strike was hurting the Nation's security—to find a peaceful solution of the wage dispute between the railroads and the "Big Four" operating brotherhoods—locomotive engineers, firemen and enginemen, railway conductors, and railroad trainmen.

The wildcat strike was for the most part conducted by members of the trainmen—conductors, brakemen, and others who work on the train switching crews

Behind the wildcat walkout was the fear on the part of the trainmen that wages would be frozen in the present emergency before the four operating unions could make good their demand for a 40-hour week without a cut in 48-hour pay, equivalent to a pay raise of 31 cents an hour. Best management offer has been the 40-hour week with a 23-cent-an-hour pay increase.

The Army has technically been operating the roads ever since late August, when President Truman seized the lines to avert a "Big Four" Nation-wide strike. Since, there's been desultory mediation activity, with Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman serving as the conciliator.

Yesterday, Steelman again moved into the center of peace negotiations, and during the afternoon conferred at length with industry spokesmen, while the National (Railroad) Mediation Board went into new discussions with the representatives of the unions. There was some talk of peace in the wind, but these proved to be only rumors.

Meanwhile, the Government appeared to be of a mind to drop its contempt proceedings against the striking trainmen, who have been ordered to court in Chicago on Monday to show cause why they should not be punished for failure to obey three Federal court injunctions prohibiting the wildcat walkout, including one issued in District Court here.

Besides tying up freight, mail and railway express, the strike had curtailed steel operations in the Chicago area, and had cut down livestock shipments to the East.

Passenger-train traffic, hampered by the strike, was declared to be running nearly normal here and at other strike-affected centers yesterday. Freight movements were being speeded up, especially for the transshipment of Christmas mail.

Locally, the end of the "sick" walkout was signaled at 2:30 a. m. yesterday, when switching crews began to report for work at the Potomac Yards, Alexandria, where the walkout had virtually tied up all freight movement between north and south. By 8 a. m. normal switching crew complements were at work at the Potomac Yards, and at Union Station as well.

Parcel Post Moves Again as Embargo Ends

Switching engine moves mail car to hook onto train after strike's end

'Wildcat' Rail Strikers Clarify Their Position

C. C. Munn, vice chairman of Alexandria Local 898, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, yesterday declared that news reports on the union's dispute with the railroads have not fully clarified the case for the wildcat strikers. Around 180 of the local's members reported "sick" on Thursday and Friday at the Potomac Yards, Alexandria, in protest against the the deadlock over their wage dispute.

Munn asserted it is not enough to point out that the Trainmen want 48 hours pay for a 40-hour week. He said the Trainmen want to be paid in a five-day week the equivalent of the salary they now earn in six days.

The Trainmen's Brotherhood includes brakemen and conductors. The brakemen, according to Munn, earn $73.56 working a six-day week, $85.82 working a seven-day.

The Federal Diary
by Jerry Klutts

Longer Work Week For U. S. Employes Under Consideration

The Civil Service Commission will look into the possibility of a longer work week for Federal employes at the suggestion of the White House, it was learned yesterday.

"The commission is the logical agency to make the study and to make its recommendations to the President," an official explained.

Among the questions the commission has been asked to answer are: Is a longer work week feasible in Government? If so, should all or only a part of Government workers be placed on it, and when?

Most officials now believe it's only a matter of time until many Federal employes will be placed on a longer work week. Thousands of employes, mainly in defense agencies, already are working longer than 40 hours a week.

One of the most difficult questions tossed at Civil Service is this: How should employes be paid for overtime work?

The Budget Bureau is now making a study of the many different overtime pay laws and the Civil Service will make use of its data in making its recommendations. It's the general opinion of Federal officials that the overtime pay laws for classified and postal employes must be liberalized.

Under the classified law, employes whose salaries are less than $2930 annually are paid for overtime, in excess of 40 hours in any one week, at full time-and-a-half rates.

Overtime pay for employes whose annual salaries are in excess of $2930 decreases as salaries increase. The schedule for these people is expressed in terms of the amount to be paid for 416 overtime hours, which equals eight hours a week for 52 weeks.

For example, the overtime schedule fixes a rate of $894 for 416 hours of overtime for an employe who is paid $2980. That's full time-and-a-half, or 30 percent additional in base pay for a 48-hour week.

Overtime Scale Decreases

The overtime schedule gradually decreases to $628.33 for 416 hours and it applies to any employe whose annual salary is $6440 and above. An employe with an annual salary of $4075 receives straight time for overtime work. A $6400 employe receives overtime pay at about half of his regular rate and the overtime rate continues to decrease until it reaches a $10,330 salary, the cut-off point. Employes in the three super grades, GS-16, 17 and 18 ($11,200 to $14,000), can't be paid overtime.

One proposal: That employes paid up to $5000 annually be paid overtime at full time-and-a-half; and straight time for overtime for employes whose basic salaries are more than $5000.

Another suggestion: That agency heads be given the authority to place their employes on overtime if and when it's needed to speed the Nation's defenses. Under this plan, most Federal agencies would gradually go on longer work weeks, depending on labor supply, the depth of the emergency, and so forth.

Overtime pay and work also is tied in closely with the demand of Federal employes for a cost-of-living pay boost. As revealed here exclusively two weeks ago, some Federal officials have discussed the possibility of meeting the demand for larger employe paychecks by placing them on longer hours and paying them overtime for it.

Employe reaction against any such plan has been both quick and critical. The AFL's Government Employes Council is on record as "unalterably opposed" to it. The council is seeking a basic pay boost to offset higher living costs and full overtime pay for all overtime employes are directed to work.

Major Complications

One major complication to solve the salary problem of the classified and postal worker by placing him on longer hours at overtime rates is the fact that the third big group of Federal workers—the per diems—are now being given cost-of-living wage boosts and they also are paid full time-and-a-half for overtime work.

There are now more than 600,000 per diems in Government mainly laborers and mechanics. The Army, Navy, and Air Force on Friday announced pay boosts that average 11 cents an hour for their upwards of 20,000 per diems in the Washington area.

The House Appropriations Committee has shown some interest in a longer work week. Deputy Defense Secretary Robert Lovett revealed to it that the department was considering the possibility of a 48-hour week for its many civilian employes.

Committee members also suggested that Treasury's Customs Bureau place some of its employes on longer hours instead of hiring 100 new people as it planned. Customs officials studied their suggestion and reported back to the committee that it would cost more to pay overtime than it would to hire new employes and retain the 40-hour week.

Brief Power Failures Affect Downtown D. C.

Power failures in the direct current network of Washington's downtown area about noon yesterday caused a temporary stalling of office elevators, a jam of halted streetcars and stoppage of machinery.

A Potomac Electric Power Co. spokesman said the failure was due to a faulty cable. There were two stoppages, from 12:03 to 12:12 p. m. and from 12:32 to $12:35 p. m.

Women Voters Hit Alexandria Tax Slash Move

Summons Does It

'Borderline' Site Puzzle Is Decided

The status of four nearby Virginia "border" residents who thought they lived in Fairfax County has been abruptly cleared up. At least, that's the view in Arlington County.

The four home owners will appear in Arlington County Court at 9:30 a. m. Wednesday to answer summonses issued by Norbert Melnick, Arlington's director of inspections. Melnick charges unsanitary privies and trash-littered yards.

Arlington officials said the four citizens apparently were banking on a local rumor, according to which a late neighbor ran for Fairfax County sheriff on the assumption he was a resident of that county.

He may—so the story goes—even have bent the border line slightly to suit this whim.

But Melnick thinks the area—near S. Chesterfield rd. and Leesburg pk., opposite the Claremont development—belongs to Arlington County. The land is known as the Caleb Cleveland estate.

Melnick said a survey conducted last summer by John R. Wiggelsworth, head of the county surveys division, clearly puts the disputed territory in Arlington County.

Melnick said he had warned the four residents verbally three months ago to improve conditions charged in the summonses, but without effect.

Ordered to appear in court were: William B. Cleveland, accused of maintaining an unsanitary privy and allowing his yard to become littered; Mrs. Amanda Cleveland, on the same charges; and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Huston, of the littered-yard count.

The inspections chief said he planned to issue summonses for "8 or 10" more families living in the same area on similar charges Monday.

League Sees Deficit Facing City; Assails Proposal to Borrow And Cut Services

Alexandria's League of Women Voters yesterday renewed its attack on a proposal to reduce the city's property tax by 15 cents on each $100 valuation in 1951.

In a letter to City Manager W. Guy Ancell and to all members of the City Council, the league warned that the city may have to find additional sources of revenue to meet "recurrent budget deficits" unless the proposed tax reduction is abandoned.

The letter, signed by the league's president, Mrs. Warren H. Turner, jr., said the City Council's repeal of the city cigarette tax last week already confronts Alexandria with a "prospective operating deficit of $150,000 in 1951." It criticized Ancell's proposal to meet the deficit by borrowing $100,000 for a new incinerator and by paring $50,000 from the operating budgets of 15 city departments.

Retention of the existing property tax rate of $2.75 on each $100 valuation, the league contended, would make it unnecessary for the city to borrow money for 1951 operations.

"Without belaboring the arguments contained in our statement to council, the league would recommend that in these times the city operate, as far as is possible, on a pay-as-you-go basis," the letter said. "It seems unwise to add even $100,000 to our debt load, when the present equitable real estate tax rate would readily absorb this deficit."

The letter pointed out that nearly two-thirds of the league's members are property owners who would be affected by any change in the real estate tax. Despite that fact, it said, the members feel the proposed reduction represents "unsound and unrealistic city fiscal management in the light of current inflationary trends."

A delegation from the league appeared before the council December 1 and protested the proposed tax reduction, contending it was based on an "untrue" surplus of more than $500,000 from the 1950 budget.

Woman M. D. Reports $4000 Auto Looting

Dr. Mary Putnam, 62, New York and Boston pediatrician, lost jewelry valued at $4000, a typewriter and two suitcases of clothes to a thief while stopping over in Washington Friday night.

The theft from her station wagon, which she had parked in the yard in back of the home of her uncle, Dr. Herbert Putnam, 2025 O st. nw., was discovered about 3 a. m. yesterday when she went out to the car to get her luggage, she said.

She said she arrived in Washington about 9 p. m. Friday night while en route from her home in Jamestown, R. I., to her winter home in Anna Maria, Fla.

The thief apparently had worked open the station wagon's door by pushing a wire down through the ventilator of the car, Dr. Putnam thought.

The suitcase also contained personal papers and a $1000 United States savings bond, she added. She planned last night to continue her trip, since she wants to reach her winter home before the Christmas holidays.

Md. Experts Urge Income Tax Changes

BALTIMORE, Dec. 16 (AP).—All Marylanders with investment incomes of more than $500 a year would have their State income tax bills cut under recommendations made today by the Maryland Tax Survey Commission.

So would some residents living on pensions and those who have to pay alimony.

Richard W. Case, chairman of the commission which has been making a study of Maryland's entire tax and licensing structure, released the report.

It will be submitt[illegible] to the General Assembly during the session starting January 3.

Some of the commission's income tax recommendations:

1. That the first $500 of unearned income be taxed at the same rate as earned or "ordinary" income, regardless of the total amount of unearned income. At present, a taxpayer with $499 in investment income is taxed only 2 percent—the earned income rate. But the man with $501 in investment income is taxed 5 percent on it.

2. That the $500 maximum standard deduction allowed users of "short form" returns (those with gross incomes of less than $10,000 and not more than $500 of investment income) be extended to users of the "long form."

3. That pensions be taxed at the 2 percent rate. Some Marylanders with pensions of more than $500 a year now pay the 5 percent investment income rate.

4. That alimony payments be deducted from the income of the spouse who pays and be considered a part of the gross income of the spouse who receives them.

5. That the first $1500 of the pay of a serviceman in a war zone be tax exempt and that all the pay of a resident dying while a member of the armed forces be exempt from State income taxes.

This Is Last Day To See American Processional Art

This is the last day for Washingtonians to visit the American Processional art exhibit at the Corcoran Gallery. The show closes today.

The most comprehensive exhibit of American historical art ever presented, American Processional consists of 311 paintings and prints depicting the Nation's growth. The paintings and prints, valued at three million dollars, will be returned to their 156 owners after today.

Closing-day hours are from 2 to 5 p. m.

The Corcoran Gallery and the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission cosponsored the show.

Christmas Parties Held for Benefit of Children

Santa Claus, on his pre-Christmas rounds yesterday, brightened the day for scores of underprivileged children and physically handicapped adults.

Parties, tree lightings and other Christmas holiday festivities continue today.

About 65 underprivileged children yesterday greeted St. Nick at the Chief Petty Officers' Club at the Naval Receiving Station in Anacostia from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m. Hungry youngsters ate "ham, turkey and all the extras" with their hosts, 25 Navy chief petty officers. Boys and girls, ranging in age from 6 to 10, were nominated by the D. C. Public Assistance Division from homes where parents are receiving public assistance.

Another 200 children from underprivileged homes met Santa at the Christmas party held at the Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw., at 2 p. m. yesterday. The hosts, the grand lodge, Knights of Pythias, presented the children with toys.

Santa Claus arrived on crutches last night for 40 adults at the party for the American Federation of the Physically Handicapped, Lodge 94. The open party for physically handicapped was held at St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Park, at 7 p. m. Those attending brought toys, valued at 50 cents to one dollar, to be distributed at Children's Hospital.

Today, the Kiwanis Club of Washington will entertain 200 handicapped children at 2 p. m. in the College High School auditorium, 5th and Tuckerman sts. nw.

A 4 p. m. interracial, interfaith worship service at the Bible-Way Church, 1130 New Jersey ave. nw., will combine observance of Christmas and Chanukkoh, the Jewish Festival of Lights.

The annual Christmas party of the Washington Chapter of the Americans for Democratic Action will feature Todd Duncan, baritone who played the leading role in Broadway's "Lost in the Stars." It will be held from 4 to 7 p. m. at the Institute of Contemporary Arts, 1322 New York ave. nw.

In Community Christmas Tree Lighting ceremonies at 6 p. m. tonight, the Palisade Citizen Association will sing Christmas carols around the tree at MacArthur blvd. and Reservoir rd. nw.

GI Dies, Another Hurt in Collision Of Auto, Truck

Both Stationed At Fort Belvoir; D. C. Woman Killed In Triangle, Va.

One soldier was killed and another was seriously injured when the car in which they were riding collided with a truck on State Route 50 near Seven Corners in Fairfax County, Va., yesterday afternoon.

Pronounced dead on arrival at Arlington Hospital at 4:30 p. m. was Pvt. Houston L. Bales, 22, attached to Company B, First School, T. E. C. R., Fort Belvoir, Va.

His companion, Pvt. Vernon E. Agge, 23, attached to the same company at Fort Belvoir, was admitted to Arlington Hospital in serious condition with severe head lacerations.

Fairfax County police said they were unable to determine which of the two was driving the car. It was traveling east, apparently at a high rate of speed, when it collided with the truck going west and driven by Roosevelt Nickens, 40, of Arcola, Va., who was uninjured, police said. They said a technical charge of reckless driving was placed against Nickens, who was released on personal bond.

A Washington woman was killed instantly shortly before 11 p. m. Friday when she was struck by a car on U. S. 1 in Triangle, Va.

She was Mrs. Leola Clark, 28, of 71 H st. sw., who had just alighted from a southbound Greyhound bus when she was struck by the car going north. Police said the driver of the car was Lawrence David Bradbury, who gave his address as Walter Reed Hospital.

Police said Mrs. Clark was wearing dark clothing which made her difficult to see on the highway. Bradbury was not charged.

New Expressway

Lane Opens Part of Road To Baltimore

BALTIMORE, Dec. 16 (AP).—The first section of the Baltimore-Washington expressway—termed "the road of tomorrow" by Governor William Preston Lane jr.—was opened to traffic today.

The ribbon-cutting ceremony took place in the presence of about 200 state, Federal and Baltimore City officials at the northern end of the six-mile strip of dual, denied-access highway. It extends from the Baltimore City line southward to the Friendship International Airport.

"This highway," the Governor said in his dedicatory speech, "was designed for the future. It is a true road of tomorrow in conception and construction.

"Because it is a denied-access thoroughfare, the State will be able to control approaches to the road for years to come.

"It will be on completion to the Jessup Road—where it will link with an 18-mile superhighway that the Federal government is building to Washington—one of the most beautiful roads in the country.

"This road was not built in the atmosphere of 'immediate stupidity,' . . . but for service 30 to 50 years from now."

Arlington Puts $200 Levy On Pinballs

The Arlington County Board struck a new blow at pinball machine operators yesterday by adding a $200-per-machine tax to a previously-approved "prohibitive" license fee for distributors.

The new levy was approved in the form of an amendment to a license law adopted two weeks ago. At that time, the board voted to assess each distributor of coin-operated amusement devices in the county an annual fee of $1000.

The new tax will apply to all coin-operated machines in which "the element of chance predominates over the element of skill." This, Commonwealth's Attorney Denman T. Rucker told the board, would include pinball machines, but would not affect such "skill" games as shuffleboard, bowling and skee-ball.

The annual license fee for games of skill will remain at $25 for each machine under the new licensing law.

The machine tax, along with the distributors' license fee, originally was proposed by Rucker, admittedly with a view to driving pinball machine operators out of the county.

Sam Brown, attorney for a coin machine distributor, yesterday termed the tax proposals "confiscatory." Brown unsuccessfully sought to defeat the tax by asserting that his client, Hirsh de la Viez, was a "reputable and legitimate business man" who would be forced out of business by the new license provisions.

The board also agreed at its meeting to ask the University of Virginia's bureau of business administration to make a study of Arlington school expenditures in relation to their value to the school system. The survey was originally requested by the county's school board to clarify "confusion" which it contends led to defeat of a $7,450,000 school bond issue last November 7.

In voting to ask the "impartial" study, school board members expressed the belief that "misrepresentation of facts" and a misunderstanding of school expenditures were responsible for the surprising vote against the school bond issue.

The board referred to its public utilities committee and to Rucker a petition from 9[illegible] residents asking that a Virginia Electric Power Co. substation on N. Harrison st. be removed as a "hazard." The petitioners, all from the vicinity of 10th and N. Harrison sts., expressed concern over a possible explosion.

Window Plunge Injures Man in Vice Squad Raid

He is William G. Nally, 48, a driver for the Eagle Cab Co., who was charged with soliciting for an immoral purpose. He was admitted to Gallinger Hospital with a possible broken back.

Police said A. A. Ciotola of the vice squad, was in the apartment calling for a patrol wagon when Nalley plunged 40 feet from the window, landing on a parked car. He told police he was trying to repair an awning and fell.

Druggist, Girl Win Free Diabetic Care

JEANE CARTER
... Wins diabetic award

A 15-year-old schoolgirl and a 62-year-old druggist were yesterday proclaimed "winners" of the recent diabetes detection drive here.

As such, they have been guaranteed free physician services for life for diabetes, a disease they hadn't suspected they had before the detection campaign began.

They are Jeane Carter, 15, of 700 Jefferson st. nw., student at Paul Junior High School, and the pharmacist, who preferred to remain unnamed.

The two were early "sugar positives" in the Washington area campaign last month in which 14,209 adults and children submitted urine speciments for free tests.

The campaign was carried out on a nationwide scale, but only in Washington was the free treatments offer extended to the first child and adult cases uncovered. Both "winners" have since undergone a series of laboratory tests which confirmed the detection test findings.

Their lifetime treatment offer was underwritten by a panel of four District doctors, all officials of the Diabetes Association of the District of Columbia. They include Drs. Maurice Protas, president; Samuel Benjamin, clinical section chairman; E. Clarence Rice, diabetes consultant at both Garfield and Children's Hospital, and Louis K. Alpert, clinical section program chairman.

Jeane, daughter of Mrs. Jean Carter, said her mother persuaded her to participate in the diabetes detection drive. As a child of 3, she said, she suffered a coma, or spell of unconsciousness which was not then diagnosed as a diabetic coma.

Yesterday, she admitted she was "a little scared" when the doctors told her their tests showed she has diabetes.

"Now," she added, "I'm not afraid. I know I can be helped."

Jeane, who has been put on a diet pending determination of later insulin requirements, said she's already missing the "sweets" she always loved.

She can, however, continue her sports activities, principally basketball and baseball. In fact, the doctors said, she'll be encouraged to this end, since physical activity is important in diabetic therapy and a number of sports champions are diabetics.

The druggist said he entered the detection campaign, which had the active support of organized druggists here, because he felt "everyone should take advantage of these health campaigns." In the same attitude, he had his chest X-rayed for tuberculosis in the District drive two years ago.

The pharmacist said he was "surprised" to learn he was diabetic, more particularly since similar tests early this summer failed to uncover the condition.

In announcing the "winners," the doctors said that the free urinalysis of the 14,000 persons examined uncovered a total of 719 "sugar positives."

Dr. Churchill Dies; Retired GW Professor

George Morton Churchill, 76, professor emeritus of English history at George Washington University, died of a heart attack on Friday at his home, 5601 River rd., Bethesda, Md.

Mr. Churchill

Since his retiring in 1939, Dr. Churchill has edited historical, governmental and biographical articles for the Lincoln Library of Essential Information (encyclopedia published by Frontier Press Co., Buffalo, N. Y.).

Born in Elmwood, Mass., he was the son of Warren Keen and Elizabeth (Josslyn) Churchill, direct descendents of John Churchill who came from England to the Plymouth Colony in 1643. He was distantly related to Winston Churchill.

Shortly after graduating from Boston University in 1896, Dr. Churchill came to Washington to join the Library of Congress staff as a cataloguer and classifier in charge of social and political science subjects.

While working for his master's degree from George Washington University, he taught history on a part-time basis. In 1920, he became assistant professor in the English history department, and three years later, professor.

His wife, Mary Josephine Solyom de Antalfa Churchill, died in 1947. She was the daughter of Louis Charles Solyom de Antalfa, distinguished linguist associated with the Library of Congress as translator from 1868 to 1913.

Dr. Churchill was an active member of the Cosmos Club and the Federal Schoolmen's Club. He was also a member of the Phi Beta Kappa honorary fraternity, Beta Theta Pi, and served for many years as local treasurer of the honorary social science fraternity, Pi Gamma Mu.

Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. Eugene Wooden, of the River rd, address, and two sons, Warren S. Churchill of Minocqua, Wisc and Morton D. Churchill, of Alexandria, Va.

Mrs. Trodden Dies; Funeral Rites Monday

A requiem low mass will be said Monday at 10 a. m. at Holy Trinity Catholic Church, 3514 O st. nw., for Mrs. John S. Trodden, sr., 83, a lifelong resident of Georgetown. Interment will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Trodden died Friday in her home at 3003 N st. nw., where she had lived most of her life. She had been ill for several years.

Mrs. Trodden was born Anna Claudeen Tennant at 3414 N st. nw. and lived within four blocks of her birthplace all of her life. Her husband, a Spanish-American War veteran, had been a District fireman for about 30 years and when he retired in 1930, was an inspector in the Fire Marshal's Office.

One of the oldest members of the Holy Trinity parish in Georgetown, Mrs. Trodden had also been part owner of a millinery shop in Georgetown.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Trodden is survived by a son, John S. Trodden, jr., a plainclothesman in the Detective Bureau's Juvenile Squad of the Metropolitan Police Department; a brother, Arthur A. Tennant, 1318 36th st., nw.; and a sister, Mrs. Margaret Forrest, 1305 Potomac ave. nw.

Md. Planners Open Riverdale Office as McKeldin Speaks

The Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission played host yesterday at a double-barreled ceremony—the opening of its regional offices in the Calvert Mansion in Riverdale and the inauguration of a Prince Georges County Historical Society.

Governor-elect Theodore R. McKeldin was the principal speaker. One of the groups in the building, he observed, was the historical society—looking backward, and the other, the planning body—looking forward.

"It is terribly important that both groups know where we are going and where we have been," he said.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, another speaker, stressed the important role the mansion and its occupants have played in the history of Maryland.

Others who spoke during the ceremonies included Former United States Senator George Radcliffe, president of the Maryland Historical Society; Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.), Fred W. Tuemmler, director of planning for the commission, and T. Howard Duckett, president of the Prince Georges Bank and Trust Co. and long-time Democratic Party leader in the county.

A buffet supper in honor of the next Governor in the old slave quarters of the mansion followed the ceremonies.

Christmas Curiosity Can Lead to Woe

Being too nosy about what you're going to get for Christmas can wind you up in the home accident list around here.

A 12-year-old boy found that out when he discovered an electric saw his father had put away for Christmas and cut his hands severely. A 1-year-old going to see Santa hid a penny in his mouth—then swallowed it.

These were 2 of 88 persons treated at local hospitals last week because of home mishaps, the District Red Cross Accident Prevention Service reported. Two elderly persons died from home falls during the week. There were 12 burns, 5 accidental poisonings, 5 foreign bodies and 12 cuts.

Among the latter, a 17-month-old baby was seriously injured when he completely severed his upper lip while playing with a metal match container. The child was admitted to Providence Hospital for plastic surgery.

Blood Center Distributes 785 Pints

The Red Cross Washington Regional Blood Center distributed 785 pints of blood last week to hospitals in the District, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

In addition, shipments of blood were sent daily to West Coast laboratories to be processed into plasma by the Department of Defense and whole blood was sent to Korea.

Alcohol-in-Potatoes Plan Stymied for Now

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

An effort by a group in Congress headed by Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) to get the Government to use its surplus potatoes to make much-needed alcohol has flopped.

Brewster's group succeeded in getting the Agriculture Department to ask for a reduced freight rate on potatoes from Maine to Philadelphia and Baltimore alcohol plants. The railroads cut the rate from 74 cents per 100 pounds to Philadelphia to 50 cents.

The Agriculture Department then agreed to cut its price for the spuds, for which it is paying 80 cents a bushel, to 10 cents, loaded on trains in Maine.

Offer Declined

Yesterday, however, the Publicker Industries of Philadelphia, largest alcohol makers in the country, declined the offer, according to Albert E. Mercker, head of the potato branch of the Production and Marketing Administration.

Publicker tried last spring to get surplus potatoes at a reduced rate, but was refused. Since then the Philadelphia plant has used millions of bushels of grain—milo and corn—to make alcohol, most of it for the Government. At present, Government experts are fearful the country may find itself dangerously short of such grain next spring to meet its expanded goals for meat production.

Alcohol is needed for the manufacture of synthetic rubber, high explosives and many other items for the defense program. In order to get sufficient supplies, the Reconstruction Finance Corp. recently bought around 125 million gallons from France.

Millions Dumped

While this was going on, Uncle Sam has been buying and destroying spuds by the millions of bushels. So far the program has cost about 19 million dollars. A total of 32 million bushels have been dumped.

These potatoes would have produced about 20 million gallons of alcohol. Government crews are dumping thousands of bushels of potatoes daily. By the end of this year's program, which was extended by Congress until next June under the Agricultural Act of 1949, it is estimated that between 100 and 150 million bushels more will be thrown away. This would produce another 60 to 75 million gallons of alcohol.

Mercker declared last night that the Publicker company did not "close the door on the offer." The reply, he said, stated that Publicker will communicate with the Department later, if it becomes interested.

Meantime, Canadian potato growers are exporting thousands of bushels into Washington and other United States cities. The reduced freight rate offered by Maine railroads for the alcohol plants to not apply to potatoes bought for general consumption. It applies only to potatoes used for alcohol.

Correction

Due to a typographical error, David Karr, former employe of Columnist Drew Pearson, was incorrectly quoted in yesterday's city edition of The Washington Post as saying, in reply to a speech by Senator McCarthy, "I am and never have been a fellow traveler." It should have read "I am not and never have been a fellow traveler." The Washington Post regrets the error.

Novocaine Injection Deadens Cafe Man's Gall-Bladder Pain

The timely visit of an Iowa research surgeon proved a dramatic pain-killer for a local restaurateur, it was disclosed yesterday.

The visiting surgeon brought with him a new pre-operative treatment for gall bladder flare-ups, and that's just what Max Bassin, restaurant owner, had.

Bassin, who operates a restaurant at 1347 E st. nw., became the first local candidate for the treatment because his pains were brought to the attention of an ordinarily routine, weekly surgical conference at George Washington University Hospital.

In this conference, Dr. Nathan A. Womack of Iowa City had captured the ears of the local doctors with an impromptu report on his research and little-tried treatment.

From years of research with dogs, Dr. Womack told the group, he had learned that he could reduce inflamed and swollen gall bladders by temporarily deadening the nerves to the digestive organ. Clinically, he reported, he had used the treatment on 18 patients, with sudden and continued pain relief in all instances.

Then the telephone rang.

It was Garfield Hospital, calling a conference member, Dr. Alec Horwitz, associate clinical professor of surgery at GWU School of Medicine. Pains suffered by a patient (Bassin) had been attributed to a peptic ulcer. Now a new X-ray diagnosis indicated the pains came from a stone-blocked gall bladder.

Just the kind of a case the visiting surgeon had described.

Bassin was told that the new treatment might ease his pain, but wouldn't end his need for an operation. At best, he was told, a nerve site injection of novocaine would end the pain, relax the muscles of the swollen gall bladder, and release the dammed-up fluid. That would put him back on his feet till he was in better condition for surgery.

At worst, the surgeons said, they could still operate immediately or resort to conventional medical treatments, involving tube-feeding for the days or weeks required to reduce the swelling.

The patient said go ahead.

The doctors directed the injection of the pain-killing drug into the patient's back, near his spinal column. For the first time in two days, Bassin smiled, and said:

"Why, it doesn't hurt anymore!"

Then the fluid was released from the drug-relaxed organ, and the patient vomited quantities of bile.

Bassin said he felt like going home then and there, but the doctors kept him at the hospital for a week's observation.

The surgical conference was held here on the afternoon of November 1. Last Thursday, Bassin re-entered the hospital, feeling fit for the operation. On Friday, the surgeons removed his gall bladder, with a gallstone the size of a pigeon's egg, and several smaller stones.

The gall bladder, normally, is about the size and shape of a small pear, located on the under, right side of the liver near the ninth rib, it serves as a reservoir to store bile whose chief function is to break down fats of eaten food.

As a man hungers, more bile is directed to the gall bladder. This bile is released at eating to aid the digestive processes, entering the intestines through the gall bladder's cystic duct. When gallstones, or rock-hard accretions, form in the bladder they often block off the duct.

GOP Shift To Taft Noted

better than among Republican voters. Senator Taft, on the other hand, does not do so well, running about even with Governors Dewey and Warren.

Here is the vote:

Eisenhower	40%
Taft	13
Dewey	13
Warren	13
Stassen	9
Others	5

Don't know	7
	100%

When the independent voters supporting Eisenhower were asked for their second choice, most of them named either Governor Warren, Mr. Stassen, or Senator Taft.

Although Governor Dewey bowed out of the presidential picture several months ago and threw his support to General Eisenhower, his own popularity for the 1952 nomination has increased slightly. Governor Warren's following has also increased.

All voters classifying themselves as Republicans were handed a list of names prominently mentioned as G.O.P. nominees and were asked:

"Here is a list of men who have been mentioned as possible presidential candidates for 1952 for the Republican party. Which one would you like to see nominated as the Republican candidate for President?"

MORNING COUGHS and Asthma

Do you cough and cough, especially mornings and at night? Do you choke, gasp for breath, wheeze and often can't sleep? The cause of these devitalizing symptoms may be recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma. In such cases, the very first dose of MENDACO usually starts right now, working through the blood and thus reaching lungs and bronchial tubes, to help relax that clogged up stuffy feeling in the bronchial tubes, then helps Nature loosen and clean out thick, strangling phlegm. This helps you get good fresh air into your lungs and promotes restful sleep. Ask your druggist for MENDACO. Satisfaction or money back guaranteed.

Earth's Crust Found a Mass, Not Layers Like a Cake

Scientists have taken another look at the earth's crust, and have found it more like a fruit cake than the layered and standard version.

The new view was offered by researchers of the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

It's possible, they reported, that the earth's crust is "thoroughly confused" with all kinds of rocks, rather than the previous version of neat layers of various kinds of rocks in the 25-mile deep crust.

The possibility, they said, is suggested by studies of natural and man-made shockwaves in California and parts of the East Coast.

The new concept was presented among an impressive list of accomplishments in basic research this year, as outlined in the institution's annual report.

The work, discussed by Dr. Vannevar Bush, institute president, included:

1. Discovery, through astronomical photographs, of Icarus, one of the smallest known heavenly objects, an asteroid with a diameter of less than 1 mile.

2. The unfolding of a whole new field in crystal structure and historical geology through new findings on crystal changes.

3. New research result increasing the calculated speed of earthquake shock waves, and showing that they come close to the range of similar waves produced by explosions.

Study Birth Processes

4. Scientific findings which indicate that an important stage in the formation of sex cells in bluegrasses is determined not only by heredity of the plant but its environment as well.

5. "Significant" results toward a better understanding of birth processes through intensive studies on the biochemistry of uterine muscle.

6. Research on chemical effects on genes, determining factors in heredity, showing that several iron and manganese compounds are much more potent in altering gene processes than other chemicals thus far tested.

Discussing the achievements, as well as the nature and requirements of scientific research, in his annual report, Dr. Bush declared:

"It was Andrew Carnegie's conviction that an institution which sought out the unusual scientist, and rendered it possible for him to create to the utmost, would be worth while. More than 40 years of experience has justified this conviction."

To Extend Grasp

The Carnegie Institution, Dr. Bush explained, is concerned entirely with basic scientific research. The purpose of its investigations is ti "extend our grasp of the workings of nature and of man."

Applied research, in contrast, seeks to produce new and useful devices, materials or processes by capitalizing on the growing body of fundamental knowledge, he added.

Yesterday's annual report was presente dby Dr. Bush at the annual meeting of the institution's board of trustees at its administration building, 1530 P st. nw. Elihu Root, jr., board vice chairman, president. A meeting of the executive committee preceded the board session.

The executives announced appointment of Dr. Harry E. D. Pollock, as director of the institution's Division of Historical Research. He succeeds Dr. Alfred V. Kidder, retired.

Dr. Pollock, who joined the division in 1931, is a native of Salt Lake City, Utah. A graduate of Harvard in 1923, he received his doctorate there in 1936.

Sing Sing Doctor Retires

OSSINING, Dec. 16 (U.P.)—Dr. Charles G. Sweet, who in 24 years as chief physician and surgeon of Sing Sing prison witnessed 311 executions, retired today. He was succeeded by Dr. Harold Kipp of Ossining.

2 D. C. Men Charged With Bank Holdups

but there was no clue to his whereabouts, police said.

A 1950 Chevrolet was known to have been used as the getaway car in that robbery, however, and FBI agents all over the country were asked to check any new registration of such a car.

Nick Delekas registered a 1950 Chevrolet in California, giving his address as 6603 Klump st., N. Hollywood.

It was Tassos, and FBI egents arrested him late Friday night. He was carrying $8700 in cash, the FBI said. That money has not yet been identified, police said.

Washington police investigators, led by Inspector Robert V. Murray, chief of detectives, and Captain Edgar E. Scott, assistant chief of detectives, had learned that Carrigan and Miskin were known to be associates of Tassos.

Police here also discovered that when Tassos was in Washington he contacted both Carrigan and Miskin. FBI investigators had learned that Carrigan had been in California.

Shortly after noon yesterday, Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett, Murray, and FBI Field Agents Guy Hottle and Thomas J. Jankins arrested Miskin.

Several thousand dollars were found in Miskin's car nearby, the FBI disclosed.

At the same time, FBI agents were arresting Carrigan at Fort George Meade, Md., where he had been stationed since his induction.

Warrants were obtained charging the three with robbery from District Court Judge Matthew F. McGuire early Friday.

Both holdups followed similar patterns.

In the case of the Hamilton Bank, three men entered at 11:40 a. m., February 17. One man stayed outside, another watched the door and the third pointed a blue-steel revolver at a teller. The men escaped with $28,351.

In the Metropolitan job, three men entered just before noon, two of them armed and wearing silk scarves over their faces. This time they escaped with $35,825.

In a special letter of commendation to Barrett, Hoover extended his "heartiest congratulations" to Murray and Scott and their associates for their "splendid work" in the case.

The "excellent cooperation and the mutuality of endeavor of the Metropolitan Police Department and the FBI," Hoover said, "prove again that this country has no need for a national police; that the best and most effective type of protection which can be rendered to law-abiding citizens is a cooperative law-enforcement endeavor."

Solution of the bank robbery was announced at a special press conference in the D. C. field office of the FBI.

Tassos is a native of Passaic, N. J., one of eight children. He was sentenced to the New Jersey Reformatory in 1933, 1935, 1937 and 1945 and in 1938 he was sentenced to serve from 7 to 14 years in Sing Sing Prison, Ossining, N. Y., the FBI said. Francis Hildebrand, vice president and manager of the Metropolitan's Spring Valley Bank, accompanied detectives to Albany, N. Y., last week, to look at photos of suspects.

Carrigan worked in Washington as a painter, and also saw service in the merchant marine, the FBI said.

Senators to Hear Officials On D. C. Wiretapping Controls

Federal and District officials will be heard at 10 a. m. Wednesday on proposals for stricter control of wire-tapping in the District.

The hearing was called yesterday by the special Senate District wiretap inquiry committee headed by Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.).

Officials of the Justice Department, Federal Communications Commission and Federal intelligence agencies will be invited to testify.

District witnesses are expected to include Corporation Counsel Vernon West and Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett. United States Attorney George Morris Fay is also expected to be a witness. The hearing will be open to other witnesses who wish to testify. Among these are expected to be a representative of the American Civil Liberties Union.

The World's Greatest Christmas Stories

A Christmas Party

This is the eighth of a two-week series of selections from The World's Greatest Christmas Stories, a new anthology edited by Eric Posselt.

Today's story is by Gerhart Hauptmann (1862-1946), a German author and playwright of great versatility whose output ranged from naturalistic to romantic works. He was winner of the 1912 Nobel Prize. This translation is by Mr. Posselt.

By Gerhart Hauptmann

AGAIN Christmas was approaching. Its arrival was announced by the decision of the National Ladies' Society to hold their Christmas party for the poor that year at the Casino. Since Mrs. Enke was president of the organization, my father conferred repeatedly with her and Deacon Spahner.

Two tremendous Christmas trees, the topmost candles of which blackened the ceiling, had been set up in the smaller ballroom. The presents were arranged in neat little piles on the white-covered horseshoe table. During the celebration each one of the poor, old men and careworn women stood before the proper pile. They stood and were ashamed, hardly daring to open their mouths for the songs, especially since the two shining trees displayed their physical misery in such a glaring light.

We—my father, my mother and I—watched this, for us, new spectacle with distaste. Old Mrs. Menzel, genteelly poor, had found refuge with us; the old lady couldn't stop shivering.

Deacon Spahner availed himself of the rare occasion to let his talent as a preacher shine, while the poor were still not permitted to touch their gifts but could only devour them with their eyes. The sermon lasted twice as long as was necessary. But at last they apparently were ready.

MADAM ENKE rose—every inch a Maria Theresa—the Order of Queen Louise on her pompous bosom. Her impressive head with the button nose and the two shining dark eyes belonged to the Slavic rather than the German race. In keeping with the festive spirit of the evening, she had bedecked herself with the most beautiful pieces from the family heirlooms of the Hindemiths—earrings, brooches, necklaces and, as stated before, the Order of Queen Louise, the decoration most cherished by herself and most envied by all.

But did the Child in the cradle, did Mary and Joseph, did ox and ass ever hear such words, in such tones, as issued from the mouth of the bearer of the Order of Queen Louise? Indeed, the very first utterances of that benevolent lady seemed to justify the little mustache sprouting on her upper lip.

"You know, of course, that you are receiving presents donated by charitable people," she said, "and I suppose you realize that and are properly grateful."

It sounded resolute, and every one knew immediately that to reason with Mrs. Enke would require a great deal of courage.

Whereupon she poured out, occasionally reaching the heights of brusque command, a plethora of moral demands which had to be digested by the befuddled guests of the Christ Child before they were permitted to reach for their gifts.

Suddenly, to our surprise and consternation, we heard something like a heated exchange of words, but realized a moment later that it was quite one-sided, inasmuch as Madam Enke gave a hollow-cheeked miner's wife a terrible tongue lashing. They had, we learned, the previous year given her some children's clothes which she hadn't used.

She had sold them. Actually, she was told, she didn't belong here at all, and wasn't really entitled to further presents. And mark Mrs. Enke's word for it, this was absolutely the last time, in case she again proved herself unworthy of charity!

This incident, so raw, so despicable and repulsive, has remained in my mind through all the years as an example of Christmas parties as they certainly should not be. . . .

(Another story tomorrow.)

D. C. Native Translates French Book

A French biography of Christ that has been described as the best in existence has just been published in an English translation by a Georgetown University faculty member.

He is the Rev. John J. Heenan, S. J., a native of Washington, who has devoted two years to the translation of "Jesus Christ: His Life, His Teaching, and His Work," by the late, great French biblical scholar, the Rev. Ferdinand Prat, S. J.

The two-volume work, running to 1152 pages, has been called "the best life of Christ in existence," by the prominent Dominican scholar, Pere Lagrange.

First published in France in 1937, it has gone through 18 editions there. It is issued here by the Bruce Publishing Co. of Milwaukee.

Father Heenan, who attended Gonzaga College here before entering the Society of Jesus in 1910, worked on the translation for two years.

The Very Rev. Hunter Guthrie, S. J., Georgetown president, in accepting the gift of two specially bound copies from Father Heenan, described the work as one of the concluding features of the Holy Year celebration at the university.

AFL Pledges To Forego Strikes If Truman So Asks

By The Associated Press

AFL President William Green pledged yesterday that the AFL's eight million members will forego strikes during the national emergency if President Truman asks them to.

He pointed out that he gave a no-strike pledge during World War II, as did CIO President Philip Murray. John L. Lewis was the only labor leader to refrain.

25 Lawyers Oppose Loyalty Oath for Bar

NEW YORK, Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Twenty-five lawyers, headed by former Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts, today announced their opposition to an American Bar Association recommendation that the Nation's lawyers take an anti-Communist oath.

"There is no evidence or even any charge of which we are aware that more than an infinitestimal fraction of the approximately 200,000 lawyers throughout the United States are concealed members of the Communist Party or suporters of any subversive movement," the attorneys said in a statement.

Tedder Sees Air Might as Peace Hope

Overwhelming airpower is necessary if Western civilization is to prevent a major war, Lord Tedder, Marshal of the British Royal Air Force declared last night.

He spoke at the annual Wright Memorial dinner of the Aero Club of Washington at the Hotel Statler.

Lord Tedder also praised aviation as the means by which responsible leaders can make personal contact to attain mutual understanding, and cited the recent meeting of President Truman and Prime Minister Attlee.

Grover C. Loening, of Washington, New York, and Palm Beach, was awarded the Wright Brothers Memorial Trophy for public service of enduring value to aviation in the United States. He was the first aeronautical engineer of what is now the United States Air Force.

Lieut. John H. Burton, of the Navy Department's Office of Information, Civil Liaison Division, was awarded the Frank G. Brewer Trophy for his contribution to the advancement of aviation education and training for youth.

William P. Lear, millionaire inventor, received the Robert J. Collier Trophy for his development of the F-5 automatic pilot.

Trade Board Dinners Set For Feb. 2-3

The Washington Board of Trade will hold its thirty-second annual mid-winter dinner on two consecutive nights, as usual, in the Mayflower Hotel February 2 and 3, it was announced yesterday by Dinner Chairman Frank A. Leon.

Entertainers have been booked for a program centered around a "Tin Pan Alley" theme for the traditional black-tie, stag affair.

About 900 tickets are available at $14 per person for each night of the dinner, which is divided to accommodate the large organization membership. Full table reservations with 10 and 12 places will be honored as long as possible in order of time and date received, Leon said.

Serving on the executive committee of the 1951 dinner are Harold S. Harwood, first vice president; Emil A. Press, second vice chairman; John H. W. Roper, secretary; Raymond M. Florance, comptroller; Maurice S. May, architect, and Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, physician.

Vollard Exhibition Set For National Gallery

A special exhibition entitled "Vollard, Connoisseur" will open today at the National Gallery of Art, and continue to February 5. It is made up of prints from the Lessing J. Rosenwald Collection in the gallery.

Vollard, who was born in 1867 and died in 1939, was a picture dealer in Paris. His major interest however, was the publication of fine illustrated books and portfolios of contemporary prints.

India and U. S. Conclude New Aid Pact

NEW DELHI, India, Dec. 16 (U.P.)—India and the United States have concluded an agreement on technical assistance to India under President Truman's Point-Four Program, it was announced here today. India's share for the year ending in June, 1951, is expected to be between $1,200,000 and $2,400,000.

U. S. Forests Called 'in Red'

The Nation's forests are "operating in the red," the Society of American Foresters were told here yesterday.

Addressing the fiftieth anniversary session of the society at the Mayflower Hotel, Lyle F. Watts, chief of the U. S. Forest Service, declared:

"In the 50 years since its beginning in this country, forestry has made much progress. Yet the net result is the paradox of progress in forestry practice with deterioration in the forest resource situation. We are still losing ground, so far as the over-all condition of the forest resource is concerned."

Emphasizing its importance in our economy, Watts urged a more judicious use of the "forest resource."

Tom Wallace, editor of the Louisville Times and nationally known conservationist, also urged conservation of the forests to provide both spiritual and practical resources.

Dr. Henry Solon Graves, dean emeritus of the Yale School of Forestry and former chief forester of the United States, was awarded the Gifford Pinchot medal, a new medal in memory of the pioneer forest conservationist.

Prof. Ralph S. Hosmer, for many years dean of the school of forestry at Cornell University, was awarded the Sir William Schlich Memorial Medal.

Former Screen Actress Weds Her 'Man of God'

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 16 (U.P.)—Former Actress Colleen Townsend married a future minister, Louis Evans, jr., tonight in the church for which she gave up her career in the movies.

The bridegroom's father, Dr. Louis Evans, sr., performed the 30-minute double-ring ceremony in the Hollywood Presbyterian church before an audience of more than 1000.

Colleen, 21, and her handsome bridegroom, 25, had been enthusiastic workers for the church since they were in high school.

A Communication

Challenge for 'Debate' On Policy Is Answered

By Sen. James E. Murray (D., Mont.)

THE USUALLY responsible and provocative Mr. Walter Lippmann has, it seems to me, been more provocative than responsible in his column (December 14) on "Mr. Acheson's Troubles." I regret this exceedingly because for many years I have read his column and found his discussions of our foreign problems to be able and convincing. Since his plea is for "thorough and honest debate," I assume that he will welcome a sharp dissent from the two principal points he makes in the column to which I refer.

In the first place, I submit that Mr. Lippmann has done a disservice to some of his own basic tenets of foreign policy by writing off Mr. Acheson so cavalierly and giving advice to "the new Secretary of State" at the moment when Secretary Acheson is in flight to Brussels to speed the rearming of Western Europe. The Secretary has given no indication of quitting his post and the President has many times reaffirmed his complete satisfaction with Mr. Acheson's performance during a period of unparallelled international crisis.

DEAN ACHESON has achieved the confidence of the free peoples of the world as have few of his predecessors and none of his detractors. The acceptance of his resignation would diminish American prestige and alienate our allies. It would weaken the United Nations just as surely as the replacement of Trygve Lie as Secretary General of the U.N., under Soviet pressure, would have done. It has been the over-all policies of Secretary Acheson which, during the past six months, have breathed life into that international body.

It would, therefore, seem to me that responsible columnists, such as Mr. Lippmann, should use their vast influence to build American unity in the present crisis rather than to write off our present leaders because they sought such unity.

It is precisely because President Truman and Secretary Acheson have made great efforts to achieve unity that Mr. Lippman "accepts" the Secretary's resignation and seeks to "repeal" the 1948 Presidential election. His attack on "Mr. Truman, who is a professional politician, and Mr. Acheson, who is an amateur politician," is in effect an attack on the effort to build a bipartisan foreign policy.

HAS not Mr. Lippman been one of the staunchest advocates of bipartisanship in foreign affairs? Yet he now accuses the President and the Secretary of State of trying "to play politics with a question of the highest national significance." Does Mr. Lippman suggest that foreign policy be conducted without any regard for Congressional realities? Is it his proposal that the opposition, no matter how powerful, should be totally disregarded? Does he contend that the Administration's efforts to unify the country should be abandoned in favor of a no-holds-barred internal fight which would inevitably endanger the elements of unity which now exist?

The accusation of playing politics seems well justified, but it is misplaced. It seems perfectly clear that a small but powerful group of intransigent and desperate Republicans has sought to make political capital of the peril in which the free world, including the United States, now finds itself. They have impugned the motives and the integrity of our national leaders. They have indulged in indiscriminate name-calling. They have sought to set impossible conditions on the passage of essential legislation to meet the crisis.

ON AT least one point I can agree with Mr. Lippman, namely, that the efforts to "placate" the opposition have been less than successful. Despite the naming of key Republican personalities to high office in the field of foreign affairs, despite all the legislative concessions dictated by political necessity, the opposition has not been stilled. Far from it. But in these circumstances it is indeed discouraging to find Walter Lippmann guilty of firing his effective shots at the wrong target.

Whether we are members of Congress or journalists, of whatever party or no party, let us unite our efforts in support of our leadership now facing one of the most critical moments in our history.

Things Have Been Tough Before . . .

Because United States history glitters with the wars it has won, the American is inclined to forget, amid the tumult and the shouting of victory, that the going was not all downhill before the final triumph. In each of our wars there have been black days, and weeks, and even months, and our most glorious victory—at Yorktown—followed some of our deepest despond. Now gloom hangs over the Nation again for the second time in this Korean war (remember the ever-shrinking beachhead around Pusan, before Inchon?)

Defense Department Photos.

These pictures represent tough going in three wars—and two of them are down in the books on our side of the ledger. The one at the left is from the yellowed archives of 1918: the snow of Flanders pillows weary Yanks "taking 10" on their way to the front. At right, a veteran of the agonizing Italian campaign of World War II sprawls asleep at the roadside as the rest of the Fifth Army rolls by. And in the center is an exhausted artilleryman resting during a lull in the Korean war

Gen. Ike Will Be Acheson's 'Magic'

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

IT MIGHT help Secretary Acheson if he could take a professional magician with him as he flies to Europe today.

The Secretary is bound for a two-day meeting in Brussels with the foreign ministers and defense ministers of the 12 North Atlantic allies. In those two days he will have to perform a whole series of feats that would have baffled the great Houdini.

He will have to convince the Allies that America is united against further aggression, although the House and Senate Republicans have just trumpeted their lack of confidence in him and in the State Department's "personnel and policies."

He will have to persuade the worried Europeans that Europe, not Asia, is still the heart of American defense, although the loudest section of Congress is shouting just the opposite.

To prove his point, the Secretary will make a formal commitment to station more American divisions on European soil in an international army, although most of the existing divisions are locked up in Korea.

He will agree with the other Allies on a method of using German regimental combat teams in a combined North Atlantic army, even though all of western Germany insists it will have no part of such an "unequal" arrangement.

Above all, the Secretary will try to breathe life and strength into an alliance with European peoples who have been through all the sacrifices anyone can endure, and who are sick at heart at the thought of getting back onto a war footing.

They Want Him Now

LACKING a magician in his delegation, and knowing anyway that no one can do these jobs by a wave of a wand, Acheson is ready to agree with the other ministers to name Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as Supreme Commander of the combined defense forces of the West. Eisenhower, at least, showed during the war that he could fuse the forces of many countries into one.

If anyone can fire the imagination and rouse the spirits of the Europeans, and can persuade them to pool their strength in a common cause, it is "Ike," whom the European Allies of wartime regard as one of their own sons.

The appointment of Eisenhower should have come at least two months ago; the United States delayed it because France was not ready to accept the principle of using German manpower. Now the United States is ready to name him, but there is a debate within the Government over just when Eisenhower should make his return to Europe.

Some officials, especially in the Pentagon, do not want him to go abroad as commander until a Western defense headquarters can be staffed and a location chosen, presumably somewhere in western France. Others in the Administration, as well as most of the Europeans themselves, want "Ike" to go to Europe at once, even if it means his living in a hotel room for a few weeks.

They want to see him move from country to country, sizing up the military strength and the state of mind of western Europe, and trying to instill into the Europeans the sense of urgency which President Truman proclaimed to his own people Friday night. This time the Europeans will see the stern Eisenhower, not the warm and smiling one, for there is no time to lose, and the General knows it as well as anyone.

THE North Atlantic Treaty organization, so far, is even more of a "paper dragon" than the army which General MacArthur sent north to the Yalu River in the belief that it would clean up the Korean war in a couple of weeks.

In all of western Europe today, there are not many more trained and equipped troops of all nationalities than there were in the United Nations army in Korea when the Chinese struck.

No more than 12 divisions, not all of them fully equipped, are ready to fight if the Soviet army should start to roll westward. The equivalent of five Allied divisions in Germany are no more of an obstacle, in themselves, than a plate glass window is to a burglar.

A normally prudent burglar might hesitate to smash the window if he knew that a strong police force was ready for him, or if he thought that an aroused and organized community would catch him. But there has been a recklessness in Soviet tactics of the past year, an apparent willingness to run the risk of war, which darkens the entire international scene.

Obviously the West has to speed the building of its military strength and its community spirit if it hopes to deter the Russians from an advance toward the Atlantic. Bitter as the choice may be for the Europeans, they will have to raise their sights in trained manpower and in war production, just as the United States is about to do.

Ahead in Manpower

ONLY in the field of manpower have the western Europeans made an effort that bears any relation to the present danger. The British, for example, now have 800,000 men under arms, a figure for a country of one third our population which is the equivalent of 2,400,000 men here. This means that the British are slightly ahead of us in the proportion of their population in uniform, for the United States has about 2,250,000 under arms at the the present time.

And the British are ahead for the moment in their draft law as well. Every British boy at 18 is called up for two years' training and service, at home or overseas. Doctors, engineers and other key professional students can get deferment until they have finished their studies, but then they have to serve without exception.

After their two years of compulsory service, they can be called up for territorial, or National Guard, duties. And the British do not spare their drafted youths from overseas service or actual combat. Only about 65 percent of the men of the Middlesex Regiment in Korea were professional soldiers; the rest were newcomers drawn from civilian life within the past two years.

In France, every young man of 20 must go into uniform to serve 18 months, unless he has volunteered at 18 or 19 and chosen his own branch of service. Some postponements are given to medical and scientific students, but then, as in England, conscription is applied to everyone.

Peril Understimated

THIS kind of thing is a partial answer to those who say the British and French are not doing their share. A further answer is that France, with a population of only 40 million, already has seven partially equipped divisions in existence, not including the 130,000 men in Indo-China, and plans to have 10 fully equipped divisions in metropolitan France by the end of next year.

The complaint here is not that the Europeans are slack in all aspects of preparedness; it is that they have not enough sense of the danger that overhangs them, and of their own appalling unreadiness to meet it.

Every one of the North Atlantic countries except Iceland, which has no army, has assured the United States that it will speed up its preparedness in the new year. No doubt Acheson will hear this story in Brussels when he asks the European ministers to make a greater effort in a shorter time than they had planned.

The Administration here wants clear and convincing signs of a greater European effort by February 1, the date when it must ask the new Congress for vast new military expenditures for Europe.

If such signs are not visible by then, there may well be a rising tide of discontent and disillusion in American public opinion. And the Pentagon strategists may yet revive their old idea, once discarded, of basing American defense on England and Spain, and fighting only a delaying action in western Europe if war should come.

After all, there are enormous hazards for the United States in promising to station perhaps 200,000 of its best-trained young men in the heart of a Europe that may not fight. It was a calculated risk when President Truman first promised it, with conditions, in September. It is still riskier now, when there is no telling what new burden may be put on American manpower by the new dangers in the Far East.

Arms Aren't Enough

WHATEVER the danger, the United States intends to keep its commitment if the people of western Europe develop the will-power to defend themselves. The trouble today is not just that western Europe is under-armed; it is that there appears to be so little evidence—outside England—of a determination to fight if necessary, and so little of the community spirit without which an alliance becomes a sham.

After all, the French had plenty of men under arms in 1939. They looked bristling enough when 30,000 of them paraded along the Champs Elysees on Bastille Day of that fateful year. But arms alone did not deter the aggressor of 1939 from striking, and

A German View of U. S. Cartel Policy

By Agnes E. Meyer
Post Reporter

I

DURING a recent three weeks' tour of Germany, I devoted one whole week to interviewing some of the leading Ruhr industrialists in order to find out, if possible, what their attitude is toward our country and toward the policies we have pursued in our attempts to reorganize coal, steel and chemicals for the purpose of eliminating excessive concentration of economic power in Germany.

We Americans must realize that in our relations with Germany an earlier attitude, exemplified by the Morgenthau Plan, must now give way to a more constructive approach which will encourage production while checking the growing power of the dangerous elements among the old German political and industrial leadership. As an example of our contradictory mandates, I need only mention that we are at present dismantling the aluminum plant at Toeging, Bavaria, and its electric power station while calling upon Germany to participate in the defense of Europe and while America and Great Britain are suffering from an acute shortage of this vital war material.

In our future policies toward Germany, as toward the rest of Europe, we must bear in mind that the hope of mankind lies in an international alliance so strong that Russia will not dare to challenge it.

To do this effectively, we must understand the German mentalities with whom we are dealing and distinguish between the old authoritarian industrial leaders and the progressive businessmen who, without more support from us, cannot successfully oppose the reactionaries who still dominate the German National Association of Industrialists. We must also be willing to face with open minds the just criticisms which I encountered, especially in regard to our decentralization policies and their destructive effects upon an economy whose productivity, stability and progress are now essential to the defense of the western world.

I shall first report my conversation with Ulrich Haberland, chairman of the board of management of the Bayer chemical factory at Leverkusen in the British zone near Cologne, a subsidiary of the former I. G. Farbenindustrie, where I spent the greater part of my first day in the Ruhr. Mr. Haberland was an active anti-Nazi before Hitler came to power, and is highly respected as a man and as an efficient executive. He reveals a business philosophy very different from ours. This should not invalidate his views and opinions in the minds of Americans, as he is the product of very different traditions, and, like most other Germans, whether industrialists or not, has little knowledge of our so-called American "capitalism" or what our American democracy is all about.

II

THE Leverkusen Chemical Works of the I. G. Farbenindustrie occupies two square kilometers, surrounded by a high brick wall, and employs about 18,000 workers, of whom 4000 are women and almost 5000 are refugées. It looks somber and forbidding, an impression which was deepened by the early Victorian architectural monstrosity which serves as the office building of the chief executives.

As I was expected, the doorman at the main gate ushered me at once to the office of Mr. Haberland. But it was abundantly clear that anyone with less credentials would have a hard time gaining admission to this carefully walled and guarded industrial principality.

Mr. Haberland, a man of middle age, powerful of build, is proud of the fact that he is a "self-made man" (the only English words he used) who worked his way up in the Leverkusen factory from the ranks. As most of the Ruhr industrialists are second, third and even fourth generation descendants of the original founders of their firms, Haberland's rise to the management level is a guarantee of extraordinary ability. He received me with Reinhart Papst, manager of the export division, a younger man who spoke excellent English and occasionally translated technical terms for me.

Haberland was steeped in melancholy. He informed me that he had been harassed in his business during 1945 by four different controls which made a positive solution of administrative problems impossible because one of the four always said "No." After the departure of the Russians, he had bipartite American and English control, which since spring has admitted the French to a tripartite arrangement. Then recently, in August of this year, Law 35 for the decartelization of the I. G. Farben interests in the British zone descended upon his head like a bolt from the blue.

"Such a dictatorship at this late hour is unsuitable," he expostulated sadly, "and we are worried that the decartelization committee will break up our unity as it did the I. G. Farben units in the American zone, and destroy the development of the chemical industry in Germany. We must insist that Germany cannot afford more unemployment, and to maintain employment we must have certain rational and healthy groups that can compete in the world market. Today exports are more important than ever if Germany is to stand on her own feet when Marshall funds cease in 1952.

"But aside from our ability to produce, and seen from the social point of view, your American agents should not decartelize thinking only of machines and profits. We must think of the human beings—the workers—involved, and the fact that our smaller units cannot function if they are torn away from the main body of which they are an integral part."

This is the one point on which I found German management and labor in agreement. The labor unions, through a letter

Rebels' Vote-Getting Record Dims GOP 'Mandate'

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

"THAT MANDATE" Old Guard Republicans thought they walked off with in last month's elections received a statistical jolt last week.

An unofficial analysis of each Senator's vote projected no national pattern. But some of the results will surprise you.

Liberal wing Republicans, who consistently bolt the Old Guard line on domestic and foreign policy, made a far better showing than their conservative colleagues.

Two of the "rebels," Senators George D. Aiken (Vt.) and Wayne Morse (Oreg.), led the entire Senate Republican field in the percentage of the total vote captured.

Senator Milton R. Young (S. Dak.), who sometimes votes with the GOP "Rebs," came in third. And despite the bitter Republican split in New Hampshire, Senator Charles W. Tobey registered sixth in the percentage vote count.

All four made a better proportionate showing than Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), who generally speaks for his party in the Senate.

Taft's whopping 430,879 Ohio majority was the election's big news. But he ranked only eighth in the percentage of the vote in his State, a little better than the average of the 18 Republicans elected.

Here are the unofficial proportionate vote percentages of Republican Senators, based on statistics recently compiled by the Republican National Committee:

(1) Aiken, 77.8 percent; (2) Morse, 76.3 percent; (3) Young, 66.3 percent; (4) Case (S. Dak.), 63.9 percent; (5) Welker (Idaho), 61.3 percent; (6) Tobey, 59.5 percent; (7) Nixon (Calif.), 58.2 percent; (8) Taft, 57.5 percent; (9) Carlson (Kans.), 55.4 percent; (10) Hickenlooper (Kans.), 55.2 percent; (11) Bennett (Utah), 54 percent; (12) Dirksen (Ill.), 53.9 percent; (13) Wiley (Wis.), 53.7 percent; (14) Butler (Md.), 53.5 percent; (15) Capehart (Ind.), 53.2 percent; (16) Millikin (Colo.), 52.8 percent; (17) Duff (Pa.), 51.7 percent, and Dworshak (Idaho), 51.4 percent.

* * * *

REPUBLICAN LIBERALS got a big personal lift out of the survey, but it won't make their Senate path any smoother.

On the contrary, the Republican conservative majority may invoke stricter "discipline" than ever.

For example, Senator Morse, No. 2 man in the Republican percentage vote table, may not get that Foreign Relations Committee seat he appeared in line for last session.

Instead, it may go to Senator Homer Capehart, who came in fifteenth in the proportionate vote count. If it works out that way, party leaders will meticulously explain that Capehart had an equal "seniority" claim to the seat. The two entered the Senate the same day, January 3, 1945.

* * * *

ERLE COCKE, JR., of Dawson, Ga., national commander of the American Legion, has introduced a new handshake at the Capitol. But to Harry Truman's friends it isn't new. In fact, President Truman taught "the grip" to Erle Cocke at a White House audience the other day.

Just back from a 24-State tour of Legion units, Cocke ruefully exhibited a big callous on his right palm. He told the President he got it shaking hands with Legionnaires. Iron-pawed Texans nearly broke it.

"Let me show you a little trick," the President told the Georgian.

Then he shook hands with Cocke, grasping his fingers first and squeezing before the Legionnaire had a chance to clamp down.

Cocke has been practicing "the grip" ever since.

"You can shake hands all day and it doesn't hurt," he said.

* * * *

EVER SINCE the Puerto Rican Nationalist attempt on the President's life, Vice President Alben Barkley's own security precautions have been trebled.

Three Secret Service men now accompany him wherever he goes about the Capitol.

A newsman who stopped him in the corridor the other day promptly found himself flanked by all three. Barkley looked around and grinned.

"They're fine boys, aren't they?" he said. "I've only got one real complaint about them. Too many of my best stories are getting into circulation."

* * * *

THAT ANCIENT RIVALRY between the House and Senate has cropped up again.

Anxious to clean up short session business before Christmas, the House has raced through the four major items: rent control, Yugoslav aid, profits taxes and defense appropriations.

This week the "lower chamber" will just sit back and rest, waiting for the Senate to catch up.

If the usual Yule holidays are foreshortened, House members say the Senate's famed "deliberation" and not the Korean crisis will be to blame.

One irate House member summed up the House view:

"The Senate can talk more and do less than any other parliamentary body in the world."

Last week the House critics came up with statistics to prove that the House, week in and week out, does more work in less time than the Senate.

Here are the comparative figures on Congressional activity from January 3 through September 23 of this year:

	Senate	House
Days in session	180	158
Time in session	1159 hours	732 hours
Pages filled in Congressional Record	9287	6631
Public bills enacted	167	268
Private bills enacted	241	458
Measures passed, total	1402	1600
Quorum calls	401	145
Yea-and-nay votes	218	143

DEFEAT can be painless! For the first time in his 24 years in the Senate, Maryland's Millard E. Tydings is behaving like a really happy man.

The other day Tydings was cutting up in the lobbies while his reelected colleagues, with grim, purposeful faces, passed by. A reporter asked how come he was feeling so good.

"Do you remember how you felt on that last day of school?" replied the Marylander. "Well, that's how I feel.

"I wouldn't come back if Congress did the impossible and created a seat just for me, and they all begged me to take it.

"But before I go, I want to do one thing, write a letter to the good voters of Maryland. I want to thank them for my pardon!"

* * * *

NEW HAMPSHIRE'S Charles W. Tobey (R.) will shortly make a Senate speech urging Republican colleagues to "lay off" the men President Truman calls in from private life to take top defense jobs.

"It's always been hard for the Government to persuade successful men to leave good jobs to come into the Federal service, but now we need them more than ever," says Tobey.

"If they can expect only a political going-over in Congress, no matter what they've sacrificed, they won't come.

"I think we should pipe down, and make these Government jobs attractive."

A four-way Truman handshake, with no holds barred. (The trick the President taught Legion Commander Cocke is in use at top right)

Atomic Teapot At Los Alamos 'Steeps' U-235

By Howard W. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Writer

NEW YORK.—The secrets of an atomic reactor are disclosed for the first time in an official description of the "Water Boiler," an atomic teapot, at Los Alamos, N. Mex.

The description was authorized by an agreement among the United States, Britain and Canada to make public scientific discoveries that have no military value.

This reactor is the smallest yet built. Its center, the water boiler, is a hollow sphere of stainless steel about the size of a basketball. The ball is covered by a layer of beryllium oxide, a metal.

This little teapot is buried at the center of a cube of graphite, the stuff that makes the lead in pencils. The graphite is 5 feet in diameter.

Inclosing the graphite are three successive boxes. The first is made of a silvery metal, cadmium, one thirty-second of an inch thick. Next is a box of lead 4 inches thick, and finally a box of concrete 5 feet thick.

All this forms a cube 15 feet on a side. The three outer boxes are shielding against rays from the teapot at the center.

THE TEA in this case is a liquid which the scientists call soup. It is a mixture of ordinary water and about 12 pounds of dissolved uranium. Nearly 2 pounds of this is Uranium-235, the kind whose atoms split.

These Uranium-235 atoms are splitting all the time, but not in large numbers. In the water, those that split emit particles called neutrons, which split other atoms of uranium. This splitting builds up so fast that, if unrestrained, the heat from the splits would melt the steel, beryllium and probably the graphite and lead.

Splitting is controlled by two rods of cadmium metal, sticking into the water. Cadmium absorbs so many neutrons that not enough are left to start a chain reaction of splitting.

The boiler is started by pulling the cadmium rods part way out of the water. The result is the fastest-heating water pot on record. In a few seconds, the water is almost boiling. That is hot enough for the work of this pot, and the cadmium rods hold the temperature even.

The water also helps in this control. As the water gets hotter, the atoms of uranium are spread a little farther apart by expansion of the liquid. This distance is tiny, but is very large compared to the size of an atom. The separation of the atoms reduces the number of splits and the heat. So the water cools slightly, the atoms get closer again, and the water heats. These fluctuations are very small, but help to insure safety.

THE NEUTRONS from the splitting number 300 billion per square centimeter each second at the center of the pot. Producing these neutrons is the entire purpose of the boiler. They are used for scientific experiments.

They pass out through the steel as easily as a knife through cheese. There are holes in the concrete and the other shields to let them out in beams, which can emerge into the open air or be stopped wherever wanted inside the reactor, by plugging the holes.

This reactor has been running five years on the original charge of 12 pounds of uranium. The splitting is filling the soup gradually with new atoms which are not uranium. Someday these new atoms will have to be removed. That will be done by taking the soup out and giving it a chemical treatment. After that the liquid can be returned to the pot for another long period of boiling.

Germany Can Be a Breach or a Bulwark

This is the tenth background article in the 26-week "Information on World Affairs" program being carried out by The Washington Post and many junior and senior high schools in the area. Questions based on these articles and on current events are published each Thursday and presented in classrooms the same day. Answers are printed the following Saturday. The program is under the direction of J. Edward Gerald and Edgar B. Wesley of the University of Minnesota.

WILL GERMANY become another Korea? A greater, more world-shaking Korea?

The setting is similar—a nation divided.

The cast is similar—Russia holds East Germany, just as she did North Korea. The United States and her allies control the western sectors.

The plot and even the dialogue are similar in East Germany—the Russians are training a military force of Germans, while a puppet government blares anti-American propaganda and trumpets threats to Germans in the western sectors.

Separating Russia and her Communist satellites from the Atlantic neighbors, Germany is the No. 1 battleground—and casualty—of the European phase of the cold war.

But while it is easy to compare Korea and Germany, that comparison does not mean that the two problems are comparable in magnitude.

The United Nations, following the lead of the United States, chose to make a stand in Korea, to use that country as a concrete example of the West's determination to draw a deadline somewhere against Communist aggression.

As a matter of cold fact, the United States and the United Nations could have, if they had chosen, allowed South Korea to fall to the Communist aggressors without the risk of plunging the world into a major war.

Such is not the case in Germany. An open armed attack upon western Germany by Communist aggressors would signal World War III.

A UNIFIED Germany organized against Russia is politically intolerable to Russia, and a united Germany organized by Russia against western Europe is equally intolerable not only to western Europe, but to the United States and the rest of the free world.

In the struggle between the East and West, Germany is the root question.

Following World War II, the victorious Allies — the United States, Britain, France and Russia—split Germany into four occupation zones under an agreement worked out at the Potsdam conference in 1945.

Although the policy toward Germany was never completely defined, it was intended that the four powers should administer their respective zones in such a way as to prevent the former enemy nation from ever again threatening the peace of the world and to insure the rise of a peaceful, democratic Germany.

Years of wrangling over future German unification at Big Four conference tables have proved fruitless, however, and Germany, five years after the war, still is a divided nation.

Here the Communist East and the democratic West are locked in their most crucial struggle, with no compromise yet in sight.

CONTROL of a united Germany is the supreme prize to either side in the cold war. Despite the destruction wrought during the war, Germany is the key factor in the battle for Europe.

Germany boasted a highly skilled labor force, ample water power, mineral resources, the most highly developed industrial facilities on the European continent, good farm lands and a key geographical location.

In the division of the country at Potsdam, Russia came out second best.

Most of Germany's skilled labor force, her mineral deposits and heavy industry, including the Ruhr, went to the Western Allies. Russia's zone, although it included most of the country's good farm land, contained only the light industries of Saxony and Berlin, and the iron and coal mines of Silesia.

With the division in its favor, the West, thus far, has had greater success in helping Germany back to her feet. Production in the western zones stands at 95 percent of the 1936 level.

Industrial and farm problems in East Germany, plus Russia's failure to oust the Western Allies from Berlin, have cost the Soviet some prestige.

IN ORDER to silence the grumbling and to bolster the sagging morale in its zone, Russia set up a government in East Germany. Called a "people's government" it is, in reality, one run by hand-picked Germans trained to follow the Kremlin line.

The puppet government has directed a continuous blast of propaganda against the Western powers. To add weight to this war of words, Russia equipped a 50,000-man force with modern military weapons.

Although labeled a "police force" by the Communists, it is clearly an army. In violation of both the Yalta and Potsdam agreements, Russia has provided infantry, artillery and armored weapon training, using a general staff which includes many former Nazis.

In contrast to conditions in Communist Germany, democracy has been practiced in the Western zones from the start.

In an effort to guide the Germans toward democracy, the United States pledged itself to the protection of civil liberties, suppression of militarism, pursuit of a forward educational program and supervision of the judiciary and bureaucracy.

A federal republic has been set up, embracing occupation zones of the United States, Britain and France. Under their new constitution, West Germans are allowed to choose their leaders for the first time since the rise of Hitler.

THE FREE WORLD'S stake in Germany is high. In their fight against communism, the Western Allies must strengthen democracy in Germany for the sake of their own interests.

Success in Germany is imperative, because a prosperous and democratic Germany is essential to the strength of western Europe in the power balance of the whole Eurasian continent.

Realizing that no European union can succeed without Germany, the Allies abandoned their original policy of making Germany a mere "workshop for Europe." Instead, West Germany is gradually being allowed to mingle diplomatically with other nations. Already it has been admitted into the Council of Europe, into the central organization of the Marshall Plan, and into discussions on the Schuman Plan to pool industrial resources.

The issue of European defense is another matter.

Formation of an East German army presented the Atlantic neighbors with one of the toughest problems of the occupation. Should West Germany contribute only materials to the defense program or should she be allowed to rearm?

Military authorities say the number of occupation troops now in west Germany is not great enough to halt a large-scale Communist assault.

Most of the western European countries, especially France, fear that to permit German rearmament would eventually mean the rebirth of a mighty German army. Opponents of rearmanent say, too, that German army officers are hostile to democracy and that, with an army, Germany might ally itself with Russia, or alternatively might provoke a war with Russia that would involve the whole world.

Those who favor rearming Germany argue, however, that the great pool of manpower would serve as a balance against Russian power and would reduce direct American military commitments in Europe.

The defense ministers of the North Atlantic nations, presently planning a defense force for western Europe, have agreed to remove limitations on the amount of industrial goods Germany can produce, but are still bogged down on the issue of German rearmament.

WITH COMMUNISM and democracy both at work in Germany, the questions in the minds of many observers are:

Which is more attractive to the Germans?

How would Germany go should fighting break out in Europe?

Would the West Germans fight at all?

The Germans dislike communism and hate the Russians. But those under the iron hand rule of the Communists in the eastern sector might be forced to fight against the west.

In the western zones, the United States holds the respect of the Germans but not their love. Democracy has made gains, but German nationalism still is strong.

West Germans might snap at the Communist bait of a united nation in return for their help to win a Communist world.

On the other hand, some observers feel that Germans are fed up with fighting. Those in the western zones might try to avoid any direct role should fighting break out.

Europe Needs to Be Aroused As Much as It Needs Armies

arms alone, without will-power, will not protect any country now.

No one knows these truths better than General Eisenhower, who somehow must inject the iron of self-confidence into European veins.

So far, European public opinion has proposed no alternative to rearmament except "neutralism"—a fiction that did not save the Belgians and Dutch, the Danes or the Norwegians when they tried it before 1940. "Neutralism" today is nothing but an invitation to surrender.

There is, of course, renewed talk of negotiation with the Russians. The Russians have proposed a four-power conference to discuss a series of steps that would turn Western Germany over to them. The three Western powers are unwilling to talk on this basis, but they are willing to have their representatives at the U. N. meet with the Russians and decide which subjects, if any, might form the bases of profitable negotiations next year.

With the military chiefs here begging the diplomats to play for time, there may well be a four-power conference, although it is hard to think of any subjects that would not lead to further wrangling of the familiar kind.

EVERY reasonable person in the West would like to find a way out, for there is heartbreak in the conscription of millions of young men, even without a war. There is tragedy, even without a war, in spending billions for unproductive purposes, in lowering standards of living, in dimming the hopes that seemed so bright a few short years ago.

But there is no way out except to ignore hard and terrible facts. The facts are that the Soviet army can overrun western Europe, and that the men of the Kremlin are in a reckless mood. The supremely difficult job of the moment, the one that takes Acheson to Brussels today, is to make an attack on western Europe look so dangerous that Moscow will not attempt it.

No one can be sure that rearmament will stave off a war, or save western Europe if war should come. It may be too late for the West to build a "situation of strength" that will save it. But surely it is not too late to try.

The Boy Played Possum at Malmedy

Left, "Jeet" Hardiman, as he is known to hunters from Tennessee to Tidewater, poses with a pointer back home in Buckingham County. Right, American troops moving through Malmedy two weeks after the massacre of which Hardiman tells below, on their way to stop the German drive in the Belgium-Luxembourg border area

Six years ago today, during the Battle of the Bulge, a Nazi task force surrounded some 160 Americans at Malmedy, Belgium, disarmed them, lined them up in a field and machine-gunned them. There have been reverberations almost up to the present, including a Senate investigation of the trials of the Germans accused of the outrage. But here is one man's story of the massacre itself, and of how he lived to return to his hunting grounds in Virginia.

By Ralph S. Rainey

Mr. Rainey is area director of the Division of War Veterans Claims of the Virginia State Department of Law, with headquarters at Farmville, Va. In 1943, he was Aubrey Hardiman, jr.'s mathematics teacher.

SINCE HE WAS a lad of 6, Aubrey Jeatum Hardiman, jr., had lived at the Goodloe Hunt Club in Buckingham County, Va. Hardiman, sr., was manager of the club and keeper of the shooting lodge.

By the time the younger Hardiman was 19, his specialty was turkey hunting. Fishing was also fun, and his was a great world.

He had the long days to be merry in and the nights to wonder at the Milky Way. He had the meadows, with their clover and butterflies. He had pleasant waters where he could swim, and ponds and lakes where he could fish. He loved the great woods, the rivers, the mountains.

That was in 1943, and the young turkey hunter was attending high school in Buckingham County. War had come, and he was the first to go from high school. He was soft-spoken and slight of build. He weighed 138 pounds. But what he lacked in stature he made up for in courage and an Indian's cunning learned in the field.

While in basic training, he wrote his mother: "When I get through this training, I won't be fit for nothing but turkey hunting. Seems like all I do is crawl around on my stomach and learn how to hide."

In 1944, Pfc. Aubrey J. Hardiman, jr., was in Headquarters Section of Battery B, 285th Field Artillery Observation Battalion. This was strictly a relief outfit trained to pinch-hit wherever needed. Pfc. Hardiman was a machine gunner and wireman.

By December 16, 1944, the freelancing 285th had hacked and chawed its way to the Hertgen Forest near Liege, Belgium. Next morning, Battery B was ordered to the relief of Bastogne, where Tony McAuliffe was later to reply "Nuts" to the German order to surrender.

The 285th was known as the eyes and ears of the Field Artillery, but Battery B's eyes did not see and its ears did not hear what awaited at the Malmedy crossroads on the road to Bastogne.

Let Pfc. Hardiman tell what happened:

"We were in a convoy of troop transport trucks when we came to this crossroads. There were five forks. I was in the second truck of the convoy.

"As the first truck pulled out into the intersection, a German tank came up another road and knocked the truck out. We piled out and took cover in the ditches along the road. The Germans came up and disarmed us. Then they got us together and made us get in a field.

"After we got out in the field, a German shot into us with a pistol. Then the machine guns from the tanks opened fire on us. We hit the ground. I remembered what an officer had told us about spreading out at a time like this, and I thought about how when a covey of birds gets up, you usually shoot where the most birds are. I was next to the last man on the end of the line. I made up my mind to lie perfectly still and play dead. I learned how to lie still in a turkey blind.

"Well, they machine-gunned us for about an hour. Every time a tank would come by, they would take more shots at us. Finally, an armored car came by. The Germans got out and went over the men. Anyone who moved or made a noise was killed.

From Eisenhower's "Crusade in Europe":

"On December 16, 1944, General Bradley came to my headquarters . . . Just as he entered, a staff officer came in to report slight penetrations of our lines in front of General Middleton's VIII Corps . . . The struggle in the Ardennes came to be known as the 'Battle of the Bulge' and the name stuck."

From Yank magazine, January 25, 1945: "Early in the afternoon of December 17, a convoy of Battery B was moving along 3 miles south of Malmedy on the road leading to St. Vitch . . . The convoy was hit by enemy riflemen, machine gunners and mortarmen hidden in the surrounding woods. All the American vehicles halted immediately.

The men took cover in ditches. Several minutes later they were flushed out by Tiger tanks which lumbered along the ditches spraying machinegun fire. Other tanks quickly knocked out the American trucks and other vehicles. Armed with only small weapons, the Americans were taken prisoners."

"A German straddled me and with a pistol killed a medical officer beside me. The German turned me over and took some pictures and papers out of my pockets. I had on three suits of OD's, and because they were wet and frozen it made it easy for me to act stiff and dead. After he picked my pockets, he went away.

"There were about 150 of us in all, and I learned later about 15 of us got away. They started shooting us about 2 p. m. and kept it up for a long time. We stayed there until almost dark, and I saw T/5 Carl Daub from Pensylvania raise up on his arms and look around. I got up and ran to a nearby cedar hedge and Daub came with me.

"We had gone about 300 yards when they saw us, and the tanks that surrounded the field opened fire on us. We zigzagged along the cedar hedge while the bullets whistled by. I noticed from the tracers that the shots were high. We came to a gulley and followed it to the woods. We went along the edge of the woods for about a mile.

"We knew which direction to run because buzz-bombs kept coming over and we knew they were going in the direction of our lines. Well, after about a mile we heard some children hollering, and looked down in the bottom at a Belgian farmhouse where some children were beckoning to us.

"We went down and made it known that we wanted to get back to the American lines. A boy about 8 or 10 years old volunteered to guide us through a woods to the top of a hill. When we got there we could look down on the town of Malmedy.

"Now, I had been shot through the instep soon after I hit the ground when the Germans started shooting at us. I paid no attention to the hurt until we started down that hill to Malmedy. Then, my buddy, Carl Daub, had to help me. We reached the town just as an aid station was being moved out on a truck. We caught the truck and went on with it.

"The doctor said that the bullet had broken some of the bones in my foot and I had broken others by running on it. It bothers me some now on turkey hunts, but I get around. The Veterans Administration rates me 20 percent disabled on account of it."

From a convalescent hospital, Hardiman wrote his mother, "What I learned in a turkey blind helped save my life."

After his discharge, Hardiman went back to the Goodloe Hunt Club and his beloved way of life. There he ambles on his game foot through the brown stubble in winter and along cool streams in summer

On September 9, 1948, Aubrey J. Hardiman, sr., died. Aubrey, jr., and his brother George were made managers of the club to take their father's place. They keep up the place and act as guides for sportsmen

Under PL16, Aubrey, jr., is back at Central High School, studying scientific farm practices in evening classes. He attends square dances at Veterans Memorial Hall on Saturday nights.

Under Aubrey's feet is the good earth, and overhead is the canopy of a blue sky. He hears Bobwhite give his call when the sap rises, and sees the return of redbirds when winter comes.

Redbirds in winter—poignant reminders of Battery B and stains in the snow at Malmedy.

DACHAU, Germany, May 23, 1946 (AP).—George Fleps, identified as the SS private who fired the first shots in the Malmedy massacre, said today he raised his pistol after "we received orders from up ahead to bump off the Americans." In the document read to the court trying 74 former SS men and officers for murder of unarmed American prisoners, Fleps asserted: "I fired one shot at one of the Americans and saw him fall over."

From Yank magazine, January 21, 1945: "One tank and several German soldiers were left behind to finish off those who had not been killed. The Nazi guards walked among the American soldiers shooting at those who lay groaning in agony. They kicked others in the faces to see if they were really dead or just faking. Some had their heads bashed in with rifle butts. One American medic got up to bandage the wounds of a seriously injured man from his own unit. The Nazis permitted him to finish and then shot him and the patient."

Caption on an Associated Press picture, January, 1945: "The bodies on the ground from which soldiers are brushing snow are Americans, taken prisoner by the Germans, disarmed and then butchered."

Eisenhower's "Crusade in Europe": "From both flanks we continued attacks in the direction of Houfalie, where we joined up January 16 . . . ending January 16, the enemy had suffered 120,000 casualties . . . we calculated our losses at 77,000, of whom 8000 were killed."

Satellite Back-Stab Set If Reds Strike

By Edwin D. Gritz

Post Reporter

SOVIET FORCES can expect a quick stab in the back should they ever attempt to launch an attack from the Iron Curtain countries.

This behind-the-scenes action is a part of a broad, well-organized plan now reported to be taking final shape in Eastern Europe for eventual liquidation of Soviet controls. None of these plans, it is emphasized, has yet been carried out, and they are not to be confused with the many resistance operations in the Soviet orbit since the war.

Fragmentary but first-hand reports from satellite nations indicate, more by inference than actual words, that this "apparatus" is geared for both physical and political action. Unlike current opposition movements, devoted largely to harassment, this new force is prepared to:

1. Conduct military action, limited only by the amount and nature of arms available at the time.

2. Staff government positions with qualified personnel.

3. Pursue economic activity—domestic and foreign—with carefully planned programs.

4. Guarantee freedom for all political parties, including the Communist Party, so long as they operate within the law and without foreign direction.

5. Foster friendly relations with all nations—including Russia—providing such relations contain honesty of purpose.

Special emphasis is given the last point, described variously as "a recent reality" or "today's inescapable logic." It is pointed out that any attack on the Soviet Union itself has been judged both purposeless and unwise—particularly since most Eastern European people will not support any kind of aggressive warfare.

In this connection, informed Europeans report that Russia's indirect military action in Asia has provided satellite citizens with new grounds for doubt about the peacefulness of Moscow's "peace" campaigns. And the more aggressive Russia becomes, the greater will be the opportunity for overt action against Soviet controls within the satellites.

AS FOR the existing plans for action, they have been shaped largely by former political leaders—not necessarily exiles—of Czechoslovakia and Poland. While other satellite countries are represented in the planning councils by influential spokesmen, their number is smaller. All represented parties, however, have been given equal consideration regardless of their polling power before the war.

In Poland, where the Red regime holds uneasy sway, there is growing confidence that Moscow sooner or later must abandon total sovietization or face political disintegration—be it now or 10 years hence.

Careful sounding of public sentiment by such groups as the Polish National Democratic Committee and the Polish Political Council has revealed a vast, although presently dormant, antagonism against Soviet totalitarianism.

One report notes that Soviet efforts to collectivize all Polish farms are producing most unexpected results—results which obviously must be present in other satellite states. In attempting to place all farm production under strict state supervision, Red leaders are unwittingly creating irresponsibility and even outlawry among the peasants.

Pre-Soviet farming, whether individual or in voluntary cooperatives, gave the peasants a sense of "belonging," a feeling of concern about personal and national welfare. But now that the state is usurping all initiative, farm workers need constant ideological prodding to maintain interest in their assigned "jobs." And many spend their time scheming how to best the state.

SIMILAR difficulties, although for other reasons, are impeding industrial expansion. In fact, leading Communists admit in public harangues that lack of labor enthusiasm is threatening the success of Poland's new Six-Year Plan.

As for remedial measures, these were made clear in a recent speech which said in part:

"It is, of course, understood that our planned economy must have a planned, organized flow of labor. This cannot follow the old pattern, which was voluntary and unorganized."

In the same speech, it was revealed that "in towns and villages there exists a very large reserve labor force. In small towns, large numbers of young people are loitering and doing no work . . . Many of them are engaged in speculation and other occupations colliding with criminal law."

To former Polish leaders, all this represents further proof that sovietization is artificial and inherently wrong. That is not to say, however, that Poland can or would return to its prewar political-economic ways.

A MIDDLE-ROAD program for a "new Poland" is contained in the credo of the Polish Political Council, formed in London December 20, 1949. President of the council is Thomas Arciszewski, 73-year-old former Socialist Prime Minister of the wartime Polish Government-in-Exile.

Now touring the United States and Canada, Arciszewski made it clear in an interview here that Poland's economic basis must necessarily be socialist. Bound as Poland is to a European economy unlike that of the United States, only a lesser or greater degree of planning can assure Poland of adequate living standards.

"But our political orientation has been and shall be with the West—with the United States most of all."

Arciszewski, a militant underground leader during the Nazi occupation of Poland, said that the main task in Poland will be to reform Soviet reforms—for Poland's benefit, not Russia's.

WHILE AWARE of the various Eastern European movements against Soviet rule, Arciszewski himself is noncommittal as to what role the Polish Political Council is playing in such efforts. But from the composition of the council, it may be presumed that his organization will be in the forefront of any liberation march.

The council consists of 40 representatives of three old-line Polish political parties—Socialist, Peasant and National Democratic. In addition, it is well represented by young Polish veterans and intellectuals.

Equally significant is that council leadership includes such figures as Lieut. Gen. Tadeusz Bor-Komorowski, commander of the anti-Nazi underground army in Poland during the war. Like Arciszewski, Bor-Komorowski is well versed in underground planning for "wolnosc"—freedom.

Sense On The Bomb

It remained for Winston Churchill to inject a note of badly needed realism into the misconstructions of "morality" and "idealism" that have been invoked against possible use of the atom bomb. "The argument is now put forward," he observed in the House of Commons Thursday, "that we must never use the atomic bomb until and unless it is used against us first. In other words, you must never fire until you are shot dead. That seems a silly thing to say."

It does seem silly, indeed, and it seems even sillier in light of other implications. A resolve not to use the bomb, he says, would certainly bring war nearer. For, according to Mr. Churchill, the atom bomb is almost the sole defense of the West at the moment. "Its potential use is the only lever by which we can hope to obtain reasonable consideration in our attempt to make a peaceful settlement with Soviet Russia." In other words, at a time when the West is tragically weak in the military elements in which Russia is strong, we would be merely inviting aggression by binding ourselves not to use the one instrument in which we have relative superiority.

A good case can be made that the Western world has been mesmerized into believing that mere possession of the atom bomb alone would prevent war. This is in large part responsible for the neglect of other defenses. The bomb is a weapon of limited application, useful against selected targets and then only when the chips are down. But it is still a weapon, not an idol. Those persons in western Europe who have attempted to shut their eyes to the facts and have been most vocal in their demands for a pledge that the bomb will not be used first need to be reminded that the fear that it might be used is their best guarantee—and at present virtually their only guarantee—against being overrun.

Blow To Unity

The most critical aspect of the Republican vote of no confidence in Secretary Acheson is that it comes from a partisan source. It is undoubtedly true that a large segment of the American people would like to see Mr. Acheson replaced. The Republicans in Congress and many nonpartisan observers have lost no opportunity to let the President know their attitude, and it is reasonable to assume that the President has been weighing the question of whether a change of leadership in the State Department would do more harm than good. But this in no way excuses the Republicans for making a partisan issue of a matter that is vital to our security at this critical moment.

Of course, the President does not need to take any notice of this minority protest from Capitol Hill. The anti-Acheson resolutions were adopted only by the Republican caucuses of the House and Senate, not by Congress itself. And even if Congress had presumed to urge the dismissal of a Cabinet member, the President would be under no obligation to heed it. The entire executive power is vested in the President, and members of the Cabinet are responsible only to him. Mr. Truman is likely to respond to this pressure much as Lincoln did when congressional critics demanded the resignation of Secretary of State Seward during the Civil War.

In many respects the campaign against Seward is comparable to that against Mr. Acheson. Seward was resisting the demands of the extremists in Congress for immediate abolition of slavery and a purge of all Democratic generals from the Army. For this he was denounced as "the evil genius" of the Administration—"the mesmerist" and the "unseen hand" who was preventing the President from doing his "duty." When a group of New York Republicans waited on Lincoln to demand Seward's dismissal, he told them flatly: "There is not one of you who would not see the country ruined if you could turn out Seward."

In December, 1862, shortly after the battle of Fredericksburg, the Republican Senators met secretly and adopted a resolution calling for "partial reconstruction of the Cabinet." But instead of broadcasting their lack of confidence in the Secretary of State at a critical moment, a committee went to the White House to present the senatorial view to the President. Learning the nature of the mission, Seward hastily sent his resignation to Lincoln, but, after a skillful maneuver that brought in also the resignation of Secretary of the Treasury Chase, a favorite of the Senators, the President declined to accept either of them. Seward's critics had overplayed their hand, and the net result was to strengthen both his position and that of the President before the country.

Whatever may be the effect of the present Republican gesture on the future of Mr. Acheson, it has certainly rendered a disservice to the country. Senator Alexander Smith hit the nail on the head when he declared that the action his fellow Republicans in the Senate were rushing toward might mislead the world as to "the fundamental unity of the American people." That demonstration of disunity was made worse by the fact that it came just before Secretary Acheson departs for Brussels to attend the meeting of the North Atlantic Council.

In a last-minute effort to avoid the inevitable interpretation that will be placed on the incident abroad, the Senate Republicans added to their resolution a paragraph by Senator Taft pledging "our fullest cooperation with the President and the Administration in a united effort to meet by the most effective means the present national crisis." If this stood by itself, it would be a commendable and patriotic expression. But as a postscript to the demand for the scalp of Mr. Acheson (who, of course, is part of the Administration) it seems to be meaningless, insincere and contradictory. An offer by the minority to cooperate with the party in power on condition that the minority be permitted to purge the President's Cabinet is not cooperation but the opposite. There is no way to disguise this blow to unity in a time of national peril, and it will be difficult indeed to undo the damage it has done.

National Emergency

The President's proclamation of a national emergency is a warning signal that alerts the public to the dangers lying ahead. It reinforces his appeal to every citizen to "put aside his personal interests for the good of the country." Its chief value is psychological, although it will help to speed mobilization by restoring certain wartime control powers. Mr. Truman's Friday night broadcast, sketched in broad outline the objectives of this mobilization program—adherence to the principles of the United Nations for which we are fighting in Korea, a buildup of our armed forces to defend those principles, and assistance of other free nations to strengthen their defenses against Communist aggression. To attain these goals our production sights must be raised, civilian production must be cut back and efforts to control inflation must be intensified.

Mr. Truman told his radio audience that nearly 3½ million men and women will soon be on active duty in the Army, the Navy and the Air force, and that within a year plane production will be five times the present rate and combat vehicles will be coming off production lines at four times today's rate. These promises would be more reassuring if they had been supported by a detailed statement of the steps that are being taken to fulfill them. However, the creation of the Office of Defense Mobilization recognizes the need for a reorganization of the control mechanism and centralization of responsibility to avoid the kind of interagency conflicts that plagued the Government at the start of World War II.

After reviewing the steps already taken to hold down prices by credit restrictions and tax increases the President pointed out that further tax increases are needed. He urged immediate enactment of an excess profits tax, but he qualified his earlier demand to put the cost of defense on a pay-as-you-go basis by inserting an escape clause—"as nearly as possible." This retreat is made necessary by the accelerated pace of rearmament. Taxes high enough to cover the cost of the multibillion dollar defense plan would disrupt business and defeat efforts to increase production by siphoning off income required to provide more capital for expanding industries.

It was also reassuring to hear that selective price and wage controls are to be imposed at once on a number of materials and products important to defense production and living costs. Limited mandatory price controls of this kind can be enforced even by understaffed agencies, especially when applied to industries with administered prices. On the other hand, the decision to announce fair standards for prices and wages in cases where mandatory controls are not invoked is a variant of the plan (now abandoned) to impose voluntary controls on the automobile industry. We doubt the efficacy of efforts to hold the price line by voluntary means, although the President's threat to speed up imposition of mandatory controls, followed by the rollback of automobile prices, may have some deterrent effect.

Despite the sweeping control powers given the Chief Executive by the Defense Production Act, he is greatly hampered by the restrictions on his authority to set price ceilings on food products. As we pointed out recently, to put ceilings on wages presupposes, in logic, authority to control market basket items in the cost of living. Moreover, price control on a selective basis may be shipwrecked by the legislative injunction to stabilize wages in any industry whose products are under price ceilings. Selective wage controls of this sort would not work, nor would it be just to freeze the wages of any designated group of workers while living costs continue to rise.

We believe that the American people are willing to make the sacrifices required to preserve our free institutions. But they want to be sure that those sacrifices do not involve discriminatory treatment of any group or class. Consequently, we wish that the President had buttressed his appeal for public cooperation with an equally persuasive appeal to Congress for removal of the legislative obstacles to an equitable system of price controls.

Wilson: Warhorse

Charles E. Wilson may well say, "This is where I came in," for, in coming to the Capital as director of the Office of Defense Mobilization, he is returning to a familiar assignment. He was executive vice chairman of the War Production Board in the second World War. In this role, to quote an editorial in this newspaper on August 25, 1944, "he probably contributed more than any other single individual to the organization of American industry for war production." The manner in which he inspired aircraft and ships to come off the assembly lines and slip ways was something akin to Aladdin's lamp technique. No industrial bottleneck seemed to withstand him. Three times President Roosevelt sought to dissuade him from resigning, but, with authority diffused in the agency, the General Electric head felt there was no option to resignation when the President showed no sign of resolving the intra-agency differences.

This time, profiting by experience, Mr. Wilson has obtained from President Truman full authority in his new post. There will be no sharing of authority, nobody between him and the White House. Thus the new setup will capitalize upon the lessons of the war establishment of the second World War. That establishment went through many phases before it wound up with a single coordinator of the home war effort in the Office of War Mobilization The head of it, Mr. James F. Byrnes, was familiarly called the Assistant President. He had no operating job, and so was able to remove the domestic economic burden from the shoulders of a President who had a global task of running a world war.

The situations are not comparable, but Mr. Wilson's assignment partakes a good deal of Mr. Byrnes' at OWM, for Mr. Wilson will have overall authority for production, procurement, manpower, transport, and economic stabilization. This will bring about a centralization of function which the new facts of our world relations warrant. Some preliminary work has been done, but, as a result of the reliance upon existing agencies and upon voluntary effort, staff recruitment will be almost de novo. In looking around for a man who can best deliver the goods, the President could not have made a better choice, and he is to be congratulated not only upon the selection, but also upon his courage in delegating authority—authority which will make Mr. Wilson virtually commander-in-chief of the economic front.

The Sulgrave Brawl

The precise details of what happened Tuesday evening in the once gracious precincts of the Sulgrave Club are of no great importance. For whether you accept the account given by Mr. Drew Pearson, or that given by Senator McCarthy, it was still a thoroughly disgraceful business. It is another index to the degraded level to which American politics have been reduced and to the hysteria now prevailing in high quarters where the need of self-possession and sober judgment is greater than ever.

Unhappily, such incidents as the Sulgrave affair are not without historical precedent. Beginning with the notorious Lyon-Griswold brawl in 1798, they have frequently disgraced the proceedings of the House of Representatives, and sometimes even of the Senate. Yet it seems to us that there is even less excuse for such brawling among guests at a private social affair than among participants in a heated partisan debate. This brings us to Miss Steinman, the hostess of Tuesday evening. Whatever her motives, it was a singularly bad bit of social judgment for her to ask the Messrs. McCarthy and Pearson to the same party and of even worse judgment to seat them at the same table. If Miss Steinman was thus hoping to reconcile the two, it showed a singular naivete. If she was hoping for excitement, she was well rewarded. In either case it shows to what dangerous situations the passion for celebrity hunting may lead. The trouble with lion hunting is that sometimes the lions turn out to be wild beasts.

Considering the contempt for ordinary decencies that characterizes so many men in public life, the widespread demoralization of the young, so much deplored nowadays, is hardly to be wondered at. Alas, even the holder of the highest office in the land has not always set an example of decorum and restraint, but has shown himself all too willing to hurl opprobrious and unseemly epithets at those who for one reason or another have incurred his displeasure.

CRITICISM

Do not expect me to make little of my book of poems,
To make an apology because it sleeps fitfully on the shelves
With many of yesterday's poets.
I tell you that the agony and the piling of sentiment on sentiment
The way a young poet does
Was worth it all,
So, a speaker of the ladies' clubs fell asleep over it on a train,
And the critics wrote epitaphs in acid;
But today that was all made to be so little.
This noon in the library a young mill hand was reading my book.
His shirt was yellow with sweat and the hair grew down his back
And his hands were branded by the machines.
"What of the book?" I asked him,
He looked up and his dark eyebrows flared at the intrusion.
"The man is made," he said,
And kept on reading.

International Emergency

By Andre Visson

All-Out Armament

THE MILITARY situation in Korea remains the immediate concern of American military leaders in Washington. But it is not their major concern. "The seriousness of the situation," said Secretary of Defense Marshall, "is more in connection with its world-wide implications than merely the critical situation on the ground at the present time in Korea."

The American military leaders are suffering as much as private American citizens from the sad necessity of evacuating the United Nations forces from Korea. But they refuse to be obsessed by the reverses in Korea. For them what has happened in Korea is not a lost war, but only a lost battle. They feel confident that the people of the United States understand this. And their main worry is how to get this idea across to our friends in western Europe. Because unless the people of western Europe can be brought to see the military reverses in Korea in their proper proportion, there is little hope of expecting them to make the effort indispensable to the common defense of the nations that more than a year ago signed the North Atlantic Pact.

The proclaiming of a national emergency is expected to help step up the military mobilization and speed up defense production in the United States. But the opinion expressed in responsible circles here is that proclaiming a national emergency is not enough. It should be followed by all the member nations of the North Atlantic Pact proclaiming an international emergency.

RESPONSIBLE circles in Washington realize, however, that the western European nations are as yet psychologically unprepared for such a move. American leaders view a speeded-up rearmament, and a determination by all free nations to maintain their unity in this hour of gravest crisis, as our last chance to reduce the growing danger of a new world war. But many people in western Europe are in fear that an immediate general rearmament may increase rather than reduce the danger. And above all, they fear that there may no longer be time for them to make the necessary effort to achieve adequate defense against the Red army, which might any day invade their countries.

Moscow propaganda is naturally making good use of our reverses in Korea to stir up these European fears. The Germans appear to be the immediate target of such Soviet propaganda. Like the Koreans, themselves divided into two zones, they are naturally inclined to think in Korean terms. But other continental Europeans feel almost as uncomfortable as the Germans. They hate the thought of their countries once more becoming world war battlefields. But the prospect of Korean-style American beachheads in their overrun countries is positively nightmarish to them.

This is indeed a ghastly thought. But western Europeans, whose fears are perfectly understood in Washington, would do well to bear in mind that further involvment of America's military might in Korea—or in neighboring China—would have been much more ghastly for western Europe than the partial evacuation of Korea and the maintaining of American beachheads.

IT IS understandable that many western Europeans should be in fear that a Korean-type debacle might happen to them. But they should realize that our plight in Korea is to a great extent due to our determination not to let ourselves be diverted from the more important military objective—the defense of western Europe. To be sure, if we could have smashed the Chinese Communists as easily as we did the Korean Communists, western Europeans would now feel more hopeful and more determined to arm in their own defense. But every American diplomatic or military move aimed at reducing the danger of an all-out war in Asia and at preserving America's military power, should be interpreted in Europe not as a sign of America's weakness, but as an expression of America's determination to continue to consider western Europe as the main line of defense.

To emphasize this determination Washington made two decisions calculated to give western Europe badly needed shots in the arm. One is to let General Eisenhower assume the command of the armed forces yet to be created. The other, to send Secretary of State Acheson to the conference of the North Atlantic Foreign Ministers at Brussels.

The prestige of Secretary Acheson in Europe has beyond doubt suffered greatly from the attacks the Secretary has been subjected to at home. But by dispatching Mr. Acheson to Brussels for two days, and by authorizing General Eisenhower to shortly establish his headquarters somewhere on the European continent, Washington was trying to give western Europe convincing evidence of its continued determination to organize the defense of Europe.

At the same time, however, it should be repeated over and over again that all America's determination will bear no fruit unless western Europe realizes that this is an international emergency which calls for urgent international rearmament.

No Truce Possible

I have devoted the last three years to an intensive study of Marxian doctrine. In the light of that study I would like to state the following:

1. There cannot be any peace or any understanding between the United States and a Leninist-Marxist nation.

2. One can no more be a part-time Communist than one can be a part-time virgin. As long as a man is a member of the Communist Party he is a Leninist-Marxist.

3. No treaty or understanding reached with a Leninist-Marxist country can possibly be to our advantage. If such an agreement were to our advantage, they would not conclude it. If they concluded it, they would not abide by it.

4. The cumulative effect of all this is that the United States is now fighting for its life and that we cannot reach any advantageous truce or peace in Korea or elsewhere. In God's name, then, let us get on with the fight and not deceive ourselves by cheap hopes, or let ourselves be tricked into another Munich.

Loving Our Enemies

In your issue of December 9, a reader objects to Selective Service regulations which "allow thousands of conscientious objectors to be free of combat duty." The writer points out that most soldiers do not believe in killing their fellow men, but states that by so doing they "made their country a safe place in which the CO is so readily willing to live . . ."

It is reassuring to know that someone thinks the world is a safer place as the result of World War II. It may be doubted, however, that the view is shared by most of the rest of the world, or even by many of our own people, who see evil Communists behind or under every Government desk.

There is nothing that this Government or any other can do to make a conscientious objector participate in warfare. Many German COs accepted death in concentration camps rather than agree to military service; and our Government can hardly use more persuasive devices. Many COs simply believe that, as Christians, they have no choice but to follow Christ's teaching of loving one's enemies and turning the other cheek. They believe that they do not need an interpreter to explain the meaning of the commandment: "Thou shalt not kill." And they view with wonder and grief the churches of Christ which fear to tell people to do what Christ would have done.

We entered World War I to make the world safe for democracy, but we created dictatorship. We entered World War II to destroy dictatorship, but we destroyed some only to augment others—the most dangerous in history. Now we talk of rebuilding the military machines we have just destroyed, in order to destroy another.

Isn't it time we stopped thinking that by war we can achieve peace? Isn't it time to place our trust in another way, taught by the Prince of Peace?

WALTER R. VOLCKHAUSEN.

Uruguay's Contribution

That stalwart democracy, Uruguay, has proved again that its people are willing to translate their love of freedom into practical terms. Looking over an official listing by the United Nations of the material assistance offered by 15 Latin American republics in the Korean crisis, I was deeply impressed by Uruguay's contribution—two million dollars and 70,000 blankets.

Two million dollars (not pesos) is a very real contribution from a country smaller than the State of Kansas with a population about the same as that of Oklahoma, a country without oil or rich mineral deposits. That two million dollars is equal to more than $1 per adult in Uruguay. And 70,000 blankets of Uruguayan wool, woven in Uruguayan mills, is no mean contribution, either.

From my personal knowledge of Uruguayans, I am certain they do not consider their special contribution to the United Nations a sacrifice. For sometime now they have had face to face dealings with dictatorship on their doorstep and have given sanctuary to refugees for freedom.

Kensington Dogs

The picture and the story in your issue of December 13 on the "irate delegation" of Kensington residents parading placards "Kensington Won't Go to the Dogs" should have some clarifying information added, if it exists, to justify the community's objection to a proposed animal shelter. Any community objecting to an effort to provide a place for stray animals—temporarily or permanently—cannot have its own interests at heart.

The news report gives no plausible explanation of their reaction, and I can only feel quite certain that under the circumstances most dogs wouldn't go to Kensington!

Flaws In Universal Service

Various proposals have been advanced in the interest of national security. The present shortage of manpower in the United States makes all of them difficult to implement. Military needs with respect to available men suitable for such services greatly increase the difficulties. Most people who know what the world situation is are convinced that diplomacy now must be supported with ample military power.

To arrive at a solution, President Conant and others propose that all young men 18 years of age, or at the time of graduation from high school if this date is later, be drafted. Those militarily capable would be assigned to that service; those incapable would be assigned to other forms of service.

One danger is that of an overextension of our resources and manpower. That there are limits to both is certain. Unless and until other countries are prepared to utilize their own resources and manpower to the fullest possible extent, it is folly for the United States to drain her own well dry.

This concern is not a mere figure of speech. For instance, we oldsters propose to draft all the youngsters without their consideration or consent—all of them. It is admitted that some colleges may be killed and that all of them will inevitably be crippled by this action. Does this proposal consider that these institutions constitute social frills, or are they as necessary for national safety as guns and factories?

Many and serious questions are unanswered. For example, if all young men are drafted for a period of two years, will two classes be dropped from national military academies? What will happen to collegiate programs of education and military training in those institutions with R.O.T.C. and N.R.O.T.C. units and some others of similar character?

Moreover, military establishments need engineers, doctors, dentists and hosts of technical specialists. The civilian economy absorbs approximately 50,000 engineers annually; in addition there are requirements of the military. The exact figures for doctors, dentists and other professional personnel are not known, but they must be comparably high with engineering needs. Is it proposed that this needed pool of scientific and specialized personnel be allowed to dry up? If not, then how shall it be filled under the proposed plan for universal service?

The American Association of Junior Colleges proposes that education and military training be provided concurrently for college and technical students. Essentially military schools have demonstrated that their product does not constitute a mere reserve force. The further extension of the plan could be thorough and realistic enough to produce capable military personnel in being and not merely in reserve. Naturally, field training in division and Army complements would be required. Camp experiences for at least three months during each year could supply some of this experience; additional training would come rapidly with personnel integrated into fighting units.

Some students would prefer to take military training first and go to college afterward. That would be their choice. If a student does go to college, however, and is acceptable to the military, he must take military training in addition to his full college curriculum. Whenever he fails to do satisfactory work in either military or academic work, he will be called into field duty. There should be scholarships provided for young men of high quality but who need some financial assistance. These would tend to equalize opportunities and make use of our greatest natural resources in human abilities.

Why do we need to put our eggs in one basket by the proposed system of universal service? Why not allow young men to volunteer for the regular military services, or join the National Guard, or get education and military training at essentially military schools and others which can be organized along the same general lines?

Then there is the astounding proposal that men unfit for military duty be assigned to other forms of service. Just what, for instance? Whom would they work for? Who would be responsible for them? What would their wages be, if "they should not be high"? If they are employed in essential industries at a soldier's rate of pay, who will get the profits? What would organized labor say about this form of enforced labor? Before we embark on a course of the "all or none" theory, it may be well to consider the great dangers ahead.

If the time comes when the United States may have to fight great hordes of enemies, we should select the weapons, devise the methods and determine the place of combat. This cannot be done without superior intelligence, education, training and what is known as firepower. You can't have these essential factors by closing schools and colleges, by stopping dead for even two years the flow of professional and technically trained personnel. It is not necessary to force choices on the country for either education or military training. Both can be provided concurrently.

JESSE PARKER BOGUE,
Executive Secretary, American Association of Junior Colleges.

"Harry Gold"

Congratulations on your December 11 editorial on Harry Gold. Your reasoning is what we have been proclaiming for years regarding modern education being to blame for so much of today's wrong thinking and action.

The public must be awakened to the part the schools are playing with today's youth, and there must be a change to stop the trend which is rapidly doing away with individual initiative, ambition and pride in accomplishment.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

U. S. Has TV, Reds Have Radar

By Drew Pearson

A PLAIN-SPOKEN MAN with a shrewd twinkle in his eye gave bored Washington reporters an exhilarating shot of straight talk the other day. He was Dr. Vannevar Bush, wartime boss of United States science and now a member of the "Citizens' Committee on the Present Danger."

Dr. Bush, a lean figure with a long face, was asked at a press conference about Soviet defenses against the atom bomb.

"In the five years since the end of the war," Dr. Bush replied, "we've built a fine television network. Instead, the Russians built a radar network. We'd better get busy!"

The reporters stopped doodling on their notepaper and sat up.

"I haven't got anything against television," the gruff scientiest continued. "I guess it's good entertainment. But the Russians are developing defenses against our delivering the A-bomb on primary targets, while we work on entertainment."

The shrewd eyes behind the steel-rimmed spectacles looked challengingly at newsmen.

"If anyone has any illusions that the Russians won't move because of scruples," Dr. Bush barked, "the Korean war ought to wake him up. We've got to get busy!"

AT A LUNCH at the Carlton Hotel just after his confirmation by the Senate as Price Administrator, Mike DiSalle looked down the menu to pick out a dessert. Finally he came upon one named "Profiterolles," a small pastry filled with ice cream.

"Well," cracked DiSalle, "I don't know what it is, but if it's got anything to do with profits, I'd better look into it."

THOUGH RUSSIA has been talking big, most people don't realize that she has been doing little about the world's economic and social welfare. Here is the record of Soviet action, which speaks louder than Soviet propaganda:

International Relief Organization—The United States has contributed 237 million dollars, Russia nothing.

International Children's Emergency Fund—The United States has donated 74 million dollars, Russia not a Red ruble.

International Bank for Financing the Economic Development of Backward Areas—The United States has subscribed 635 million dollars and pledged another three billion dollars; Russia has given her indorsement but no cash.

Palestine Refugee Organization—The United States has contributed 30 million dollars; Russia zero.

ONE OF THE BIGGEST headaches of our defense planning is the possibility of a second Pearl Harbor from within.

This could take the form of a sudden, Nation-wide campaign of enemy sabotage—directed at war industries as well as key individuals in Washington—before we even knew we were in an all-out war. The idea would be to stun the civilian front into panic before we were set to strike back militarily.

However, the use of explosives or other devices to cripple war plant machinery, communications, etc., probably would take a back seat in this highly specialized age of sabotage. The modern saboteur has a much deadlier and simpler weapon at his command—poisoning of water.

What the Nation has to be prepared for is an enemy attempt to kill off the personnel operating key factories as well as key leaders of Government. This could be accomplished by a simple device which can be attached to a water spigot.

If, for instance, enemy agents wanted to wipe out every member of Congress or the top military brains in the Pentagon, they could attach a secret vial-like device to a spigot by a rubber nozzle. Meanwhile, an accomplice would damage a water main or commit some other act of sabotage—thereby shutting off the water supply in the building. Once this happens, the poison contaminant is back-siphoned into the big water mains supplying the building.

A number of the Nation's top scientists are concerned about this threat of water sabotage, while the University of Pennsylvania has sent an urgent report on the subject to a few top defense chiefs in Washington.

A CRAFTY and powerful weapon, as old as war itself, is hastily being revived by the Army in the pine-covered hills around Fort Benning, Ga.—guerilla warfare.

At this Army Infantry School, volunteers are being taught to creep behind an enemy unit and ambush it, or to steal into an enemy center and blow up stores of ammunition. These are the tricks used by American Indians when they massacred British Redcoats, and now by Communist guerillas in Korea.

At one time, the Indian fighters of the United States Army were masters of guerilla fighting, but the technique was lost except for a few units in World War II. Gen. Walter Kreuger's Alamo Scouts saved hundreds of lives by weakening the Japs in the rear, but this lore was neglected by all but a few officers in the interim between World War II and Korea.

When the first fighting in Korea showed a need for guerilla training, tough Col. John G. Van Houten was ordered to train Ranger units, one company to a division, at Fort Benning. The men are all volunteers who understand they will be killed—if caught by the enemy.

They are taught how to stay away from the main roads, cut their way through underbrush and travel 4 to 5 miles an hour for long distances. Each man must know how to take care of his own wounds, operate a radio sending set, cook, handle small arms, a bazooka and a mortar. They will be placed behind enemy lines by parachute drop, or by submarines.

With the terrible lessons of Korea fresh in their minds, the Joint Chiefs of Staff are also studying the proposal that all troops be taught rudiments of guerilla offense and defense.

The Magazine Rack

By Orval Hopkins

WE KNEW we couldn't trust them, yet we trusted them. Max Ascoli in the Reporter writes that when we went into Korea, we were relying on an unspoken agreement with the enemy that the war would be kept limited. "Because we could not trust the enemy's word, we took our chance and trusted his silence. When he started threatening, we trusted our deafness."

Ascoli goes on, mincing no words: "The first thing to do now is to arm as fast and as well as we can. The records of quick rearmament established during the last war have to be surpassed." And if we must fight, "we can defend ourselves and the United Nations mostly with what we are best at, which is sea-air power. . . . Ours is a wounded, not by any means a defeated, country. . . . If (the enemy) wants to fight, so do we, but on a terrain of our choosing and with our strongest weapons," says Ascoli.

Irving Howe, also in the Reporter, assesses today's novels and novelists, finds both wanting. "The younger writers," he says, "seem to have a rare opportunity to assert themselves, but . . . they fail to take over. . . . Our young writers are characterized most of all by an unwillingness to take chances with their careers and their work." Fine cartoons all through the issue.

A HERETIC named Talbot Pearson says in Theater Arts that "the tradition of regular theatergoing has vanished in this country, and the harsh fact must be faced that the great majority of the citizenry prefers the movie, the radio, television or even a game of canasta to the theater." Part of the reason is traffic. "People can't get around as they did 20, or even 10 years ago . . . traffic has grown heavier (and so have they, perhaps), and they're older and less inclined to roam in search of entertainment." All this is Pearson's way of furthering and encouraging the development of the community theater.

BOTH Newsweek and Time, not to mention Quick, took due note of the now celebrated "HST" letter to Paul Hume of The Washington Post. Time said the letter "turned up on page one of the tabloid Washington News" it was on page 3), and that "Critic Hume was the only one concerned who seemed to have kept his head." Newsweek praised Hume's "Christian forbearance."

JOHN HERSEY sets forth in the New Yorker how the story about "consideration" of use of the atomic bomb was worried out of the President at a press conference. Hersey points out that the statement the President read made no mention of the bomb, and that at no time was the bomb, let alone the use of it, given any consideration during preparation of the statement. The President's words, he says, were twisted until they set an already edgy world to shaking in its shoes.

WHOSE BOOTS Are You Licking? is the discomfiting query put by David Harold Fink in Your Life. Like everything else, kowtowing has its roots in childhood, according to Fink. In order to whip this tendency to toady, you simply write it all down, Fink says. "If you think of yourself as spineless and stupid and yellow, put it down. Don't gloss over the facts." Then you write down what you'd like to be or do. After that, it's simply off with the old, on with the new.

BOB CONSIDINE has done a short piece for Collier's about Luchow's restaurant in New York. It is reputedly the only article ever written about Luchow's which failed to mention Ludwig Bemelmans. It also fails to mention, incidentally, James Brahms, who, with L. J. Mitchell, is an owner of Luchow's and of Olmsted's in Washington.

Collier's carries a story by Gordon Schendel about Gallaudet College, the only college in the world for the deaf. It is aptly titled, "Happy Talk on a Silent Campus."

Also in Collier's: Ten Christmas Favorites, including items by Joyce Kilmer, Heywood Broun, Temple Bailey, Louisa May Alcott and Sir Walter Scott, plus the Yes, Virginia, There Is a Santa Claus editorial by Francis P. Church, which first appeared in the New York Sun in 1897.

VIRTUALLY ALL the United Nations employes in New York like the United States—like the generosity and friendliness they find here, reports Clarence Woodbury in the American. Everybody talked happily with Woodbury about what a great big wonderful country we have. Then he met the Russians. Or attempted to. "I tried repeatedly," he writes, "to make the acquaintance of some Soviet employes of the U. N., but did not succeed in doing so." Woodbury suspects there's an iron curtain.

PRESENT-DAY PICTURES of Walter Camp's last (1924) all-America football team are carried in Life. It was the year of the Four Horsemen of Notre Dame, Red Grange of Illinois and Ed Garbisch of Army, who beat Navy on four dropkicked field goals.

Also in Life, a pictorial essay, How United States Cities Can Prepare for Atomic War. And another picture story detailing the vicissitudes of Howard Barnes of the New York Herald Tribune, who saw and wrote about six plays in six successive days.

A MIGHTY PAEAN for Portland, Ore., is contained in the Saturday Evening Post. It is written by, as you might surmise, Richard L. Neuberger, who has been carrying on a flagrant affair with the Pacific Northwest for 38 years.

Lucius Beebe has written, in Holiday, a somewhat pedestrian piece about Nob Hill, San Francisco. Boca Raton, Fla., Hot Springs, Ark., and Atlanta, Ga., also are given the complete treatment in Holiday.

FASCINATING STORY in Magazine Digest (condensed from Argosy) tells how they run moonshine in hot-rods in the valleys of the Blue Ridge. The runner buys moon for $2 or $3 a gallon, runs it at 80 to 120 m.p.h., sometimes at night with the lights out, a couple of hundred miles to an industrial center, and sells it for $5 or $6 a gallon. He will make two or three literally death-defying trips a night. The author is John Stuart Martin.

HOW TO CURE an Inferiority Complex, in Science Digest, by James F. Bender and Lee Graham, is taken from their book. One way to cure the thing is by direct action (if you don't have muscles, get some). Another is to keep it to yourself (let people think you're better than you think you are). Another is to regale yourself with your successes (raises your self-esteem).

THE PAMPERED SOLDIER is a poor soldier, asserts Marshall Andrews in Armor. The Army rookie, Andrews says, needs not so much a course in "orientation" as he does "something tangible and understandable to him upon which he may fix his loyalty and his pride." In short, the unit he serves in. The heart of this outfit is the junior officer, Andrews believes, adding that it is this man that the military is neglecting. "The qualities men cherish in a leader," he says, "are not condescension and patronage but consideration, fairness, rectitude and competence."

COVER MAN for the current Pathfinder is Edward W. Barrett, Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs and master of the Voice of America. Story inside on how the Voice operates is by Beverley M. Bowie, and a Herblock cartoon is included.

Dieting Advice for 'Poor Losers'

By Alton L. Blakeslee

NEW YORK.—Don't let the water bugaboo discourage you from staying on a diet to lose weight.

The water trouble is a queer one, for some people. They may follow a diet of little food for up to two weeks, and still not lose any weight.

Their trouble is that their bodies retain water more tenaciously than other persons'. It doesn't seem to make much, if any, difference how much liquid they drink—their bodies take liquid from ordinary foods.

When they do finally start to lose weight, they lose it rapidly for a few days. By the end of a month, they have lost as much weight as other people who began to lose weight right at the outset.

This word of patience and encouragement comes in a report on fatness by the Northwestern National Life Insurance Co. The water-retention is one reason for a false belief that "some people stay fat regardless of how little they eat."

FATNESS, it warns, promotes disease and makes various ailments more deadly.

"You are 25 percent more likely to die at age 45 if you are 25 pounds overweight. Fifty pounds of excess weight puts you in a group with a 50 percent higher death rate than normal.

"Among overweight people there is more heart disease, more kidney trouble, more diabetes, far more cancer and three times as much high blood pressure as among people of average weight. Fat people have more falls and other accidents."

The way out is to eat less food. Almost everyone who is overweight gets that way from eating more food than he needs. That goes for children, too, who may get the heavy eating habit from their family customs.

THE REPORT advises seeking a doctor's aid in how to cut down your food intake, to assure getting plenty of vitamins and minerals.

"A severe cut in the amount of food usually works out best; results are so slow with a mild cut in eating that the dieter gets discouraged. The first three days on a reducing diet are the hardest. Then the stomach adjusts to the smaller amount of food taken in, and staying with the program becomes much easier."

Daily weighings on a bathroom scale help chart the progress in taking off bulges. But once you get down to the weight you want, look out, for "you can get the fat back much faster and easier than you lost it."

Some other tips:

Exercise helps, but "you need to climb 20 flights of stairs to lose the weight put on you by one extra slice of bread. Leaving out the excess food is easier on you in every way."

"Massage can benefit many troubles, but fat can't be massaged away."

There's "no effective and harmless reducing drug known to medical science, except thyroid extract when used in those rare cases where thyroid deficiency is actually the cause of excess fat. The three main ways in which so-called 'reducing prescriptions' work, if they work at all, are by numbing the appetite, by disturbing bodily functions or by small-scale poisoning."

Lesson in the Rosenberg Charges

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

ALTHOUGH the Senate Military Affairs Committee has now unanimously cleared Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg of the charge of being a Communist, the incident should not end there. The Rosenberg case means, in fact, that a new sort of American underworld has now gained the power to trouble the policy and impede the Government of the United States of America. Something ought to be done about it, as any honorable American who reads the whole story will heartily agree.

Anna Rosenberg, the victim of the charge of communism, is a splendid proof of the occasional truth of what used to be called the American dream.

A self-made woman, foreign born, Anna Rosenberg has made for herself such a position that great corporations pay great sums for her advice, and leaders of America are proud to be her friends.

One of these friends, Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall, asked her to serve as his assistant secretary in charge of manpower problems. Mrs. Rosenberg sacrificed a staggering income in order to accept, simply because she feels passionate loyalty and gratitude to the adopted country that has done so much for her.

The name of this remarkable woman, then, was sent by Secretary Marshall some weeks ago to the Senate Military Affairs Committee. At this moment, when the appointment became known, subsequent testimony indicates that a meeting took place in Washington between the professional anti-Semite and tinpot amateur Fascist, Gerald L. K. Smith, and a certain friend of Smith's, Benjamin Freedman.

FREEDMAN describes himself as "an excommunicated Jew." His character may be best gauged by a suit for criminal libel which he rather inexplicably brought, a little while ago, against Bernard M. Baruch, Thomas H. Watson of International Business Machines, and other well-known men.

Before the astounded magistrate threw out his suit, Freedman had publicly, if somewhat irrelevantly, charged the prominent New York jurist and leader of the Jewish community, Judge Joseph Proskauer, with conspiring with Cardinal Spellman to exclude him from the Catholic Church.

At their Washington meeting, Freedman and Gerald L. K. Smith discussed Mrs. Rosenberg's nomination as Assistant Secretary of Defense. Evidently spurred on by Smith, Freedman then sought out the New York lawyer, Hallomb Richardson, who has served as counsel for another tinpot amateur Fascist, Joe McWilliams. Richardson, in turn, put Freedman in touch with a man called Ralph de Sola.

De Sola is a former Communist, now in the public relations business. His last job was with an organization called the Society for the Preservation of Patriotic and Religious Music. Some light is perhaps cast on De Sola by a suit his former employer, the society, brought against the Metropolitan Opera Company, the Texas Oil Co. and the American Broadcasting Corporation. In course of this suit, the society charged the defendants with Communist leanings, because they were implicated in a broadcast of Guiseppe Verdi's opera, "Don Carlo."

AT FREEDMAN'S BEHEST, De Sola prepared an affidavit stating that he and his former wife had sat next to Mrs. Rosenberg at a meeting of the John Reed Club in the late 1930s, and that fellow Communists had then told him she was a party member. A little later, Freedman handed over this affidavit and some other similar material to representatives of Senator Joseph R. McCarthy and the news commentator, Fulton Lewis. Freedman has testified that he did not know these men, but that their reliability was guaranteed to him, before they called for the papers, by Gerald L. K. Smith.

Somewhat later, Freedman returned to Washington, went to the office of Representative John Rankin, and there prepared a circular letter to the members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, repeating De Sola's and other charges. Thus the cry of "Communist" was raised. Although Freedman was utterly unknown to them at that time, the committee held up Mrs. Rosenberg's confirmation and began hearings.

A typical sample of the testimony against Mrs. Rosenberg was De Sola's claim that his former wife and a certain James Magraw, another public relations man, would fully corroborate his charge. When called to the stand, both Magraw and the former Mrs. De Sola denounced De Sola as totally undependable, and described his story about Mrs. Rosenberg as the purest fabrication.

The general character of the attack on Mrs. Rosenberg was such, in fact, as to lead the extreme-conservative Republican, Senator Harry Cain of Washington, to talk about perjury indictments.

All this may seem very comical. But in the first place, some names that crop up in this extraordinary history belong to men whom many Americans regard as paladins of the free society. And in the second place, this squalid business has occupied a great deal of the time of some of the most important men in Washington at a moment of dire national peril.

The Senators were frankly afraid to let the matter drop, because of the power that the cry of "Communist" now has. The lesson is simple. Just because we caught a glimpse of the Communist lower depths in the Hiss case, we really need not yield to blackmail by the lower depths at the other end of the political spectrum.

A Set of Sensitive Notebooks Guides the New Price Chief

By Ken Davis

TOLEDO, Ohio.—Michael Vincent DiSalle, the rolypoly Midwesterner who is going to handle your price problems, is shopping for a bigger notebook.

That's important for you, too, because that notebook will be the foundation of an attempt by 42-year-old "Mike" DiSalle, lately mayor of this town, to be a good National Price Administrator.

Years ago, "Mike" bought the first of a long line of notebooks. Into it and its successors, each item that came up was faithfully scrawled — even reports of howling dogs. Each item was checked off after action had been taken.

"Mike" went through hundreds of little notebooks. The first time he bounds into the White House to report on his progress with prices, it's an even money wager the latest notebook will be with him.

TOLEDOANS have grown to like the man with the notebook far beyond the affection given ordinary mayors. They never had a mayor, they say, who gave them such service for $4200 a year.

The Nation's new price stabilizer is a complex man, and his obsession with feeling the pulse of the people via scrawled notebooks is obviously only part of the answer to his popularity.

Perhaps another part of the answer lies in the man's wit. The town still is chuckling over the story—true or fanciful—that came out after former King Michael of Romania visited Toledo. At a banquet, so the story goes, many persons spoke to the mayor and each called him "Mike."

"I notice everyone calls you 'Mike'," said the King. "You know, it's very unusual for a mayor to be called by his first name."

To which DiSalle replied, with his usual disarming smile: "If more people called you 'Mike', you might still be king."

THE MAYOR'S popularity couldn't be based on the DiSalle physique, which borders on the wide-as-he-is-tall side. The DiSalle face is round and split in the middle by a big grin and a small mustache. The DiSalle body is somewhere in the neighborhood of 5 feet 6, and the DiSalle weight moves up and down around 200 pounds.

Set this much bulk on rather small legs that slant in at the knees and small feet that slant out on the floor, and you don't come up with a mayor who gets places on romantic appeal.

The President once said that the job of price director demanded a man with guts. DiSalle's comment, with a finger pointing to his own stomach, was: "He's found him."

Perhaps "Mike" gets there on sheer energy. Just being mayor, he puts in a consistent 16-hour day. He's in the office at 8 a. m. and seldom gets home before midnight.

THE NEW Price Administrator was born in New York City January 6, 1908, the son of parents born in Vasta, Italy. His ancestors moved to Italy from France during the French Revolution.

He came with his parents to Toledo in 1911, attended Toledo public schools, was graduated from Georgetown University law school and began practicing in Toledo in 1932.

In the next 18 years, DiSalle achieved a number of successes, including a term as State Representative (1937-38), five terms as a City Councilman, a term as vice mayor and a term as mayor—the city's first Democratic mayor in 16 years.

DiSalle had a number of failures, too. He was unsuccessful in getting the Ninth Congressional District seat in 1946 and the party nomination for Senator this year.

Capping all his successes was an excursion into the field of industrial relations. He founded the idea of a Toledo Labor-Management Committee through which citizens could have a part in keeping down disputes.

"Mike" DiSalle, the Nation's new Price Stabilizer, as sketched by AP Newsfeatures Artist H. E. Munhall

The idea caught on in Toledo and nationally. The committee put a virtual end to a long history of industrial unrest in the city.

As much as anything, this hoisted DiSalle into the prominence that made him a leader in the organization of the Ohio Association of Municipalities and election as its first president last year. This led to his appointment as adviser to the United States Conference of Mayors.

THE MAYOR of Toledo has a home life, although his crowded schedule hardly looks like it. He is rated the champion spaghetti cook of Toledo, and he is a fabulous host with his specialty. He has entertained scores at a time in his huge old home in one of the city's middle-class neighborhoods.

Our Economy

Food Supply Is Crack in Soviet Mail

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

THE MILITARY setbacks in Korea have raised anxious questions in the American mind about the overwhelming manpower of China and the USSR.

Just how great is the numerical advantage may be seen when we consider that by drafting 10 percent of their population these two Communist powers could mobilize 70 million men. Their armed forces may be described as manpower-intensive. Our military potential, on the other hand, lies in the capital intensity of the American economy. In simpler terms this means that they depend on men; we, on machines.

An American soldier goes into the lines supported by equipment which represents hundreds of man-hours of labor. Capital is, in a very real sense, stockpiled labor. It has the advantage over manpower that it can be made in advance and employed at any later time and place. Direct manpower, on the other hand, must be used on a specific job at a specific time and place.

But even though capital has this striking advantage, the two are for the most part interchangeable. To illustrate: The Chinese government has drafted one man from every Canton household to build two airfields for defense of the city. The job which China will do with thousands of coolies, we could do with a handful of men plus bulldozers, tractors, graders and cement mixers. But in China labor is cheap; in America, machines.

THESE FACTS are simple enough, and widely understood in this country. But we seem not to have grasped the consequences which flow from them.

Because we are a capital-intensive nation, our military power really depends on our industry. China's power on the other hand, does not depend on her industry: she is the outstanding example of a manpower-intensive economy. The USSR lies somewhere in between, but compared to ours, her economy is manpower-intensive.

When we look at the facts in this light, they lead to surprising strategic conclusions. We have subscribed overwhelmingly to the doctrine of victory through airpower. More specifically, we believe in victory through an atomic blitz. We believe that all that has deterred Russia from starting a global war is fear of the atomic bomb.

But the ugly and dismaying fact is that once Russia acquires a stockpile of bombs—not necessarily as large as our own, merely a reasonable stockpile—and so long as she has the bombers to deliver them, she can do far more damage to our war potential than we can do to hers. Industrial power is peculiarly and fatally vulnerable to this kind of warfare.

Time is not on our side. The USSR can make atomic bombs faster than we can build or replace what the bomb destroys. And every bomb the Russians deliver will strike at the very source of our power—indeed, at the only advantage we possess. It is folly to suppose that a handicap like this is outweighed by creating a few land divisions for the defense of Western Europe.

MANPOWER, when it is at all dispersed, cannot be reached by atomic weapons. Our cities and our industries can. How then, lacking the advantages of numbers, can we strike most effectively should we be involved in a general war with Russia and China?

Men are vulnerable to a lack of food: this fact has been understood since before the siege of Troy. Germany used submarine blockade against Britain in both World Wars, and the Allies used naval blockade against Germany.

The Eurasian land mass has a bare self-sufficiency in food. The balance is so precarious that any upset—drought, flood or blight—can turn it into an area of food deficit. In the past quarter century the Russians have suffered two major famines. In China, famines recur with monotonous persistence.

Under these circumstances, warfare directed against the enemy's agriculture could be decisive. China and the USSR are far more vulnerable to a reduction in food supply than to destruction of their industry.

This fact poses new strategic problems, but not necessarily insoluble ones. We have lulled ourselves for five years with the dream that if attacked we could overwhelm our enemies with an atomic blitz, though it is we ourselves who are most vulnerable to this kind of warfare. It is time we recognized the economic basis of Asia's military power and turned our attention to methods which promise more success.

Stomach Ulcer Healed in Boy, 6

CHICAGO.—The case of a 6-year-old boy with a stomach ulcer is described in the journal Radiology by Drs. James F. Martin and Henry F. Saunders of Western Reserve University Medical School and Babies and Childrens Hospital of University Hospitals of Cleveland. X-rays found the ulcer, and medical treatments healed it. Medical literature, they said, shows at least 18 other cases of stomach ulcers in infants or children. More frequent use of X-ray diagnosis likely will turn up even more cases of ulcers in children, they said.

District Affairs

Street Cleaners Deserve Applause

By Harry N. Stull

THE AVERAGE householder appreciates the importance of the Division of Sanitation of the District Government, because its duties include the collection of ashes, trash and garbage. Ashes and trash are collected once a week and garbage twice a week. Because of the extensive use of gas and oil for heating, the amount of ashes collected has dropped. The amount of garbage collected has fallen from a high of 115,000 tons annually to about 90,000 tons, due in large measure to changes in the eating habits of the people.

STULL

Among the unpleasant but necessary duties of this division are the removal of dead animals and the collection of night soil, the latter by contract. The garbage collected is given to nearby farmers, and one third of it is collected by the farmers themselves.

Under the law, no refuse collections may be made from apartment houses which have four or more apartments and are centrally heated. However, the division does gather up in a year more than three million cubic yards of trash, of which one third is consumed by incinerators and two thirds is burned on a dump or open incinerator at Kenilworth.

Another duty of this branch is the cleaning of streets, including snow removal. The latter involves the use of sand trucks, 65 to 100 snow plows and equipment from the Highway and Sewer Departments. This city is seldom required to cope with heavy snow falls, and therefore is not as well equipped to handle them are are cities farther north.

Occasional complaints are received about paper, broken glass and other litter on sidewalks and streets. No amount of publicity seems to deter those who willfully scatter trash on the public streets, yet, with thousands of miles of highways in this city, the job of cleaning them is pretty well done.

THE PROGRESS now being made in the city's civil defense organization will be seriously affected by the decision of the House Appropriations Subcommittee to postpone consideration of the needed appropriations until the next session of Congress. This appears to have been based on uncertainty as to what material and funds are to be furnished by the Federal Government.

This probably means that until Congress gets around to appropriating the three billion dollars requested by the President for civil defense throughout the country, and until it is decided how to allocate this sum, no money will be available locally, and civil defense here will have to proceed without money in an area which experts designate as the enemy's primary target.

The attempts by civil defense heads of Maryland, Virginia and the District to reach an agreement for mutual defense in the Metropolitan Area has seemingly run into another delay. It now appears that whatever compact is arrived at by these authorities, involving the jurisdiction of police and fire units operating outside their legal boundaries, the mutual exchange of supplies and arrangements for the housing of bombed-out persons, must await approval by the States and by Congress acting for the District.

One matter that will have to be dealt with, and about which little has been said, is sabotage. Protection against this form of attack is an ever-present necessity, if we are to be guided by what has occurred in other parts of the world. Whether the police force is adequate to deal with it, or whether other agencies should be given authority, is extremely important in the over-all picture of civil defense.

THE APPROACHING Christmas season, with its daily crowds of shoppers, puts an additional burden on the Traffic Department. Each holiday season brings a shocking increase in traffic deaths and injuries, much of it the fault of those whose celebration of this day takes the form of inebriation and attempting to drive a motor vehicle at the same time. Ordinary care during this period is not enough.

How a German Would Break Up a Cartel

sent to the American High Commissioner by their president, Hans Boeckler, have also objected to the decartelization of I. G. Farbenindustrie as disastrous to the labor situation. Herr Boeckler argues that the occupation authorities should permit German participation in the execution of Law 35 with labor union representation.

"TWENTY-FIVE percent of our buildings and 15 percent of our machinery were destroyed by bombing," continued Haberland. "We have rebuilt the bombed parts of the factory and made some technical improvements during the harassing five years that have passed. Now we have to take this blow in the face; read these harsh paragraphs in Law 35 and the unjust statements in your American press that all I. G. Farben officials are criminals."

One of the harsh paragraphs in Law 35 to which Mr. Haberland referred, and which it had taken the Allies five years to enunciate, reads: "The Allied High Commission shall take such action as it considers necessary to accomplish the winding up of I. G. Farbenindustrie A G, and to extinguish its juristic personality." As a sample of unjust American press comment on the law, he handed me a clipping from the New York Herald Tribune entitled, "HICOG set to extinguish Farben." It described the company as a "shock to world conscience" and finished the paragraph by stating that "for many Americans, it's as though all the evil in the world today sprang from the I. G. Farben headquarters."

"Why should we still be reviled in your press as the embodiment of evil when our officials were exonerated on every count during their trial before a United States military tribunal?" asked Haberland. "We naturally expected that all motives of retaliation would thereupon be dropped. Surely, after five years the reasons now advanced for punitive action against I. G. Farben by the Allies in Law 35 seem unjustified, since the trial ended with the acquittal of all defendants."

To this local manager of the former I. G. Farben octopus, who had spent his whole life building up an efficient factory complex which is the pride of his existence, these harsh words evidently seemed the wildest calumny. I could see that he might not have been involved in the policies of the I. G. Farben high command, whose huge central office at Frankfurt is now occupied by thousands of HICOG's employes. But some of I. G. Farben's ruthless maneuvers in the world market were matters of common knowledge in the United States, and I could not afford to spare Mr. Haberland's feelings.

"I regret to tell you," I said, "that this article pictures exactly the reputation of your firm not only in our country but throughout the informed industrial world. Do not forget that your company was conducting worldwide industrial warfare as a part of Germany's military preparedness program. This was effective before World War I and continued as much as possible in the period between the two wars. You violated every rule of fair business practice by selling regardless of cost or price to crush all and any competition abroad."

Mr. Haberland looked at me with unfeigned surprise. "But, Mrs. Meyer," he replied, "those are only the legitimate acts of competitive private enterprise."

THIS STATEMENT reveals the almost unbridgeable gap between the German and the modern American concept of business ethics. Haberland here reflects his training in the traditions of the Ruhr which make a complete separation between economic and private morality, between trade and politics—a clean split in their personalities which made it easy for them to accept a character like Hitler because they thought he would be the willing tool of their own aggrandizement.

When the Fuehrer had enough power to force the industrialists to do his bidding, however shameful, they felt and still feel innocent of the deeds they committed, such as the use of slave labor, because they could no longer refuse to carry out his orders. That was the chief defense of the Krupps in their trial for criminal offenses during the war. In their eyes, as well as in the eyes of most Ruhr industrialists, this should have exonerated the Krupp family completely. Most of these men chose to forget how much some of them had done to put Hitler into power in the first place.

It seemed necessary to clarify the difference between American and Mr. Haberland's German idea of private enterprise.

"I concede that such things happened in our country before the turn of the century. But if an industrialist tried that kind of thing in our country today, he would be put in jail. This change in our business morality is not wholly due to the wisdom of the employer," I added, trying to soften the blow, "but also to a growing understanding and general acceptance of a higher business morality which found its expression in Federal and State legislation and various enforcement agencies. Frankly, Mr. Haberland," I concluded, "in America we now call your kind of cut-throat competition dishonorable."

Haberland was baffled by this point of view. He could only reply with his inherited convictions. "But, Mrs. Meyer, we thought of America as a free enterprise country just like our own, and when the American Army arrived we expected to be liberated."

"You mean," I asked incredulously, "that we would embrace you with joy and that our relationships would be just as they were before the Germans brought the world to its present desperate plight?"

"Yes," he replied quite simply. "I, for example, openly opposed Hitler before he came to power. I was suspect and later was removed from my job." (This I had already heard from others.) "I hated Hitler, and suffered under him intolerably. So did many other prominent industrialists. All decent Germans hung on the BBC, and when the war was over, it was a great and joyous moment for them. 'Now normal life will begin again,' they said. 'For the first time in years, justice will exist again.' They expected freedom overnight.

"But to you they were, perhaps naturally enough, all Nazis. Thousands were thrown into jail —the innocent and guilty alike —and many did not get a hearing for months. The Germans as a whole no more wanted Hitler than the Russians wanted Lenin. And to the extent that individual Germans were not Nazis, they were all the more resentful of being regarded as criminals."

Unfortunately, our American denazification program has its weaknesses. It was sound in its objectives and its administrators generally tried sincerely to rid Germany of Nazi criminals. It was inevitable, in such an enormous undertaking, that some miscarriages of justice would occur. Some innocent people were punished. Some real Nazis escaped punishment. A few of them even gained high positions in the Bonn government.

For example, among Dr. Adenauer's ministerial advisers is a man named Globke, who once wrote a commentary supporting Hitler's infamous Nuernberg racial laws. This is confusing to the German people. They cannot understand why officials cleared of all war crime charges continue to be prosecuted, while guilty Nazis, such as Globke, help determine government policy, without American objection.

MR. HABERLAND returned to the discussion of Law 35, for the deconcentration of the I. G. Farbenindustrie by our high command.

"The present suggestions of your decartelization committee for our factories are absurd. We concede that the decartelization of I. G. Farben is justifiable. We admit that it would be sound if it were intelligently done. But we should be allowed to carry it out ourselves with Allied control by people who understand the intricacy of the problem. In western Germany we had about 70,000 employes. More than 53 percent of the I. G. Farben was lost to the Russian zone. That is enough decartelization in itself.

"Thus, less than 47 percent of the original I. G. Farben assets are left. They are very small in comparison with the former I. G. Farben complex and much more so if compared with the important chemical concerns abroad. Take one of our subsidiary factories like Dormagen, which makes artificial silk and employs about 5000 people. Your officials wish to make it an independent unit, but it cannot exist alone without its relationship to this and other large factories.

"Dormagen was founded by this factory and the workers wish to remain with us. Not only their jobs but their whole social security would be wiped out if Dormagen is separated from us. This means the loss of their health protection, their right to hospitalization, old-age insurance and the homes they own or are buying on installments—as well as their recreation program, which is very extensive.

"Our relationship with our employes has always been exceptionally good and our voluntary social expenditure together with our research work was several times the amount spent on top management compensation and on dividends. The loss of this social program, which Dormagen and five other small factories could not afford to continue, would create serious unrest among the workers.

"Here in this Bayer complex at Leverkusen there is a separate unit for photographic films. Your Americans want to build a wall around it. But engineering makes this unit an organic part of the whole, through our waste-water channels and other facilities, to say nothing of administration, the use of our restaurant, etc. This part could not function as a separate unit.

"You will destroy the whole chemical industry in Germany at a time when you need to encourage employment, production and increasing exports. Furthermore, the progress of a chemical industry depends upon research. To do research we must have units big enough to make it efficient. A large proportion of our gross profits were always devoted to research.

"Nor would there be enough capital in small groups to hold our position in world trade. In the color and dye industry the Americans and British have the whole range of colors. I. G. Farben has been split in five parts in the American Zone and each has just one color. When we try to sell abroad our competitors would have the advantage. No foreign agent could afford to represent one factory, as every agent must have the whole color range to sell.

"LET ME point out another of the many restrictions still imposed upon German chemical industries by the Allies which entirely ignore the recent international developments and the change that should be taking place in your policies toward German industry. As a result of shortages in strategic raw materials through war production efforts, we can no longer meet our rubber needs with imports. If they were cut off entirely, it would not be long before not a wheel could roll in Germany. Yet the production of synthetic rubber and its essential ingredient, Butadien, are still forbidden in Germany. Even under the Potsdam agreement, the manufacture of synthetic rubber was permitted as long as the importation of adequate supplies of rubber was impossible. The situation exists again. It is dangerous to delay returning to the original agreement.

"As for I. G. Farben trade with the East Zone, we must trade with some of our subsidiaries under Russian domination, not only because we need their products and they ours, but because the workers in those factories will starve without this trade. We all send packages to our relatives in the East Zone, as they literally do not get enough to eat. We must use every possible means to assure the Germans under the Russian yoke that we have not forgotten them."

At this point I asked Mr. Haberland, since he had admitted that I. G. Farben should be decartelized, what he would consider the best solution.

"We want to make a clean slate so that we can feel ourselves your allies in every endeavor. First, you should remove the incompetent people from the decartelization committees. In the American Zone they have put inexperienced people in charge of the factories. We simply do not speak the same language. With the peace treaty and decisive alterations in the Statute of Occupation, all industrial controls should be withdrawn and the Board of Directors of Steel, Coal and I. G. Farben should have able American representatives. Your American control is not a constructive but a negative influence.

"In the decartelization of I. G. Farben we should like to keep together three separate groups. In the French Zone, the Badeische Analyne and Soda Factory. In the American Zone, the four color works: Hoechst, Offenbach, Cassella and Griesheim, which produces raw materials. In the British Zone, Leverkusen, Elbefeld, Dormagen and Uerdigen. They could be separate stock companies, whose stocks would be turned over pro rata to our 400,000 to 500,000 shareholders. The foreign holdings of our stock is about 13 percent. No individual owns more than a small number of our shares, and these thousands of small stockholders also deserve consideration."

I CHECKED Haberland's outline for the decartelization of I. G. Farben with some of our most intelligent American officials and found that they agreed it would be a rational and adequate plan. Moreover, these officials said that such a decartelization of I. G. Farben would be likely to stick after American controls are withdrawn, whereas the present plans for decartelization in Germany would be an invitation for the restoration of the big cartels.

Mr. Haberland then drove me around the vast congeries of different factories, which is surrounded by vast recreation fields, parks, a swimming pool and some of the 6000 housing units built by the company for its employes and executives, of which 600 had been constructed since the war. Many of these workers have been in the employ of the company for three and four generations. The health, welfare and recreation provisions are ideal.

But in this as in other German factories, none of the men and women looked up and spoke to us cheerfully as they always do in American factories when I have accompanied the boss or manager on an inspection tour. Only a few of the highest foremen ventured to tip their hats to Mr. Haberland.

When I left Leverkusen, I was almost as melancholy as Mr. Haberland. I was depressed by his criticisms of our decartelization program, whose general aspects seem self-defeating now that we seek to make an ally of Germany against the Communist peril. I was depressed by the atmosphere which prevailed throughout the whole plant, the apparent efficiency, for example, of the white-robed women who were measuring penicillin and their no-less-apparent lack of joyousness.

Above all, I was depressed by Germany itself, because it produces such good, humble, industrious people who have always allowed their leaders to exploit both their weaknesses and their virtues for unworthy purposes.

Virginia Affairs

Global Invasion of the Grassroots

By Benjamin Muse

THERE HAS BEEN no more interesting development in northern Virginia in the past year than the plunge of David Lawrence into local governmental, or—may it be said?—political, affairs.

MUSE

Lawrence, whose column is syndicated to 190 daily newspapers, is also head man of United States News and World Report and is the author of half a dozen books. Now, at 62, he is a political something in Fairfax County, Va.

To take time out from the affairs of Russia, Germany, Korea and the United Nations to revolutionize the affairs of a Virginia county is, to say the least, an unusual performance. In a world which instinctively looks for the ulterior motive, the natural deduction is "going into politics." If that is what the commentator and publisher has in mind, Virginia will be well served, but this writer doubts it.

Lawrence, who in recent years has built himself a delectable country home on an old mill site north of Centreville, early indicated a desire to take root and play a part in activities of his community. In 1947 he met with neighbors, including this writer, in small village huddles to plan for and keep alive Centreville's first and only civic club. Last spring, when the movement for county government reform resulted in the presentation of a heavily backed petition for a referendum on the county manager plan, an opportunity presented itself for a major county-wide achievement.

WHILE STILL keeping a sharp eye on Stalin, Vishinsky, Tito et al., Lawrence moved into the local situation as chairman of the executive committee of the Commission to Study County Government. New to the grassroots of politics, he walked roughshod into a heated factional contest. At numerous public meetings his quietly overpowering personality and what seemed arbitrary procedure offended many—in spite of the essential objectiveness of his purpose. And the dead cats which he received were different from the letters of readers who disagree with his internationally famous column: they came from closer quarters. But Lawrence plowed straight on through research and campaign to win his point handsomely in the referendum election.

What Fairfax County got out of it was, not the county manager plan—whose advocates aroused the county to the need for a change in the first place—but its only slightly less revolutionary twin, the county executive plan. The public also got a pretty thorough education in county administration: the various groups, sparked by Lawrence's study commission, made probably the most comprehensive study of the subject that has been made in this State.

What is going on now is in some respects even more remarkable. When civic leaders carry through a movement for local government reform, they too often consider that the job is done when the votes have been cast. Lawrence—in the midst of telling the Nation what to do about the Chinese Communists—is now leading a movement for a carefully planned transition to the new form of government in Fairfax, which goes into effect in January, 1952.

THE FIRST MOVE was to take steps to bring about a redistricting, and a correction of the ludicrously unbalanced pattern of supervisor districts —which formed one of the principal objections to the county executive plan. Now the board of supervisors has provided for the setting up of two bodies, a "committee of seven" and a "Research Project," to plan for the transition.

The Research Project goes to work first, with Lewis Coyner, county treasurer, as secretary, and as chairman—guess who?—David Lawrence. An appropriation not to exceed $1000 has been made available for miscellaneous expenses (but none to go for compensation of members.)

Lawrence is now out to recruit a staff of volunteer helpers. In his letter to the board of supervisors, he dropped the hint: "Fortunately, with the Federal Government nearby, there are many persons resident in the county who have had technical experience and who doubtless would be glad to assist in such a project." It is this column's prediction that the commentator will have ample recruits and that they will come from all factions in the recent contest.

Maryland Affairs

Oyster Gets a New Lease on Life

By James P. Connolly

A RECENT DECISION of the Maryland Court of Appeals, opening Tangier Sound to private oyster farming, is of great importance for its effect in favoring a revival of the Maryland oyster industry, once second only to agriculture. A full-scale revival would add 30 million dollars a year to the State's economy.

CONNOLLY

Oyster production fell from a peak of 15 million bushels in 1885 to less than two million bushels a few years ago. Last year's take was about 2,300,000 bushels. The potentially most productive grounds in the world were denuded, leaving not enough to replenish the crops or supply the demand.

Although Maryland packers naturally do not advertise this, last year they imported approximately 400,000 bushels of shell stock from out-of-State, shucked them and reshipped them as home-grown.

The oystermen have been criticized for taking a blind attitude that the Lord would provide. The hard fact now is that the Lord helps those who help themselves. Conservationists say that if the industry is ever to be revived, it has to be through private leasing and planting.

REHABILITATION by the State has been found over expensive and ineffective. Edwin Warfield, former head of the Tidewater Fisheries Commission, made a determined effort to restore the field at public expense, taxing the industry to recover the cost. Outlaw oystermen were accused of raiding the beds and evading the taxes, and Warfield finally quit in discouragement or disgust.

The cost of a public conservation or restoration program now is estimated at 10 million dollars a year. It would be in effect a subsidy of what's left of the industry that ran down the resources in the first place, and the taxpayers hardly could be expected to stand for it.

On their part, the oystermen don't like private leasing, seeing it as a threat to pull the last of the oyster grounds out from under them. Cooperatives have been suggested as a means of making private leasing more acceptable, and have found a tentative welcome among some watermen, at least.

THE TANGIER SOUND case decided by the Appeals Court arose over the Smith Island Cooperative, the first full-fledged project of its kind in the State. About 40 members of the co-op applied for a lease on approximately 800 acres in the sound.

Other watermen opposed the plan and created a test case, agreeing to abide by the result. The principle of private leasing was not at stake. The question was whether the Tangier Sound site was barren bottom or natural bar.

Although the public is not widely aware of it, the principle of private leasing has been firmly fixed in Maryland law since 1830, and some of the terms of the original lease law still stand—for instance, the rental fee of $1 an acre.

Any citizen is eligible to ask for a lease, and leases are practically permanent, running for 20 years with the privilege of renewal. Leases originally were limited to 1 acre each but liberalizations in 1865 and 1906 upped the allotment to a maximum of 500 acres in the bay and 30 in its tributaries.

From 1906 to 1912, the bay was charted by the old Shellfish Commission to determine which areas were barren bottoms and which were natural bars, and those charts are still in use. The Tangier Island site, incidentally, is charted as barren bottom.

AT PRESENT, the State is spending about $125,000 a year on seeding and planting to encourage private oyster growing. It plants about a million bushels of shells and about a quarter million bushels of spats (young oysters) a year and sells them to buyers for 20 cents a bushel.

For another 40 cents the buyers can have their purchases taken up and transplanted, and in three or four years they can grow a crop of about 100 bushels to the acre, worth from $3 to $5 a bushel at current prices.

A Poplar Island planting project grossed $200,000 on a crop that cost only $18,000.

Still there has been no stampede of takers for private leases. Of approximately 80,000 acres in the bay, less than 9000 are under lease—to fewer than 1000 lease holders.

While the Maryland industry was running downhill, other States' industries were on the upgrade. New York, New Jersey, Virginia and Delaware all developed booming oyster trades through private leasing and commercial cultivation. North Carolina, which did not embrace private leasing, remained in the same boat with Maryland.

The hope for private leasing is that the profit to be made through it will be impressed on the watermen and that eventually they will accept it and assume responsibility for the resource and its conservation and redevelopment.

A Handsomely Printed Book

Colonel Dabs at the Civil War

By Marshall Andrews

THE WAR WITHOUT GRANT. By Robert R. McCormick. Bond Wheelwright Co. 245 pp. $7.50.

THIS IS a puzzling book. It is handsomely printed and bound and it contains some excellent maps. But those assets hardly seem sufficient to justify another work on this most thoroughly studied period of American history unless it presents new evidence or a new approach or blows fresh air through the turgid controversies of the times.

Colonel McCormick's book does none of those things. It contains no evidence of original research, its conclusions are burdened with the frank predilections of the author and it only adds to the controversy which years ago outgrew its usefulness. There is every indication, indeed, that the book was written or dictated (it reads as if it had been dictated) at a distance from the numerous political and military literature available to the student of the Civil War.

There is a place in this literature for a careful and scholarly study of the Union army command comparable to that in the seven volumes of Dr. Douglas S. Freeman's "R. E. Lee" and "Lee's Lieutenants." Not only does Colonel McCormick's work fall far short of Dr. Freeman's in magnitude as well as in detachment and scholarly zeal; it is manifestly impossible to do justice to Colonel McCormick's subject in the space he has allotted to it.

Thus "The War Without Grant" is necessarily superficial, and this superficiality pervades it from cover to cover. Let us look at a few concrete instances of what is, in reality, the essence of the book.

COLONEL MCCORMICK attributes the Civil War entirely to the issue of slavery: "The only complaint the seceding States had was that the Republicans—now come to power—would prevent the extension of slavery into more territories." Not only is that a misstatement of the slavery issue; even if it were a correct statement of that issue, it can be advanced as the sole cause of the Civil War with no more validity than the assassinations at Sarajevo can be said to have caused World War I.

The author says the "severity of Reconstruction" was the "revenge" of Ben Wade for the loss of his factory when Jeb Stuart burned Chambersburg, Pa., on his raid round McClellan after Sharpsburg. Of course the excesses of Reconstruction resulted from causes and tensions going infinitely deeper and farther than the desire for revenge of any one man. They expressed the animosities engendered in four fearful years of internecine conflict, the social, political and economic differences, between two divergent ways of life, and stresses of Nation and class extending back to European origins.

By the by, since historical accuracy would seem a sine qua non of historical writing, it should be noted that Chambersburg was not burned by Stuart on his October, 1862, raid but on July 30, 1864, by Early's cavalry under Brig. Gen. John McCausland. That was nearly two years after Stuart's "October raid" and 2½ months after Stuart's death. For that matter, Ben Wade was an Ohio politician with no Pennsylvania holdings. The Confederates did burn an iron works in Pennsylvania, but it belonged to Thaddeus Stevens, radical leader in the House. It was at Caledonia, not Chambersburg, and it was destroyed not by Stuart in October, 1862, but by Early in June, 1863.

COLONEL MCCORMICK attributes the early superiority of the Southern cavalry not to inefficient organization and leadership and inept employment of the Union horse in the first two years. He says: "In the South the whites traveled on horseback and the slaves walked." That statement overlooks the fact that the cavalry of the Confederate army was never more than 10 percent of its total strength and that the accomplishments of the Army of Northern Virginia were ultimately those of its magnificent infantry.

It ignores the fundamental fact that in 1860 the 5½ million whites in the 11 Confederate States owned a total of 1¾ million horses of all kinds for all purposes. Had all those horses been used exclusively for riding, as Colonel McCormick seems to think they were, three whites would still have had to climb on each horse, where no doubt they would have been considerably less comfortable than the walking slaves and could have acquired but little horsemanship.

These three examples should suffice to indicate the altogether superficial treatment of a most complex concert of social, political, economic and military forces, which of itself invalidates this book as serious history. In his treatment of military operations, Colonel McCormick states conclusions as fact, without leading the reader up to them and often without connecting them with or even mentioning important contributing factors.

Thus, he says Jackson's Valley Campaign of 1862 was "actually a series of skirmishes and does not appear to have had any effect upon the military situation." In the light of the then existing distribution of forces and the effect of this distribution upon the outcome of McClellan's major effort, this is indeed a startling proposition.

Colonel McCormick criticizes McClellan for dividing his army across the Chickahominy River, leaving three corps north of that stream. He does not say, and does not appear to realize, that this division resulted from President Lincoln's direct order to maintain contact with McDowell at Fredericksburg, whose troops Mr. Lincoln had promised McClellan would join him. This whole scheme fell apart when Jackson's victories in the valley so frightened the Administration that it vacillated between holding McDowell at Fredericksburg and sending him to McClellan until Johnston and then Lee intervened.

THE AUTHOR also blames Lee for his "frontal attacks" during the Seven Days Battles. Surely he cannot have failed to learn that Lee planned his battle to open with an attack by Jackson's whole valley army on McClellan's exposed flank north of the Chickahominy. Nor does it seem possible he could have missed the fact that this careful plan of maneuver was upset by Jackson's tardiness and A. P. Hill's impatience and impetuosity. You cannot but wonder how Colonel McCormick would have conducted the subsequent battles and how he would have maneuvered to reach McClellan's flanks with inexperienced division commanders when the campaign was one of pursuit and even maintaining contact was difficult.

Both in his introduction and in his text, Colonel McCormick presents Johnston's abandonment of Norfolk May 9, 1862, as "the greatest, indeed the fatal blunder of the war." Had Johnston held onto Norfolk, he says, "Lee would have captured McClellan's entire army. With that accomplished, Lee could have taken Washington and won the war."

Nowhere does Colonel McCormick tie together the reasoning which led him to this conclusion. But you can go into the context and, by assumption out of syllogism, breed the same conclusion.

Colonel McCormick says that if the Merrimac had been properly handled, it could have defeated the Monitor, but you must take it on from there. If Norfolk had not been abandoned, the Merrimac would not have been burned by the Confederates. If the Merrimac had guarded Hampton Roads, McClellan could not have used the James River for his line of communications after the Seven Days. Without the James, McClellan could not have survived on the Peninsula.

Now strike out the "ifs," and you have your conclusion, all of which might be a suitable method for a man desperately anxious to prove a preconception, but hardly one for serious military history. The same line of reasoning, indeed, leads even sooner to the conclusion that Hampton Roads itself was untenable and McClellan's Peninsula Campaign an impossibility from the outset.

COLONEL McCORMICK'S measure of a general's capacity appears to be whether his loyalties gravitated toward McClellan or Grant. In the case of John Pope, whose failure was notorious and spectacular, the author makes out a case for his generalship, apparently because he came briefly into conflict with McClellan. And he does not even mention the failure south of the James of that political general, Benjamin F. Butler (who for some reason he seems to admire), and its effect on Grant's Wilderness campaign.

In regard to the Wilderness campaign, Colonel McCormick makes a peculiar point. He says Grant "broke . . . . in three days" through the country below the Rapidan, "a terrain" which his predecessors "had been utterly unable to solve." If Colonel McCormick meant to say that Grant had succeeded in remaining south of the Rapidan, he is, of course, correct. But you simply can't leave him there and crown him victor.

Thirty days, 70 miles and three battles later, Grant stood exactly where McClellan had been two years before, with 11 more bitter months of war ahead of him, not in the terrain he had "solved," but south of the James where the armies never before had contended. And in the bloody wake of his army he had left nearly 60,000 casualties. The real achievements of General Grant would seem to be sufficient evidence of his military stature without claiming for him what he manifestly did not do.

This book is not a thorough and dispassionate study of military operations and the personalities concerned in them. It is not even an adequate and accurate summary of the events with which it purports to deal. No doubt there is a place in the vast literature of the Civil War for such a study as Colonel McCormick has dabbed at here, and perhaps Kenneth P. Williams will have it when he completes his four-volume work, "Lincoln Finds a General." But Colonel McCormick clearly is not the man to attempt it.

A scene from "The Thirteen Clocks," by James Thurber, "a fairy tale for children and adults," but principally for adults. It's complete with handsome prince, enchanted princess, a horrid duke, color illustrations and a lived-happily-ever-after ending

Notes on the Margin

By Lee Grove

IT MUST HAVE BEEN the gremlins and the rhetorical influence of another Illinois man, Lincoln, which were at work in the review of Carl Sandburg's "Complete Poems" on last Sunday's book page, as a number of readers kindly pointed out.

First, the price of the "Complete Poems" is $6, a reasonable figure in view of today's publishing costs, not the incorrectly given lesser amount. Forgiveness is asked of readers and the publisher, Harcourt, Brace.

Second, Sandburg is not "four-score-and." He was born in Galesburg January 6, 1878.

And speaking of Sandburg at Galesburg, there is an interesting article in the October issue of The South Atlantic Quarterly about Sandburg as a student at Lombard College there.

The article, by the Rev. Alan Jenkins of Galesburg, notes among other things that seven signed contributions, including a prize-winning oration, appear in the files of a college monthly. The contributions were signed variously: C. A. Sandburg, Charles August, Karl August and Charles August Sandburg.

As if this were not enough in the way of handles, Sandburg's fellow students called him "Cully."

"Heritage," the 145-page poetic portrayal of the American inheritance by Ralph Bradford, international vice president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, has just been published by Judd & Detweiler, Inc. Lester Douglas is the designer of the attractive volume.

SEVERAL publishers are reported interested in taking over publication of the handsome book published by the Sesquicentennial Commission in connection with the "American Processional" exhibition ending today at the Corcoran Gallery. At its present price, the richly illustrated, 270-page book is a real bargain and a possibility for Christmas giving.

WHEN one publisher plugs the advertising of another, it begins to seem like the peace that passeth understanding. Yet that is what has just happened. Doubleday sent out postcards "To all those 'Lost Souls,' adult and juvenile, who still read books, and who, like us, are bemused by the current series of television ads."

The postcards called attention to an advertisement by Harper's in a New York paper. The ad began: "Bring a note of cheer to those little lost souls . . . who don't have television sets. Make this a book Christmas for children."

Alfred M. Lilienthal, a Washington attorney, is the author of "Which Way to World Government?" a new pamphlet in the Foreign Policy Association's Headline Series Lilienthal, who lists a dozen American organizations working for world government, says in his conclusion that of they wish to put over their idea they should stop magnifying their differences and unite for the common cause.

"SAVONAROLA," a full-length verse play by Wallace A. Bacon, has just been published by Bookman Associates, Inc., New York. Bacon, who was stationed here during World War II as a member of the Signal Corps, and who two years ago spent some months in research at the Folger Shakespeare Library, is now a member of the Northwestern University faculty. His play won the Bishop Sheil Drama Award of the National Catholic Theater Conference in 1946.

Admires Some Belligerence

Van Paassen Is an Odd Pacifist

By Kathleen L. Barber

JERUSALEM CALLING! By Pierre van Paassen. Dial. 337 p. $3.

THE EXCLAMATION POINT in the title foreshadows the passionate, almost incoherent quality of Pierre van Paassen's treatment of religion, Israel (biblical and modern) and world tensions.

He sees quite correctly, as he showed in last year's "Why Jesus Died," that religion is inseparable from the daily decisions of individuals and nations, or it is nothing. But Van Paassen's powerful vision of this idea leads him off in all directions. The book ends not only lacking a synthesis but actually containing a very basic contradiction.

FOR EARLY in the book, in his chapter on the ancient prophets, Van Paassen writes a moving hymn to pacifism. We have never tried faith in God instead of resort to armaments, he says, yet faith in God is the only act that can save us from "distress and futile revolts and the darkness of night by one war after the other."

Resistance to aggression is wrong, he says; it is better to submit and retain the righteousness of not spilling innocent blood, and God will save a remnant, as he did of ancient Israel, to carry on.

But two chapters farther on, in writing of modern Israel's struggle for its nationhood, he proclaims his deep admiration for the Jews' heroic fighting, and recognizes their need to stay armed as long as Arab armies remain poised on their borders.

Yet another two chapters on, Van Paassen's pacifism becomes even more astounding when he calls U. N. resistance to aggression in Korea "a major victory by our State Department"; arms for Greece, Turkey and Iran a wise policy, and our atom bomb a good deterrent to Russia aggression.

Now the reader can, of course, decide which chapters of the book convince him. But in making such a decision necessary, Van Paassen is an irresponsible author. He is also an irresponsible minister for not fusing his religion and his international policy after proclaiming them inseparable. Like the vast majority of his fellow Christians whom he criticizes, Van Paassen has his Bible in one pocket and his newspaper in another.

HOWEVER, much constructive work is done in this book. Van Paassen sets the record straight on what is true in the Biblical Jesus and what is latter-day invention. He stresses the great, little recognized truth that "Marx came because we did not allow Christ to come" (quoted from Ragaz). And he shows effectively that Jesus did not mean by the Kingdom of God a heavenly "hereafter set aside for the pious dead," but a concrete reality, a social revolution and a revolution in the human soul on earth.

Van Paassen expects a great deal from the new nation of Israel. He sees it as the fulfilment of Yahveh's Old Testament promise to the Jewish people that he will plant them again upon their land, and from Zion will go forth the word of God. A prophet people, he calls the Jews in Israel, to lead the world in overcoming war, disease and sin.

One can't help feeling that this lofty mission might seem a trifle ludicrous to the people so apotheosized, now immersed as they are in the problems of working out a viable economic system and deciding whether their nation is to be a theocracy or a democracy.

Timely Book On Current Red Victim

By A. J. Newman, Jr.

OUT OF THIS WORLD: Across the Himalayas to Forbidden Tibet. By Lowell Thomas, jr. Greystone Press. 320 pages. $3.75.

WITH the Chinese Communist invaders nearing Lhasa, this description of the land and people of Tibet — and of the hardships a Westerner faces getting there — may well be the last.

On their almost incredible trip to the Tibetan capital, the Thomases — father and son, the elder the newscaster and an old-time storyteller — not only reported news but made it. Asking permission to visit Lhasa, and hardly expecting to get it, the Thomases were actually invited to the Forbidden City by a government which, even last year, feared a Red invasion and wanted emissaries to carry out a message seeking sympathy and understanding.

The pathetic plea the pair brought back to President Truman and to America was foredoomed to failure by geography and politics.

On the trail back to India, the elder Thomas was thrown from his horse and his leg was broken in eight places. The accident in the middle of nowhere, the painful ride on stretcher and chair, and the valor of his Indian and American rescuers made the headlines back home.

A highlight of the book is its pictures, in black and white and color, which tell much of the story of the trip, of the land and of the Tibetans' medieval way of life and thought. Thomas takes time out to suggest some (but hardly enough) of the complex political and religious background necessary to understand Tibet.

There are the fantastic stories of earlier European and American travelers to Tibet, driven by curiosity, adventure, missionary zeal and — more recently — freedom from a POW camp in India. One wonders what has happened to the two Britons and Austrians working for the Dalai Lama's government.

Extremely useful would have been a bibliography of the literature on Tibet, with much of which Thomas obviously is familiar.

The author tells a modern-day adventure tale in an easy, popular manner. Editing of the irrelevant and chatty asides of father to son would have made it better.

"I'll read it if you're sure we don't all get blown to bits in the end"

A Story of North-South Fusion Begins to Babble at Its Peak

THE SIGN OF JONAH. By Nancy Hale. Scribner's. 413 pp. 3.50.

IN THE BRIGHT, brittle days of 1928, Sybil Crocker, a self-titled "hard-boiled baby," drove south with a friend to find her long-obscured great-uncle, old Enoch Crocker, who, since the days of the Reconstruction, had carried on an idealistic program of instructing the Negroes on his place called Concord.

Enoch saw the South symbolized as Jonah, denying his destiny, living in the whale's belly —the past not yet repented. And so at Concord, a small island of New England in a sea of red clay and failing plantations, Enoch the patriarch held his family together and pursued his Transcendentalist way.

Sybil and her friend, Harry Stokes, provided escape to New York for Enoch's two granddaughters, beautiful, hard-headed Hope, and sweet, feeling Felicity. With their mother and their artistic brother, Edward, they became the rage of New York society at the turn of the decade, when the boyish, smart cynicism of the twenties was giving way in fashion to a new kind of feminine charm.

As Sybil sinks helplessly into alcoholism, Hope (now Mrs. Harry Stokes) takes over the story. She goes from triumph to triumph, as society leader, magazine editor, playwright, and, finally, wife of "presidential material" Sam Slidell. It is Sam, as Governor of the State of Catawba, who takes her back to the South, where she has the first experience that really affects her emotionally.

Out of this experience comes the possibility that Hope, once rejected by her grandfather as "the invulnerable girl," will carry out Enoch's dream of fusion between North and South, white and Negro.

A foreshadowing of this outcome might have been Hope's bearing—at 19—a child whose father was a handsome, educated Negro at Concord. At any rate, the irony of it is that, at maturity, Hope has not really changed; she has simply turned her will to power toward social reform.

Nancy Hale, remembered as author of "The Prodigal Women," has tried to do a great many things in this novel. She has created an authentic milieu, a number of strange, violent, unlikable characters, and a fast-paced story. She has written with a genuine grasp of Southern problems. But somehow it does not come off.

Perhaps this happens because at the pitch of the story's excitement the author begins to babble, and the illusion of reality disintegrates through overwriting. One feels that a measure of restraint would have brought it through.—KATHLEEN L. BARBER.

The Coffin Corner . . .

FOGGY, FOGGY DEATH, by Richard and Frances Lockridge. (Lippincott, $2.50.) Fog, ice and murder close in on Westchester County aristocrats and surprising guests. Captain Heimrich inches his way through mists of tangled human plans and passions. Literate and logical; Heimrich's habit of closed-eye omniscience is slightly irritating, but plot's like good orchestration with no false notes. Top performance.

MURDER CHARGE, by Wade Miller. (Farrar, Strauss, $2.50.) Are the gangsters moving in on San Diego? When advance man Blue is shot, police inveigle Private Eye Thursday into risky impersonation to find perilous answers. Interesting lowdown on civic corruption and gangster habits; well-written leader of hard-boiled school with suspense at high temperature. Good job.

THE LITERATURE OF CRIME, edited by Ellery Queen. (Little, Brown, $3.50.) Whatever the psychological reason, apparently most writers dip into crime now and then, as these 26 stories by nonmystery writers (including Nobel Faulkner) prove. Excellent editorial selection; this is writing, not writing-down — with maybe a moral to conventional whodunit scribblers. Personal favorite: Somerset Maugham item. Recommended Christmas gift.

MURDER LEAVES A RING, by Fay Grissom Stanley. (Rinehart, $2.50.) Any murderer of actress Iris was public benefactor. All cockeyed guests at her Greenwich Village cocktail party had reasons which Captain Steele, Homicide, had a tough time sorting out. Mystery thick because 'tec-writer heroine and narrator keeps getting knocked on head, confusing police and reader. Ho, hum . . .

CHINA AND THE SOVIET UNION. By Aitchen K. Wu. John Day. 434 pp. $6.

THE AUTHOR of this book was formerly Chinese consul general in Vladivostok and once acted as Russian consul general in Hankow. He was also made many visits to Moscow. His book surveys the course of Sino-Soviet relations from the beginning to the present, and is, by and large, warmly sympathetic to the Kremlin and the Chinese Communist government.

His history of relations between the two countries is, on the whole, sound in its facts and assessments. But when he comments on the present world situation Dr. Wu ceases to be a historian and reveals where his feelings lie.

He asserts flatly that Russia will fulfill all her treaty obligations and return the Chinese Changchun Railway, Port Arthur and Dairen to China by 1952 at the latest. He dismisses the possibility of Russian aggression as a fear "born of dread and fantastic imagination." Instead, he adjures the United States to reach an agreement with the Kremlin "without an irritating challenging attitude."

In several respects, history has already outstripped and contradicted Dr. Wu. He admits that if a third world war broke out, China would certainly become involved. (We are not yet in World War III, but Communist China has already, and of choice, involved herself in hostilities against us.) He estimates Communist armed forces in Asia at 5½ millions, but believes that in the cold war struggle China should "stay aloof." (She has not.)

As for us, Dr. Wu feels we seek to dominate the world, and suggests that, in the words of an old Chinese proverb, we "cut off an arm to save the body." Agreement between the Soviet Union and the United States is vital to peace, and Communist China could be the bridge between the two, he says.

Mao Tse-Tung at Yenan in 1937. From Robert Payne's book about the "Ruler of Red China"

MAO TSE-TUNG. By Robert Payne. Henry Schuman. 303 pp. $3.50.

THIS IS SAID to be the first full-length biography of the Red Napoleon who now rules China's four hundred millions. Mr. Payne calls it "a study of the mind of Mao," and the outcome of his examination is a chill fear that sweeps through his pages like the rigor mortis of a civilization. Hearken to the prophet of doom:

"Today Mao Tse-tung could, if he desired, command an army vastly larger than anyone has ever commanded before. For the first time we are presented with the possibility that our whole civilization may perish."

Mr. Payne does not see in Mao a potential Tito. Instead, he is convinced that Mao's dominance will remain unchallenged while he is alive, and that his will will be written over China until he dies. He also regards him among the most intelligent of living political leaders.

At times, Mr. Payne's respect for Mao becomes positively frightening. "Through him," intones our author, "Admiral Mahan's nightmare that the United States, in losing Asia, would forfeit its status as a world power, may be confirmed."

This is an important book, not merely because it is the first to turn spotlight on an emergent world figure, but also because it makes a serious effort to assess Mao's future significance as well as his present strength.

THE HOUSE AT HYDE PARK. By Clara and Hardy Seeholm (Viking). 276 pp. $3.75.

THIS IS really two books in one. Sara Delano Roosevelt, F. D. R.'s mother, kept a personal household book at Hyde Park in which she noted everything from a cure for croup to a means of detecting escaping sewer gas. The authors, in presenting this 176-page book, have supplemented it with what amounts to a book of their own about the Delanos and the Roosevelts. This is therefore a distinctive piece of recent Americana which throws some light on the family from which our only four-term President sprang.

EARLY AMERICAN AUTOMOBILES, 1877-1925. By Floyd Clymer (McGraw-Hill). 213 pp. $5.

FOR THOSE who can remember the pre-radio and television age, this book will evoke an orgy of memories. Between its handsome covers Mr. Clymer has paraded all the old pictures, advertisements, songs and cartoons about the cars we knew in our youth. Most of them, alas, are no more. But in these pages the rakish Stutz, the custom-built Locomobile, the stylish Apperson Eight and others of cherished remembrance live again. One of the old cars sold for as little as $395. Wow! All this was not so very long ago, yet it reads like a piece of genuine Americana, which, of course, it is.

Warriors Run Away From Caps, 96-88

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern:

DEL WEBB, one of the two men delegated to carry the bad news to Happy Chandler after he was defeated for reelection by the major league owners, didn't want the job . . . "As chairman of the meeting," he related, "I was just about to appoint Tom Yawkey of the Red Sox to notify Chandler, but Yawkey saw me looking at him and beat me to the punch by nominating me and Phil Wrigley of the Cubs" . . . Chandler's opposition hoped they could embarrass him into resigning, and were dismayed when he refused to step out before his term ends in May, 1952 . . . they tried one more coup in an attempt to assure his final ouster, asking that the four-man commitee named to recommend a commissioner be also empowered to select him. Chandler's friends voted down that proposal . . . Chandler got stanch backing from Clark Griffith despite the fact that the Washington owner was foiled by the commissioner's action a year ago when he urged that Griffith take young John Jachym in as a partner in the Washington club . . . Griffith resented Chandler's intrusion into his fight against Jachym, who had bought 40 per cent of the Nats' stock, yet didn't desert the commissioner in the balloting . . . Chandler was fired on the evening of the same day that 26 of his former mates in the Senate, anticipating his re-election, sent him a congratulatory telegram on his new term . . . opposition to him crystalized within a year from the date in 1949 when he was unanimously voted a $15,000 salary hike to $65,000.

POVICH

THE ODDS-MAKERS are very wary about today's Cleveland Browns-New York Giants divisional title game, bringing together as it does the two best defensive teams in the league . . . With the Brown's seven-point favorites over the Giants, and the Los Angeles Rams favored by the same margin against the Bears in the other play-off, the bookies are giving the edge to the passing teams (Browns and Rams) over the running teams . . . The last chance to hit the number and get an automatic blassing is offered today at MEtropolitan 6262, where volunteer workers will take your contribution to the Community Chest . . . Everybody wins, when you do . . . when the Nats' Irv Noren, led the outfielders in total number of assists, according to the official 1950 American League fielding averages, it was no upset. He has done the same, unfailingly, in every league he played in . . . The Redskins' Bill Dudley soon will join up with a sporting goods manufacturer as an off-season consultant at a hefty salary . . . If the anti-Chandler clique of owners deny that they had plotted his ouster, what was it that Baseball Writers' President Frank Yuette got wind of and was ready to write? They rushed into their secret meeting because they know Yuette was ready to break the story of their machinations . . . The two-minute mile, once a newsworthy rarity on the harness tracks, was negotiated 26 times by trotters and pacers in 1950.

THE HINT by the Redskins' front office that season-ticket holders may be polled on whether Herman Ball should be retained as head coach is foul public relations and a brush-off to fans, who don't buy their seats by the season package . . . and if the players voted, it would be unanimous for Ball . . . When the Red Sox traded off their .325-hitting right fielder, Al Zarilla, it didn't quite leave them desperate for a replacement. They can simply turn the job over to Utility Man Billy Goodman, who is merely the league's leading hitter . . . Lou Boudreau turned down offers of two-year contracts by the Yankees and Nats to sign a one-year pact with the Red Sox . . . The Nats' failure to acquire Catcher Mike Guerra from the A's leaves Gene Bearden as the only man who can converse with Bucky Harris' Cubans in their native tongue . . . Ted Williams, besieged with offers by operators of other baseball schools, turned them all down to lend his presence to the school conducted by his friend, Sid Hudson . . . Happy Chandler is probably asking: How can a baseball commissioner win? . . . he ruled for the White Sox and against the Yankees in the Dick Wakefield case last summer, yet both clubs voted against his reelection . . . The Yankees have put Joe Page on their waiver list but he is unwanted by other clubs for two reasons (1) his doubtful arm and (2) his $35,000 salary that can be cut only 25 percent under the rules.

AT NOTRE DAME, 70 percent is the passing grade, but football players must maintain school marks of 77 percent before they are eligible for the varsity . . . When the happy Navy players carried Coach Eddie Erdelatz off the field after the upset of Army they told him, "this will get you a new contract, coach." It was forthcoming, at a big raise, within three weeks . . . Toys and canned goods will be the admission fee to the smoker to be held tomorrow night by the Alexander D. Goode Post of the Jewish War Veterans. Jim Gibbons' Country Store for needy families will get the swag . . . Unlike Maryland race fans who backed most of Joe Culmone's mounts into heavy favorites, Florida fans are unsmitten with him. His two winners of last Friday were both 10 to 1 . . . Sam Snead's $37,000 worth of tournament winnings in 1950 were only a small part of his golf earnings. His salary as the White Sulphur Springs pro, his exhibition dates and his "appearance money" revenue, plus endorsements, lift him close to the $100,000 mark for the year . . . When Joe Stydahar was playing for 10 years in the Bears' line, he was deemed the man most unlikely to become a head coach. Today his Los Angeles Rams will probably lick the Bears for the divisional title . . . The NFL would be happy if the Baltimore Colts dropped out, leaving a well-balanced 12-club circuit.

Fulks, Arizin Unstoppable, Score 22, 21 Points

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Philadelphia's Eastern Division-leading Warriors led the Washington Caps a merry chase last night and were never caught.

With Joe Fulks pumping in 22 points and Paul Arizin adding 21 more, the Warriors defeated the Caps, 96-88, before 2250 spectators at Uline Arena.

The Caps made two bids to pull even with the Warriors, closing the gap to 61-60 in the third quarter, and reducing a 13-point deficit to 5 in the last 50 seconds.

But each time, a big 6-foot 6-inch Freeport, Texan, named Bill Closs stuck his mitts into the Caps' pivot plays, breaking them up, and tossing to teammates for scores.

It was only the second victory for Philadelphia on the Uline court in five seasons of pro basketball. The other win came in the last game here last season.

Philly Stars Unstoppable

To Dick Schnittker and Alan Sawyer were given the rugged assignments of trying to stop Arizin and Fulks. But the two Philly guns were unstoppable.

Arizin, 6 feet 4 inches, seemed to have springs in his legs, outreaching everybody for rebounds, tapping in shots and driving in for layups. He sank six of the 10 field goals he attempted.

Fulks, 29 years old, appeared to be as nimble as four years ago when he led the pro league in scoring. He put in seven out of 17 field goal attempts, most of them on his favorite jump shot.

Freddie Scolari and Bill Sherman were Washington's top point-makers with 15 and 14.

Fulks put Philadelphia into a 4-2 lead in the first minute and the Warriors' never trailed afterward. At the first-quarter mark, the score was 24-21.

The fast-beaking Warriors ran it up to 37-28 early in the second quarter, and took Arizin out for a rest. At half it was 51-43.

Going into the fourth quarter, it was 72-64. The Warriors opened it up to 90-77 with five minutes to go. Washington tried a back court press, hemming the Warriors under their own basket. It worked in a rally led by Scolari. Freddie put in three shots cutting the margin to 93-88. But in their anxiety to grab the ball in the closing seconds, the Caps committed several fouls. Nelson Bobb and George Senesky finished them off with three free throws.

White Sox Will Back Chandler

CHICAGO, Dec. 16 (AP).—Mrs. Grace Comiskey tonight said the Chicago White Sox will back up the retention of baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler.

She indicated she would take to task her son, youthful Chuck Comiskey, vice president of the club, and General Manager Frank Lane for reportedly aligning the White Sox against Chandler in the ouster vote at St. Petersburg.

Mrs. Comiskey termed the procedure against Chandler "crudely handled" and indicated when there is a new vote, as is probable, the Comiskey organization would line up with the nine that wanted to extend Chandler's term. His present contract expires May 1, 1952.

The widow of the late J. Louis Comiskey, son of the club's founder and a major league pioneer, Charles A. Comiskey, said she had "no advance knowledge" of the Chandler voting. The White Sox ballot was cast by Chuck.

"I did not approve of it from the moment I heard of what had taken place," said Mrs. Comiskey. "I hadn't been consulted so didn't even know that such a move was afoot. I believe it should have been taken up with me and I

Trend Now Toward Chandler—Griffith

President Clark Griffith, of the Nats, last night said he was "very happy" that Mrs. Grace Comiskey had announced she would support Commissioner Chandler for reelection.

"The trend is now definitely toward Chandler," Griffith said. "I know some other owners who voted against him in St. Petersburg who are changing their minds now. I wouldn't be surprised to see Chandler reelected at the February meetings."

Kappa Deltas Dust Kappa Kappa Gammas In Terps' Mud-Packed Powder Puff Bowl

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

THOSE MERRY maids of mascara, the Kappa Deltas, rode through mud and the Kappa Gammas to fashion a gooey 12-0 victory in the annual Powder Bowl football game at the University of Maryland yesterday.

Mary (Mighty Mo) Ylvisaker, playing despite a fractured cuticle, and Betty (Shoo-Shoo) Baldwin, nursing a broken date, scored the touchdowns for the winners, who won the inaugural Powder Puff skirmish last year.

Miss Ylvisaker shook off the many passes made at her by the spectators but latched on to one tossed by Marilyn Macchi, of the Gammas, and skirted 35 yards in her bluejeans for the first touchdown.

In the second quarter, Miss Baldwin, running her favorite play, the old Chanel No. 5, pitty-pattied 23 yards for the other touchdown.

The Gammas, who have a fraternity row reputation for defense, failed to show much—offense, that is.

The few times they did appear to be sashaying downfield, penalties stopped them. Once they were penalized half the distance to Dean Adele Stamp's office for having a man in motion.

The girls elected to decline the penalty and take the man but were overruled by the Deltas, who had the same idea.

There was no question as to who had the best line. It belonged to Ralph Sigler, who got himself elected King of the Powder Puff Bowl. He was crowned at halftime.

The girls were warned to protect themselves against the mud

Joe Culmone Hurt as Two Horses Spill

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 16 (AP).—Jockey Joe Culmone, racing against time in an effort to crack a 44-year riding record, was injured today in a bad spill during the fifth race at Tropical Park.

He remained in the hospital for observation, but his condition was not believed to be serious.

The 19-year-old Sicilian jockey, now only 18 winners short of the world mark, and Apprentice Jockey Larry Wilson tumbled from their mounts at the three-furlong-post as Culmone's horse, New Wonder, fell. The Gink, with Wilson riding, also went down after attempting to sidestep them.

Culmone managed somehow to get up and pull New Wonder to his feet.

The sensational 19-year-old jockey seemed in a daze, and said he did not know what had happened. After first aid, he was placed in an ambulance and removed to the hospital.

Dr. John E. Dees, who examined the young jockey sensation at Jackson Memorial Hospital, said Culmone did not appear seriously injured. It first was believed he might have suffered a skull fracture.

"I don't think he is hurt seriously," said Dr. Dees. "but we'll keep him under observation during the night and have X-rays made just to make sure. I found no evidence of a fractured skull. He may be able to return to the saddle Monday."

The physician said he found a contusion on Culmone's head, a bad bruise on his left hip and the jockey was suffering from mild shock.

Wilson, who returned to the track dressing room, later was removed to the hospital for examination.

Doctor Dees said Wilson had only a superficial muscular bruise on his left hip. He was not admitted to the hospital, but will be

Hill Prince's Stretch Drive Wins on Coast

INGLEWOOD, Calif., Dec. 16 (AP).—The competition was stubborn and the decision close, but Hill Prince finally hit the winner's circle at Hollywood Park today with victory in the $50,000 Sunset Handicap.

A rousing run to the wire pitted the Nation's champion 3-year-old colt, Hill Prince, and the leading 3-year-old filly of 1950, Next Move, in an exciting duel, and the Virginia colt got in first by three quarters of a length.

Great Circle, an outsider, grabbed third in a photo finish fight with Vino Fino, and the attraction marked the end of the Hollywood Park fall meeting.

Beaten in his two previous cracks at rich stakes out here, the son of old Virginia carried down $36,050 for his efforts today and boosted his life-time earnings to $351,240 and his 1950 winnings to $315,015.

3/5ths Second Off Noor's Mark

A crowd of 33,677 fans witnessed the mile and one eighth fixture, clocked at 1:48 3/5—three-fifths of a second behind the track record held by the Prince's arch foe but now retired foe, Noor, who set it just 16 days ago.

Hill Prince, racing for Christopher T. Chenery, was the odds-on-favorite and returned $2.90, $2.30 and $2.10. Next Move, Alfred G. Vanderbilt's pride, paid $2.50 and $2.20, and Great Circle, owned by John du Bois Wack, paid $3.10.

Hill Prince ran third to Noor and Palestinian in the $100,000 Gold Cup a week ago, and third to Your Host and Ponder in the $35,000 Thanksgiving Day Handicap. None of these thoroughbreds was in the lineup today.

Jockey Eddie Arcaro took no chances. He kept Hill Prince back at the start. They were CHICAGO, Dec. 16 (AP).—All-America Back Vic Janowicz of Ohio State today was announced the winner of the Chicago Tribune silver football. The trophy is awarded each year to the football player selected as most valuable to his team in the Western Conference.

Kentucky Routs Kansas

LEXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 16 (AP)—Seven-foot Bill Spivy turned in a masterful performance tonight as unbeaten Kentucky blasted Kansas from the Nation's basketball elite with an astounding 68-39 victory before a crowd of 13,000.

It was evident from the start that Spivey had Clyde Lovellette, the fabulous Kansas skyscraper, bottled in a jug and the stopper in his hand. The giant Kentuckian, meanwhile, was scoring freely and wound up with 22 big points.

With Lovellette stopped, Kansas found itself getting only one shot at a time at the bucket as Lanky Shelby Linville and Frank Ramsey controlled the boards and kept Kansas well at bay offensively.

Kentucky blasted a tight ball game after 11 minutes and pulled to a strong 28-12 bulge after a low-scoring first half.

Bullets' 70-Point 2d Half Wins, 119-88

BALTIMORE, Dec. 16 (AP).—The Baltimore Bullets swished through 48 points in the last quarter tonight to crush Boston, 119 to 88, and toss out at least four floor records.

It was the most points ever scored in a single game here; It was the Bullets' fourth win in the last five starts.

Knicks Defeat Fort Wayne

NEW YORK, Dec. 16 (AP).—After a slow start, the New York Knickerbockers rallied to defeat the Fort Wayne Pistons, 86-77, today in a National Basketball Association contest in Madison Square Garden.

A crowd of 5,564 saw the Knicks score only nine points in the first quarter. But, sparked by Vince Boryla, the New Yorkers spurted to a 30-29 halftime edge, which they steadily built up during the final 24 minutes.

Gabor, Schayes Lead Syracuse, 79-75

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dc. 16 (AP). Billy Gabor and Dolph Schayes led the Syracuse Nats to a 79-75 overtime victory over the Rochester Royals in an NBA game tonight. A near-capacity crowd of 4044 saw the Nats break their own three-game losing streak and the Royals' five-game-win string.

Gabor hit half of his shots from the field and finished with 24 points. Schayes, a workhorse under both boards, netted 20 points.

In Mysterious Assault

Stiteler, Texas A&M Coach, Beaten Near Houston Hotel

HOUSTON, Dec. 16 (AP).—Harry Stiteler, Texas A. & M. head football coach, was beaten up here last night under mysterious circumstances.

The assault took place somewhere between the Municipal Airport and the Shamrock Hotel where the coach was expected to attend the Houston A. & M. Club's annual banquet honoring the Aggie football team.

About two hours after the banquet began, announcement was made that Stiteler was "ill" and could not attend the banquet.

Later a Shamrock Hotel garage attendant reported that Stiteler, his face cut and beaten, asked him directions to the men's room.

"He looked very pale. He had cuts on his cheeks and forehead. His right eye was puffed, cut and closed. His left cheek was swollen," the garage attendant said.

Stiteler, who returned to College Station last night, issued this statement today through the A.&M. public relations office:

"Someone, possibly mistaking me for somebody else, took a poke at me as I was getting out of a cab near the Shamrock and there's nothing serious about it."

He added that he did not recognize the man.

Browns-Giants, Rams-Bears In Pro Playoffs Today

Los Angeles Favored Despite 2 Previous Losses to Chicagoans

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 16 (AP).—More than 80,000 fans may be on hand tomorrow when the Chicago Bears and the Los Angeles Rams collide in Memorial Coliseum in the "pro game of the year" for California.

At stake is the National Conference title and the chance to tangle with either the New York Giants or the Cleveland Browns for the National League crown next Sunday back East.

Good weather was forecast and the Rams are favored by seven points. They won it last year too.

Even the most ardent Ram supporter doubts the wisdom of the odds, however. They know that twice this season the Rams have been beaten by the Bears, 24-20, and 24-14, victims of such Bear stars as George Gulyanics, Johnny Lujack, Ed Sprinkle, Ray Bray and their mates.

Cleveland May Use Sneakers; Field Frozen, More Snow Forecast

CLEVELAND, Dec. 16 (AP).—The New York Giants plow into snowy Cleveland today, hoping to prove Paul Brown's Browns aren't good enough to win a championship in "big league" football.

Backers of the National Football League for years pooh-poohed the old All-America Conference as pretty minor stuff. The champion Browns disagreed, naturally.

Now that the leagues are merged, only the Browns of the AAC have survived for the play-offs in the NFL's two conferences.

Both Games on Radio; Giants-Browns on Video

The Giants-Browns game today in Cleveland for the American Division championship of the National Football League will be broadcast and televised locally. The game will be carried on WMAL-TV, channel seven, and WOL, 1450 on the dial, starting at 1:25 p. m.

At 4 o'clock, WOL will swing out to Los Angeles and pick up the Bears-Rams contest for the National Division championship.

Tomorrow, in the refrigerator-like lakefront stadium, they play the Giants for the championship of the American Conference.

The Browns are 7½-point favorites chiefly because no team has ever beaten a Paul Brown-coached 11 three times and the Giants have done it twice this year already.

The Browns may go into the game shy of Rookie Halfback Dopey Phelps, a standout on punt and kickoff returns. Phelps, suffered an injured side Thursday. Dub Jones will replace him on offense and Red Bumgardner will play safety on defense.

The Giants won't reveal whether they will use the T-formation or the single wing. They have used both this season.

But either way they have a fine running game in addition to American U. Romps Over Davis-Elkins

The American University Eagles last night broke a two-year jinx, defeating Davis-Elkins, 67-49, in the AU gym.

The Senators were the only team to beat the Eagles on their home court for the past two seasons.

Capt. Leroy Ishman stymied the Senators' attack repeatedly as he intercepted their passes and drove down the court for layup shots.

The Eagles, who have lost only to Penn State this season in five games, dominated floor play and controlled the backboards throughout.

American went ahead in the first few minutes and was never headed.

Ishman, the District's leading scorer last year, was high last night with 27 points.

Draft Joke on Gator Bowl Queen's Escort Comes True

LEXINGTON, Va., Dec. 16 (AP).—Aside to Maj. Gen. Lewis Hershey: You didn't get the point, General, this thing was supposed to be a joke.

Now you have gone and butched things up, good and proper.

You remember Steve Miles—the Washington and Lee lad who was chosen to escort the Gator Bowl queen, Norma Bell of the University of Wyoming.

Steve caused quite a stir last week. Said he didn't know what his girl at Sweet Briar would think about his tagging around with the beauteous Miss Bell at Jacksonville, Fla., on New Year's Day.

Then Tuesday night his fraternity brothers decided they'd play this joke on him. They telephoned the Roanoke Times and tipped the editors that Steve wouldn't be able to get to Jacksonville. Said he'd been summoned to take a physical examination for the draft—on December 27.

The Times had the story in type and gave it to the Associated Press before some doubting Thomas decided he'd better check—story had to be killed.

Lot of laughs.

Now, General Hershey, what do you suppose Steve Miles got in the mail today? A draft notice.

And when do you suppose your folks ordered him to report for that physical? December 27. No kidding, this time.

Lefty Larsen, Ignored by Davis Cuppers, Named No. 1 Player

Herb Flam Ranked 2d, Patty Third

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16 (AP).—As a Larsen, ranked sixth last year, the men's singles championship at Forest Hills, Arthur D. Larsen of San Francisco today was accorded recognition as the No. 1 tennis player in the United States for 1950.

Undisturbed by professional complications this year, the United States Lawn Tennis Association's ranking committee gave the "automatic" top spot to the temperamental California left-hander and the second place to runner-up Herbie Flam of Beverly Hills, Calif.

The rankings will not become official until approved by the USLTA annual meeting, January 20, but there is little likelihood that they will be changed. A year ago there was some discussion of the No. 1 ranking of Pancho Gonzales, who had signed a professional contract before the annual meeting.

Patty Third

Listed behind Larsen and Flam were J. Edward (Budge) Patty, and three members of the beaten Davis Cup team, Ted Schroeder, Gardnar Mulloy and Bill Talbert.

Tom Brown, jr., the fourth Davis Cupper, was ranked tenth. Others in the first 10: 7—Richard Savitt, Orange, N. J.; 8—Earl H. Cochell, San Francisco, and 9—E. Victor Seixas, jr., Philadelphia.

Larsen, ranked sixth last year, but left off the Davis Cup team, performed brilliantly late in the season to win the top ranking. After losing to Schroeder in the Newport tournament, he turned back Flam in the Forest Hills final, lost again to Schroeder in a "grudge" match in the Pacific Southwest tournament and beat Flam for the National Hard Court title.

Talbert Picked Twice

The veteran Talbert was given a spot on both the first and second rated doubles teams, paired with young Tony Trabert of Cincinnati on the No. 1 team and with Mulloy as No. 2. Other ranking doubles teams: 3, Flam and Larsen; 4, Savitt and Sidney Schwarz, Brooklyn; 5, Larsen and Hugh Stewart, San Marino, Calif.; 6, Harold M. Burrows, jr., Charlottesville, Va., and L. Straight Clark, Los Angeles; 7, James Brink and Fred Fisher, Seattle; 8, Cochell and Stewart; 9, Brown and Match; 10, Robert Kimbrell and George Richards, Montebello, Calif.

G. Diehl Mateer and G. Diehl Mateer, jr. of Ardmore, Pa., were ranked first in father and son doubles.

Sugar Ray Easily Defeats Walczack

GENEVA, Switzerland, Dec. 16 (AP).—Welterweight Champion Ray (Sugar) Robinson loosed a furious two-fisted attack to whip France's Jean Walczak in a one-sided 10-round bout here tonight.

It was Robinson's third European nontitle victory in three weeks. He had previously knocked out Jean Stock of France and Belgian's Luc Van Dam. Robinson weighed 156, Walczack 153.

The lithe, lighting-like Robinson was the complete master throughout, smashing Walczack to the floor in the ninth and tenth rounds. But, even from the outset, the game Frenchman came back again and again to bore into Robinson's stinging lefts and rights.

The crowd of 10,000 saw Robinson, obviously seeking an early knockout, open with an overwhelming barrage. But he couldn't put across the important punch.

When the fight was over, Walczack's face was a red blotch. He was bleeding from the nose and mouth.

Walczack, who also lasted 10 rounds with Robinson in St. Louis last February, took fearful punishment. Robinson centered his attack to Walczack's body in the early rounds and had the Frenchman swinging aimlessly.

New Yorkers Win at Garden

NEW YORK, Dec. 16 (AP).—Ronnie MacGilvray's short one-handed push shot with 40 seconds left broke a 49-49 deadlock and gave St. John's of Brooklyn an uphill 51-49 triumph over Holy Cross tonight in the second game of a college basketball doubleheader before 16,137 Madison Square Garden fans.

It was the first and only time St. John's was in front in the game. Manhattan won, 47-46, over Texas in the opener.

The Longhorns staged a last-minute rally to knot the game at 46-46. Then with seconds remaining, George Scaling carried the ball down court for Texas and passed to Scarborough. Scarborough accidentally pushed his opponent off as the whistle ended the game.

Garvin calmly toed the free throw line to score and give Manhattan its fourth triumph in five starts. The loss was Texas' fourth against two victories.

Cooper's 64 Ties Turnesa; Worsham 3d

HAVANA, Cuba, Dec. 16 (AP)—Pete Cooper of Ponte Vedra, Fla., shot a sensational 64 today to tie Jim Turnesa of Briarcliff, N. Y., for the lead in the Havana Invitation golf tourney at the end of 54 holes at 202.

Turnesa, top man yesterday at the finish of 36 holes with 134, had a creditable 68—four under par—today.

Cooper got his 202 total by magnificent, eight-under-par shooting to equal the tournament record, set last year by Jim Demaret of Ojai, Calif.

The 64 was only two strokes above the course record, 62, set by Rufino Gonzalez, pro of the tournament host club, last August 18.

Worsham Stroke Back

Right behind the two leaders today was Lew Worsham, of Oakmont, Penn., with 203.

Herman Barron of White Plains, N. Y., had 205.

Fred Haas jr., New Orleans, Toney Penna, of Cincinnati, and Henry Ransom, St. Andrews, Ill., had 207.

Next with 208's were Deamret, Ed Oliver, of Seattle and Tommy Bolt, Durham, N. C.

Marty Furgol of North Hollywood, Calif., E. J. Harrison, St. Andrews, Ill., Rufino Gonzalez of Havana and Claude Harmon of Mamaroneck, N. Y., had 209.

Dave Douglas of Newark, Del., and Jack Burke of Houston had 210.

Cooper's game was good all the way from tee to the cup. He had par on 10 holes, was under par on seven, and over par only on one hole.

Cooper's play today—his previous cards were 68 and 70—put him up high among the hard men for a try at the title, to be decided after 18 holes tomorrow.

Hamilton Has 217

Other scores today:

Ted Kroll, New Hartford, N. Y., and Bob Toski, Northampton, Mass., 212; Ed Furgol of Royal Oaks, Mich., Al Brosch, Garden City, N. Y., Flenn Teal, Jacksonville, Fla., and Dick Mayer, Old Greenwich, Conn., had 213.

Clayton Haefner, Charlotte, N. C., had 215.

Bud Lewis, Havana, had 216.

Bob Hamilton, Landover, Md., had 217; Joe Kirkwood, jr., Hollywood, Calif., 218; Vic Ghezzi, Inwood, Long Island, 221 and Chic Harbert, Detroit, 225.

Turnesa and Barron shared first prize of $2000 in the pro-amateur best ball matches which ended today. Each pro played with two local amateurs during the first three days. In next place was Turnesa and another of his amateur partners, for a $500 prize. Ed Furgol, Barron and Burke tied for the next prize, getting $166 each.

Maryland Deer Kill Slightly Off Because of Bad Weather

By Ralph Murdock

THE DEER count taken by Maryland hunters during the season which closed on December 9 fell slightly behind last year's kill. The 1949 score was 969, while the 1950 season was only 886 deer. The worst hunting weather in Maryland's deer history was blamed.

Murdock

Snow which covered the ground in the northern sector of the Free State practically made good hunting an impossibility for the first two days. The count by counties for 1950: Frederick, 74; Worcester, 72; Garrett, 374; Allegany, 188; Washington, 102; Cecil, 76.

INCIDENTALLY, the Izaak Walton League's Western Virginia Big Game Trophy contest, recently held at Harrisonburg, attracted the largest collection of mounted deer heads ever seen in this area and included a very unusual specimen—a 26-point antler.

This many-pointed first prize winner was killed by Bruce C. Orndorff, of Winchester, in the Masanutten Mountains near Strasburg. It attracted much interest from deer hunters who had never seen such an array of points. Orndorff's prize was a 30-30 rifle. (A wonderful prize for one "buck".)

THE OPENING DAY of the West Virginia deer season produced 807 as against 1817 last year. The Conservation Commission Officials of this state believe that the season's total kill will be considerably under last year's bag of 6195 deer. Rough weather did not help the situation here on opening day either.

In Tucker County only 73 deer were shot as against 368 for the previous year.

NOTE to the duck hunters—During the migratory waterfowl hunting season this year, many Virginia hunters probably will find some of the ducks and geese they shoot will have bands on their legs.

These hunters can render a great service by sending the information on these bands to the Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries and then sending the band to the United States Fish and Wildlife Service. The information sent to the Game Commission should include the hunter's name, species of bird shot, where killed, the date and the band number.

The band itself should be flattened and sent to the Bird Service, Patuxent Research Refuge at Laurel, Md. In return, the hunter will receive information on the history of the banded bird.

Musial Wins Fourth League Batting Title

By Murray Rose

NEW YORK, Dec. 16 (AP).—The National League today officially crowned Stan Musial of St. Louis as the circuit's batting champion for 1950, making him the first lefthanded swinger ever to capture the honor four times.

The 30-year-old first baseman-outfielder won with a mark of .346, the lowest average of his four winning years. It was 6 points more than the .340 figure posted by Johnny Hopp, the Pittsburgh first baseman who was traded to the New York Yankees near the end of the season.

Stan (The Man) succeeds Brooklyn's Jackie Robinson, who won the 1949 race with a .342 average. Musial first won the batting title in 1943 with a .357 average. He was tops again in '46 with .355, and first in '48 with .376.

Two National League immortals, Honus Wagner of Pittsburgh, and Rogers Hornsby of St. Louis and Boston, are the only others with more batting titles than Musial. Both were righthanders. Wagner won the crown eight times while Hornsby was first seven times.

The league's top 10 hitters included:

1—Musial, .346; 2—Hopp, Pittsburgh, .340; 3—Robinson, Brooklyn, 3.24; 4—Duke Snider, Brooklyn, .321; 5—Walter Cooper, Cincinnati-Boston, .313; 6—Del Ennis, Philadelphia, .311; 7—Ted Kluszewski, Cincinnati, .307; 8—Carl Furillo, Brooklyn, and Bob Elliott, Boston, .305 each; 10—Andy Pafko, Chicago, and Sid Gordon, Boston, .304 each.

BEARS—From Page 1-C

Bears, Rams Play Today For Crown

tional championship, led a cool, confident squad into town.

The Rams, headed by Joe Stydahar, freshman head coach and a former great tackle for the Bears, are hopeful and deadly determined.

A year ago they lost their bid for the league title against the Philadelphia Eagles.

The Rams have had the benefit of a two week rest to aim at the Bears, who had to keep going last Sunday to earn their division tie by beating a stubborn Detroit line.

Each team has won nine games and lost three. The Bears have scored 279 points and had 207 scored against them. Los Angeles rolled up 466 points and its rivals counted 309.

The comparative scoring tells much of the story. The Rams are the greatest offensive team in the league but have been far less impressive on defense. And critics have pointed out that they have been beaten by the top teams in the league—the Bears, Philadelphia and the New York Giants, the latter in exhibition play.

Individually, the Rams are studded with brilliance. Sophomore Norman Van Brocklin is the league's leading passer, and alternate Bob Waterfield is still a power. Left End Tom Fears leads the league in pass receiving. Dick Hoerner rates with the best at fullback, and Glenn Davis vibs with Doak Walker of Detroit for rookie of the year honors. V. T. Smith is the leading kickoff return gainer, and has brought three back for touchdowns.

The Rams, then located in Cleveland, won the national title in 1945, and Waterfield was the hero.

Gallaudet Wins Second, 66-53, Over Salisbury

Gallaudet chalked up its second triumph in four starts by defeating Salisbury State Teachers College, 66-53, last night at Jefferson Junior High gym. Salisbury has won three games and lost one.

Mark Wait and Dick Amundsen were high scorers for the victors, Wait with 19 points and Amundsen with 18. Buddy Brinsfield was best among the losers with 15

Unbeaten Navy Stays That Way, Routs Harvard, 68-50

17-Yard Average

Terps Best At Returning Foes' Passes

NEW YORK, Dec. 16 (AP).—Maryland led the Nation in running back intercepted passes during the past football season, according to statistics released today by the NCAA service bureau.

The Old Liners, who won 7 of their 10 games, returned 24 interceptions for 408 yards, an average of 17 yards on each return.

The Marylanders also ran back more punts than any other team—56—and ran them farther than any other team—771 yards.

The Texas Aggies averaged 17.6 yards on each of their 24 punt returns to lead every college team in the land in that department.

Closest rival of the Aggies was Cincinnati with a 17.5 average, followed by Colorado A. & M., 17.4, and the Texas Longhorns, 17.3.

The year's most daring safety men played for Southern California. They ran back 42 out of the 52 kicks that came their way for a percentage of 77.8. Their nearest rivals in that respect were Northwestern and North Carolina State, each of which lugged the leather back 70 percent of the time.

The North Carolina State Wolfpack not only ran back 7 out of every 10 enemy boots, but averaged 14.6 yards per run. A little figuring shows that the Wolfpack thus reduced by 10.2 yards the value of each opposing punt, the top mark in the country.

In accepting 67 kickoffs, Virginia Tech shattered the previous record of 56 set last year by Holy Cross. So did Kansas State with 64, Richmond with 62 and Utah State with 58.

Tennessee was the toughest team of them all to pass against, followed by the Miami Hurricanes. The Volunteers grabbed 23 of 149 flings by their rivals for an average of 15.4. Miami intercepted 31 out of 202 for 15.3. Kentucky snatched 14.3 percent, Wyoming 14.0 and Washington and Lee 13.8.

Mullaney Top Scorer With 17

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 16 (AP). Far ahead at the half, Navy's basketball team coasted to a 68-50 win over Harvard today for its fourth straight decision.

Guard Dave Mullaney, scoring mainly from the fringe of Harvard's zone defense, scored six field goals and five three throws for 17 points to lead the undefeated Midshipmen.

Harvard, dropping its third in five games, outpointed Navy in the second half, 30-29, but failed to narrow the margin to fewer than 10 points.

Harvard's attack faltered in the last 7 minutes after losing its two leading marksmen on personal fouls. Dick Lionette, who scored 15 points on six goals and three penalty shots, and Gerald Murphy were both ejected. Murphy had counted four goals and six free throws.

Behind at one stage, 9-8, Navy pulled safely ahead with a late first-half barrage. The Middies scored 15 points to Harvard's five in 7 minutes preceding the intermission.

Navy Sinks Loyola, 68-6, in Swimming

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 16 (AP)—Navy submerged Loyola of Baltimore, 68-6, in the season's swimming opener for both teams today.

Middie entries finished one-two in each individual race and captured both relays to sweep the meet.

Jan Vandersluis, Navy sophomore taking a bow in varsity competition, captured two events. He edged classmate Vaughin Wilson in both the 220-yard and the 440-yard freestyles.

Rookies predominated in Lieut. Comdr. John Higgin's own debut as Navy coach. Veterans Sam Martin and Boyd Johnson won the 50-yard freestyle and 200-yard backstroke, otherwise youngsters swam off with all the first and participated in the relay victories.

Aid to Athletes Tightened

Southwest Re-Adopts War Eligibility Rules

By Harold V. Ratliff

DALLAS, Dec. 16 (AP).—War-time eligibility rules for athletes were returned to the by-laws of the Southwest Conference today.

The conference faculty committee also tightened the rules allowing financial aid to athletes and sent a somewhat mysterious recommendation to the National Collegiate Athletic Association, declining to say what it contained but leaving these conjectures:

1. The conference suggested to the NCAA that it refrain from being a regulatory agency for its "sanity" code but to leave that up to the individual conferences.

2. The conference wants a rule put into the code which will allow an athlete to receive aid from the school without working for it.

The war-time or military service rule reactivated by the committee provides that the eligibility of a college student is the same upon returning to school as it was at the time he entered the service.

This means that if an athlete participates in sports, even at a college, while he is in a military service while attending that school, the participation does not count against him.

The rule allowing freshmen to participate in varsity sports was not returned but will be considered at the spring meeting of the conference. It was not felt that this rule was necessary at this time.

The financial aid rule was changed for clarification. Tuition and fees are allowed athletes now along with a job for which they work for their board and room. Outside aid is prohibited. Jobs, except during the summer and school vacations, must not pay more than the prevailing wage for such work in the community.

Added to this rule by the committee today was the provision that money from work on a commission basis should not be excessive.

Gifts of money and other valuable considerations are prohibited and the committee added that excessive loans and excessive sureties for loans would not be countenanced.

Howard Grubbs, executive secretary of the conference, is charged with enforcement of these rules and will be the judge of whether anything is excessive. The first offense will bring loss of a year of eligibility. The second will mean loss of eligibility forever.

Under the rule prohibiting professional sports, a change was made in reading to make it "professional activities." Eliminated entirely was the use of an athlete's name in commercial advertising. The rule has been that the name could be used if the athlete was not employed by the concern and was not paid for it.

The proposed amendment to the NCAA constitution was kept a deep, dark secret. The faculty committee and Secretary Grubbs wouldn't even discuss it or give any inkling of what it contained.

Florida State Drops Out of Dixie League

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Dec. 16 (AP).—Florida State University today announced it is dropping out of the Dixie Athletic Conference at the end of the school year and will begin a program of assistance to athletes in September.

The move will make FSU teams independent nonconference members.

FSU was a charter member of the Dixie Conference which includes smaller Southern colleges and has a strict nonsubsidization policy.

GW, Hoyas Play Tuesday In Twin Bill

Washington's first big college basketball doubleheader of the season is set for Tuesday night at Uline Arena.

In the first game, 8 o'clock, it's George Washington vs. Washington and Lee, and in the nightcap, it's Georgetown vs. American. Both figure to be good games, but it's the nightcap which should prove most interesting.

For years, American U. tried to crash the area's so called "big three" basketball clique of G. W., Georgetown and Maryland. The Hoyas, last year, were the first to agree to play the Eagles.

It was a terrific game, won by the Hoyas in the closing minute, 68-63, on a scoring spurt by Frank Alagia. Although the Eagles gave a good account of themselves in that one, and went on to the Mason-Dixon Conference championship, G. W. and the Terps have continued to snub them. The Eagles have the incentive—to show the "big three" that they "belong."

Both A. U. and Georgetown have won three out of four so far. The Eagles lost to Penn State while Georgetown's soph-studded Hoyas lost to Long Island in Madison Square Garden.

Navy Plebes Defeat Loyola

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 16 (AP). Forward Jack Clune scored 18 points today to pace Navy Plebes in their 79-53 victory over Loyola Freshmen.

Mainstays of the Loyola team were forward Joel Hittleman and guard Jack Doyle. Hittleman led his team in the first period by whipping in a third of its points.

Frankie Hauff Named Captain Of Navy Team

TNNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 16 (AP).—Frankie Hauff, 22-year-old two-platoon halfback, will captain Navy's 1951 football team.

Hauff, who will be a first classman (senior) next year, was elected by letter winners of the Navy squad which this year stunned Army with a 14-2 lacing, won two other games and lost six.

The 170-pound charger from St. Louis carried more times and gained more ground than any other Navy back. In 113 trips he advanced 443 yards for a 3.9 average.

One of the few Midshipmen who played consistently in both platoons, he also was a halfback mainstay on defense. Hauff succeeds End Tom Bakke as captain.

a stubborn defense. Otto Graham, the Browns' star passer, said today, "We have to stop them on the ground to beat them," and his dour coach agreed.

The Giants will be without End Ray Poole, who broke a small bone in his ankle last week and will be repaced by Kelley Mote.

More than prestige is at stake: the winner will get some of those championship game receipts after playing the victor of tomorrow's playoff in the National Conference between the Chicago Bears and the Los Angeles Rams.

The Giants, in their two victories over the Browns were pretty tricky on both occasions.

In the first game, Cleveland's Otto Graham simply couldn't get his passes clicking. The trouble was, the receivers were too heavily guarded. The giants won, 6 to 0.

In the second game, the Giants switched strategy and rushed Graham. New York won again, 17 to 13.

For the game here, the weatherman thinks it will be sub-freezing again, with more snow if anything.

The game starts at 1:30 p. m., EST, one half hour earlier than usual and both radio and television owners in many cities in the Nation will be able to see and hear it.

Coach Paul Brown, by the way, said there was a remote possibility his team might wear tennis shoes (cleats won't grip on frozen turf) but he's never done this before. He can't say for sure.

by applying pancake makeup. None could be found, however, because the market had been cornered by TV sports announcers.

In the dressing room, where reporters were waiting to enter when the game started, the winning Deltas said two things about their victory:

1. They operated from a single wing with an unbalance coach, whom they refused to identify.

2. They were in better shape. "We took four laps around Walter Haight every day for a week," they explained.

The only casualty was Miss Jerry Welker, of the Deltas, who had an eyebrow plucked during a goal line stand. She is expected to recover in time for the Sigma Nu dance, however.

N. C. State Ends Temple's Streak

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 16 (AP).—All-America candidates Sam Ranzino of North Carolina State and Bill Mikvy of Temple University both put on a scoring show as State kept its record clean of defeats with an 83-61 victory tonight. It was Temple's first loss of the season after five successive triumphs.

Ranzino had 23 points while Mikvy collected 20 counters.

Ohio State Is Firm; They Want 'Genius' As Grid Coach

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 16 (AP).—Ohio State University's search for a new head football coach to succeed resigned Wes Fesler was on in earnest today.

President Howard L. Bevis told a capacity audience last night at the annual football appreciation dinner:

"We'll look over the entire field, in and out of the university, and we'll hire the best man we can find. We'll try to find a genius—a man who never makes the same mistake once."

Winner, Large Crowds

Auerbach 'Mr. Big' To Fans in Boston

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

ARNOLD (RED) AUERBACH, who was cocahing Roosevelt High's basketball team without much distinction here seven short years ago, is doing much better for himself in bigger company.

Now somewhat of a Mr. Big in the National Pro Basketball League, Red came back to town the other day leading the Boston Celtics, among the pace-setters in the Eastern Division.

Last year the same Celtics finished a poor last. Up in Boston they're giving Red full credit for the Celtics' overnight improvement, praising his shrewd ability to recognize talent on the hoof, corral it, and develop it into a smooth team.

Red replaced Doggie Julian this year after Doggie was unable to make the Celtics move despite such "name" players as Yale's Tony Lavelli and Holy Cross' George Kafton.

Red overhauled the club, picking up some players who had never enjoyed success elsewhere, bringing in some established stars and moulding them into a smooth combination.

He picked up castoffs Ed Stanczyk from Utica, Harry Boykoff from Baltimore, Andy Duncan from Rochester and Bob Cousy from Chicago. While all had been great players in college, none had adapted himself to the pro game . . . until Red showed them how to click.

Red drafted All-America Easy Ed MacAuley from the St. Louis Bombers, All-America Chuck Cooper from Duquesne and Bob Donham from Ohio State.

He traded off Kenny Sailors, considered by many as the best floor player in basketball, for Baltimore's Dick Mehen.

All he has left from last year's Boston club are Sonny Hertzberg and John Mahnken, both of whom he coached with the Caps years ago, and Ed Leede.

THE CELTICS are a winning combination this winter and they're bringing out the fans. Boston is one of only four teams in the league showing an increase at the gate. A week ago, the Celtics drew a capacity crowd of 13,909 for a home game against Fort Wayne.

Organizing and building are nothing new for Auerbach, former George Washington University basketball star, coach at Roosevelt High in 1945. He was called on by Mike Uline to organize Washington's first Caps team in '46.

He rounded up Bob Feerick, Bones McKinney, Fred Scolari, John Norlander and Mahnken. For two years they were the best pro club in the East. The third year he guided them to second place, and then quit because he couldn't wangle more than a one-year contract from Uline.

He returned to pro ball last year to pick up last-place Tri-City and bring it home third in the Western Division.

The lure of a three-year contract and a chance to move back East brought Auerbach to Boston this season, a move that has made Red, Celtics' President Walter Brown and the Boston fans very happy. What Red once did for Washington, he is now doing for Boston.

Harridge Gets Slocum Award

NEW YORK, Dec. 16 (AP).—Will Harridge, president of the American Basebadll League, has been named winner of the Bill Slocum Award by the New York Chapter of Baseball Writers. Harridge will be presented with the award at the annual baseball writers' dinner on February 4.

The honors is given annually to the one deemed to have done the most for the sport over a period of years.

AP Names Harper 1950's 'Virginia Athlete of Year'

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 16 (AP).—Thirty-six-year-old Chandler Harper, Professional Golfers Association champion, today was named the 1950 Virginia "Athlete of the Year" by the Associated Press.

Harper is professional at both the Glenshealiah and the Elizabeth Monar golf clubs at Portsmouth.

The slender stylist who holds two recognized world's records for golf collected a total of 51 points in the balloting by Old Dominion sports writers. Harper nosed out Gil Bocetti, quarterback on Washington and Lee's 'Gator Bowl football team. Bocetti gained 44 points.

Excel Does Just That at Charles Town at $27

Rider Dosher Hurt in 3d Race Spill

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

CHARLES TOWN, Dec. 16.—Despite the name, J. K. Wynkoop's Excel continues to be one of the most underestimated horses at this track. Second twice at 15-1 in excellent company, the Sun Again 4-year-old marched postward at 12-1 today and did the job—the front end task, that is.

Under expert handling by Willie Miller, by the way, an underestimated jockey, Excel got up in the final jump to hand a nose defeat on Dave Robertson's Rise to Follow. Third money in the field of eight went to P. L. Ley Decker's Fifty-Five.

Before a crowd of 5000, the Hagerstown-owned Excel was clocked in 1:59 for the mile and an eighth in the Ranson Purse, featuring the weekend program.

Excel paid a $27.80 win mutuel in a pay-off that found all the heavily backed horses—Fighting Gal, Tampero, and Butler—out of the money circle.

Jockey Eugene Dosher, Oklahoma boy, was injured in the third race when his mount, J. H. Harding's Upper Crust fell at the clubhouse turn.

The filly was far back and clear of horses when she stumbled and went down, Dosher rolling under the inside fence. He suffered lacerations of the face and left ear and was detained overnight at the Charles Town General Hospital by Dr. Marshall Glenn for X-rays and as a precautionary measure.

Rise to Follow set virtually all the pace in the feature while under good handling by Ray Ardini, the Washington boy. Several horses attempted to move to him, only to falter. However, Miller brought Excel to the outside and the chestnut gelding responded to shove his nose right on the wire at the last possible moment.

The victory was the sixth for Excel in 37 starts and his twentieth appearance (second in 10 races) in the money. The remarkable gelding carried 121 pounds and now has amassed almost $12,000 for a year of hard work, mostly on the smaller tracks.

This track kept up its big payoffs on the daily double, the twin bet return being more than $100 for the fifth time this week. Today's 3-7 combination paid $109.60.

Keene Fights Coleman on Turner Card

The final boxing card of 1950 will be held tomorrow night at Turner's Arena as District Light Heavyweight Champion Julian Keene meets up with hard-punching Leroy Coleman of Paterson, N. J. in the 10-round main event.

Coleman, a stablemate of Lee Savold, flattened Jimmy (Kid) Lee of New York in less than a minute in his only local appearance a few weeks ago.

The New Jersey belter has won most of his fights by knockouts. He has lost but seven out of 48 starts since turning pro in 1947.

Keene has lost only one bout in two years, to Chief Red Arrow. Keene said Red Arrow butted him, opening a cut over his eye. In a rematch, Keene knocked out the Chief.

A five-rounder brings together two more lightheavies, Rufus Barry, local scrapper, and Harvey Jones of Baltimore. Another five-round bout lists Sandy McPherson of Patterson, lightweight stablemate of Coleman, against Vic Creelman of Washington.

Washington's Pat Thomas hooks up with Jim Richmond, Baltimore, in another five.

Two four-round matches list Kid Crockett and Johnny Shields, local heavyweights, and Bobb Bowen, Baltimore welter, against Billy Hickerson.

Cunningham, Frank Speak At TD Club

Two outstanding sports columnists will be among the guest speakers at the Touchdown Club's sixteenth annual dinner January 6 at the Hotel Statler.

Bill Cunningham, sports editor of the Boston Herald, and Morris Frank, sports editor of the Houston Chronicle, will address the gathering.

General Chairman Tommy Webb said last night that the following notables will also attend: Bert Bell, commissioner of the National Football League; Herman Ball, coach of the Washington Redskins; President H. C. Byrd and Athletic Director Jim Tatum of the University of Maryland; Gen. Clifton B. Cates, commandant of the Marine Corps; Jack Dempsey, former world heavyweight champion, and Phil Rizzuto, shortstop of the world champion New York Yankees.

CHISOX from P. 1-C.

Chisox for Chandler, Mrs. Comiskey Says will have a nice talk with Chuck when he returns and also with Frank Lane."

Mrs. Comiskey said "there is no reason the White Sox should oppose Chandler."

"Charles A. Comiskey," she added, "was among the pioneers who set up the office of commissioner in 1921. I didn't believe he would want that form of baseball government torn down unless absolutely necessary. Some influence must have been brought to bear on Chuck, and that's what I intend to find out about."

Commenting on Mrs. Comiskey's stand, Irving Vaughan, veteran baseball writer for the Chicago Tribune, said:

"Mrs. Comiskey's lack of knowledge of rebel activity bears out what was reported in the wake of the bombshell announcement of a 9-7 vote at the secret meeting held Monday night. The leaders in the rebel gang didn't gain their needed support until they had pinned down doubtful clubs with a vigorous campaign a few hours before the sneak session took place. Twelve votes were necessary to assure extension of Chandler's regime.

"Meanwhile the nine original Chandler supporters are not sitting back idly, especially the American League portion thereof. They are making no secret of the fact that they are hopeful of adding the three votes required to give Chandler a vote of confidence as well as a new contract.

"The National Leaguers opposed to the coup in which the rebels were successful, at least for the time being, also are pressing for recalcitrants. The expectation is that one National and one American club will switch over, which, with the White Sox vote, should definitely quell the insurrection."

Lane, who returned from St. Petersburg Thursday, said that Mrs. Comiskey has not yet talked to him. Chuck Comiskey is en route back to Chicago by auto and is not due to report to the Comiskey Park office until Monday.

"I didn't participate in the executive meeting — I'm not a club owner, just an employe of the White Sox," said Lane. "And I don't know how Chuck voted. I told Chuck not to tell me so I could truthfully tell anyone I didn't know if he voted for or against Chandler."

Connie Mack Is on Chandler's Side, Too

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 16 (AP).—Connie Mack, the retired baseball manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, said today he can't understand why A. B. "Happy" Chandler was fired as major league commissioner.

The president of the Athletics, who celebrates his eighty-eighth birthday next Saturday, told a reporter:

"Mr. Chandler has done a great job as commissioner of baseball. He's done everything a man could ask of him. His accomplishments have been many. Frankly, I feel sorry for Mr. Chandler. I still have hopes he will stay in as commissioner. I think the men who fired him have made a terrible mistake."

Culmone Injured in 2-Horse Spill examined again on Monday before riding.

Earlier, Culmone had ridden his 370th winner of the year as he piloted the longshot, Dubious, to victory in the third race. The win left him 18 short of the 388 winners ridden by Walter Miller in 1906—a record yet unequaled.

There are 12 racing days left in the year. If the curly-haired young rider is to equal the mark he will have to ride better than a winner a day for the balance of 1950.

Although the spill did not appear serious, any time away from the track cut down his chances.

New Wonder and The Gink were battling for the lead in the backstretch. A patrol judge said it appeared The Gink, Wilson's mount, stepped on the heels of Pucketeer, ridden by Ken Church, and New Wonder fell. Wilson's mount fell in an unsuccessful effort to avoid the fallen horse.

Culmone got to his feet after the spill and led his mount off the track. Later, he complained of a headache and pains in the left side. He was removed to the hospital. Wilson had started to shower and also complained of pains. He too was removed to the hospital for observation.

Culmone Rival 'Sorry, Hopes It Isn't Serious'

INGLEWOOD, Calif., Dec. 16 (AP).—Jockey Willie Shoemaker, Joe Culmone's rival for this year's jockey honors, told a reporter here today when informed that Culmone had been injured in a spill in Florida:

"Gee, I'm sorry. I hope it isn't serious."

Shoemaker heard the news just after he brought home a winner in the second race at Hollywood Park. The win boosted Shoemaker's total to 357 for the year. Shoemaker won one race, the third, before he was hurt. It was his 370th victory of the year.

seventh going down the back stretch, and it was not until the far turn that the Prince began to pull past horses.

Coaltown Wins After Payoff

He traveled wide coming into the stretch, and then settled down to flag down the pace-setting Next Move. Gradually he came up, drew abreast of the flying little filly, and once he got his head in front, he was in.

The Calumet Stable got a big boot out of their great Coaltown, however.

The 5-year-old came off the shelf after a vacation since last April and was sharp enough to equal the track record at six furlongs and win the companion feature of the day, the $5000 Aloha Stakes. The time was 1:09 1/5 which Special Touch set last July.

Coaltown paid $6.70, $3.80 and $2.40; Star Fiddle $7.80 and $2.90, and Bolero, the favorite, ran third for a $2.20 payoff. Still another coming threat was Sunded.

DEAR FOLKS:

Race fans often marvel at the ability of the chart callers and announcers to distinguish the colors of a large field. Chart callers and the announcers marvel at the ability of the clockers to distinguish the horses in workouts without colors. Like the rest of us, they sometimes make errors but they have a mighty high batting average. For the first time in years, WWDC's Art Brown missed coming here on his birthday last Friday. He always plays his age in the daily double. He ain't 75, so he wouldn't have taken that $231 payoff anyway. Jockey Nick Shuk, injured in the spill here is getting shipshape and will ride in Florida after the first of the year. His parents flew in from their Illinois home to be with him. See you on the rail. BILL.

Belt, 4 Other Terps Picked on Soccer All-Stars

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Dec. 16 (AP).—James Belt, Maryland's star inside right, was the only unanimous choice for the all-star soccer team selected today by Southern Conference coaches.

Belt was one of five Maryland players on the first team selected by coaches Jim Blythe, Duke; Eric Degroat, North Carolina State; Doyle Royal, Maryland; Marvin Allen, North Carolina, and Wilson Fewster, Washington & Lee. Maryland's Terps won their second straight conference title. The first team:

ON A WOODED ACRE

OPEN TODAY, 10 A.M. TO DARK

This attractive Colonial home, situated on a beautiful full acre lot, is in the desirable Pine Ridge subdivision of Fairfax County, near Falls Church, Virginia.

The house has been recently renovated and is in new-house condition throughout. The living room (13x16) has a wood-burning fireplace, the dining room is 12 feet square and opens onto a nice screened porch which could be converted to a downstairs bedroom or study if desired. The kitchen is fully equipped, including electric range and 8-cubic-foot refrigerator.

The basement has an excellent open fireplace and offers unlimited possibilities for a recreation room or hobby shop.

With large lots becoming more and more scarce, here is an opportunity to get some elbow room without spending a fortune. The house is equipped with full-length storm windows and screens. Copper plumbing. Paved streets.

DACHSHUND PUPS

SMOOTH, RED, 3 MONTHS
If he were as broad as he is long, the dachshund
Would be as big as an oxhund;
But the width of ours is normal,
And their lineage formal.
As attested by A.K.C. registry
Of their ancestry.
So if you want a companion who is both amusing and amiable,
But fail to call OF 4990, only yourself will be shamed.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Situation to Test Character

A great test of the American character is hard upon us. President Truman's emergency talk to the Nation makes that clear. A speed-up in rearmament—to suit the quickening tempo of the Kremlin time-table—will cause economic injuries. Some people are going to lose jobs. Some business men are going to lose money. And all of us are going to find life getting a lot tougher.

Livingston

The attitude toward defense will change. We can't have business as usual, despite the defense production act. Last September, after Korea, Congress wanted war production, but it didn't want discombobulation. The act specified that the diversion of civilian production to war production "may proceed at once," but that the national economy "must be maintained with the maximum effectiveness and least hardship."

Government officials have felt they had to be careful lest somebody be hurt. If somebody were hurt, there'd be an investigation. Thus, the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, headed by Senator Maybank (D., S. C.), has been investigating the effect of regulation W on the automobile industry.

Oomph for War Production

President Truman is now clearing the decks for action. Under a state of national emergency, the defense department can issue contracts directly to manufacturers by negotiation, insead of calling for bids—a time-consuming process. As a result, the issuance of defense orders will be speeded up.

My hunch is that we won't get real oomph into war production until the Government orders flat cutbacks in civilian production, say a 30 percent slash in auto output.

So long as auto companies can continue to make as many cars as they can get materials for, all the energy and drive of the companies is to make cars. But slap a ceiling on production, and they'll go after the war business. The same applies to television, refrigerators, washing machines, etc.

That, of course, will cause unemployment. Walter Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers, has fought any reductions in auto schedules. Washington officials have hesitated to take the step too. They were worried about unemployment. They felt that the Army, Navy, and Air Force weren't ready with war orders to take up the slack.

But if the companies are ready for business, as I've noted before, military designers will get off their blueprints. It won't be long then before tanks, guns, ammunition, etc., roll off assembly lines.

Rail Trainmen Hurt Defense

Clearly, if limitation orders are to be put on the manufacture of civilian durable goods, business men and workers will suffer financial difficulty. And if price ceilings are to be put on foods, farm leaders will have to show a willingness to subordinate their particular financial interest to the general emergency. That's where the test of American character will come in.

The "sickness strikes of railroad yard workers in Chicago, St. Louis, and Washington revealed an insensibility to the world crisis. You'd think Harry Bridges was the leader of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, not W. P. Kennedy. The strikes tied up the entire economy, slowed what little war production had been started.

Aside from getting war production up rapidly, the greatest problem the Administration faces is inflation. It is feeding on itself. Business men, who six months ago were worried about a possible slump and didn't want to expand, are now placing orders right and left.

Hurry-Up Call for Men

Prime example: Freight cars—127,000 are on order today as against only 40,000 in June, before Korea, and 19,000 in January. Plant and equipment expenditures of American business as a whole are estimated up 30 percent in the first quarter of 1951 as against the first quarter of 1950. Industrialists are reasoning:

Anything I try to build or buy two or three years from now will cost more, so I'd better buy now, if I can.

Before the Administration can work out a program of price control, it must also work out a policy on wage control. That's what stymied Economic Stabilizer Alan Valentine in his talks with General Motors, Ford, and other auto companies on passenger car prices. The Administration must find some way to suspend the operation of the cost-of-living clause in automobile wage contracts in order to stabilize auto prices.

These are all work-out problems. Of one thing, however, we can be sure. President Truman will issue a hurry-up call for personnel to man the defense agencies, which are bound to expand rapidly. Naming Charles E. Wilson, president of General Electric, as mobilization coordinator, was a good start.

The other certainty is that taxes will go up sharply. Wall Street, which has been so gay about inflation, may begin to have some doubts. After all, earnings of corporations are going to undergo deflation.

'Newest Thing in Baby-Sitters'

Part-time Grannies Make a Hit in Chevy Chase

By Jack Lartz—The Washington Post

'TWAS THE NIGHT BEFORE CHRISTMAS—Dickie Larsen, 4½, and his sister Leigh, 2½, listen wide-eyed as Mrs. C. H. Peebles, their "baby-sitter" for the evening, reads aloud the tale of St. Nick's visit. Mrs. Peebles is one of the most enthusiastic baby-sitters at the Lisner Home for the Aged in Chevy Chase, and has a long list of "regular customers," whom she visits in the afternoon or evenings. The young Larsens, children of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Larsen, have been "minded" by Mrs. Peebles for nearly three years

By Pat Paterson Vosburgh

"HERE COMES Granny!" yelled the small boy excitedly.

The brisk, upright woman—one would not dare call her elderly—embraced him and looked up at his mother.

"Shall I get Johnny's supper tonight—or have you arranged it?" she asked.

"I've left it in the icebox, Mrs. Wigginton," explained the mother. "I'm so sorry I didn't have time to lay the table—"

Mrs. Wigginton smiled.

"I like to do it," she said. "I enjoy having home responsibilities again, and I enjoy having them in somebody else's house."

"GRANNY, WILL YOU go on about the little green frog with the gold buttons, will you, Granny?" the small boy was clamoring.

His mother laughed.

"The wonderful stories you tell him!" she said. "My husband and I have never even heard them—"

"Children's tales often skip a generation," said Mrs. Wigginton, laughing. "That's why little boys like Grannies—even borrowed ones—isn't it, Johnny?"

For Mrs. Wigginton isn't really Johnny's grandmother, but the latest thing in baby-sitters at Chevy Chase and Bethesda. She is among 15 elderly ladies (they refuse to be called old though their years range from 65 to 78) who live comfortably in the privately endowed, modern Lisner Home in Chevy Chase.

THEIR ENLIGHTENED young supervisor, Mrs. Coleridge Ertz, at the behest of the board of trustees had long been seeking means of bringing those in her charge in good health into an active role in the residential community where they live. But it was one of the old ladies—which one is long forgotten—who discovered some years ago that wartime parents needed reliable baby-sitters to give them a much-needed hour or so of leisure.

The project grew, and today the switchboard of the home keeps a careful charted list of appointments which must be booked three or four weeks in advance except to "regular clients."

Parents like having an "older head" in case of emergency, and also, as one of the ladies remarked, "There's no 'boy friend' problem with us." The children themselves eagerly look forward to "Granny's visit" and the grandmas themselves say "It's a blessing to be with young folks again—young parents as well as the children themselves."

"THE MONEY WE MAKE goes to pay our hospitalization, and to our churches and favorite charities, like Red Cross and Community Chest," says Mrs. E. J. Wigginton.

A part also goes to buy raw materials for the hobbies, some profitable, which many of the ladies have adopted, such as knitting, weaving and even jewelry making. A good proportion of the gallant little budgets go on Christmas and birthday presents for "my children."

"Earning money makes you feel useful and independent, and as long as you're that, you're not an old lady," declares Miss Florence Garber, sturdily. Miss Garber, 78, and "not really a grandmother of course," is the dean of the baby-sitting grandmothers, having been at it for eight years.

SWAPPING EXPERIENCES—Two grannies, an actual one and one by vocation, discuss their children in the after-dinner hour at the Lisner Home in Chevy Chase. Mrs. Maud Pierre Berner, (seated) who was until recently an active baby-sitter, and Mrs. Frances Wilson Vize, who has seven grandchildren, relax in the large living room of the home.

PRIZE-WINNERS—Mrs. Anna Schaub proudly displays two of the prize-winners in a recent contest held at the home to pick the best-dressed dolls among those outfitted by the ladies for the Salvation Army. Prizes were awarded the most original and beautifully dressed dolls, which will be Christmas gifts for local children. Charitable work is part of the ladies' many activities

Besides her "profession," Miss Garber manages to put in four hours a week running a sewing machine for the Red Cross, as well as visiting a patient in a local hospital weekly, and doing the patient's shopping for her.

MRS. CHARLES S. WILSON, 75, and every child's silver-haired ideal Granny, takes classes in jewelry making and as a hobby repairs the bracelets, brooches and necklaces of the 70-odd ladies in the home.

But it is their "professional standing"—or rather, sitting—which gives this little group a measure of independence in the home which is the main factor in keeping them from slumping into the despondency of "old age."

"If you're in good health, being old is a state of mind—not a 'social problem' as the magazines keep saying," according to one of the Grannies. "If you love children, just being with them keeps you young."

"YES, AND OPEN-MINDED," put in Granny Wilson, as she is known to everyone. "When I first went out on a job, about five years ago, the mother gave me a book on child psychology. I found it very helpful—I'm not too old to learn!"

There is no curfew at the home for baby-sitters, and, each has her own key, a much-coveted privilege. Mrs. Ertz makes it a rule, however, that parents call for and bring the sitters home by car or taxi. Some of them go out for several days at a time to look after the children and run the household while the parents go on short visits.

But all the "Grannies" are frankly reactionary about one thing. They disapprove of television! Most of them obviously prefer to sit upstairs telling the wonderful stories which only grandmas know.

The "Little frog with the gold buttons," "Bobbie Shafto and the little boy who wouldn't wash his ears" are as popular as if they had never skipped a generation.

A WISTFUL REMARK by one Granny who's been baby-sitting with one family for five or six years indicated how closely the children engage the affections of these "borrowed Grannies."

"My boy Stephen is going to junior high school now," she said. "He's growing out of me, I'm afraid. It makes me very sad!"

"Yes," piped up another. "But then, my dear, there are always new ones coming along!"

Mrs. Johnson Knows The Senator's Views On Being Prepared

By Elizabeth Carpenter

THE WIFE OF THE chairman of the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee has learned, after 16 years of marriage to Lyndon B. Johnson, to be personally prepared for emergencies.

So she stockpiles the cupboard with smoked turkeys and hams she may need for the numerous guests whom Senator Johnson unexpectedly brings home. As a result, there are no frantic last moments of running out to the grocery store when the Senator drives up with Stuart Symington, Speaker Sam Rayburn, Justice William O. Douglas or some important Texas constituent.

Had she been asked, Mrs. Lyndon Johnson could have tipped off a number of national agencies, sharply criticized recently by the Johnson committee, on how her husband feels about having plenty of everything for an emergency—be it rubber, steel, aluminum—or ham and turkey.

IT IS MORE the usual than the unusual when she gets a phone call at 5:30 p. m., "I'm bringing home four guests for dinner. Have something special."

Or, as often happens, a lovely dinner is all ready for a group of visiting Texas businessmen when her husband calls to say: "Come on down. We've decided to stay here and eat at the hotel instead."

Mrs. Johnson accepts these short notices philosophically. She can always feed any size crowd or, if the crowd decides to stay in town, she just brushes it off with, "Oh, well, we can eat it tomorrow night."

Making life easy for her ball-of-fire husband, now being rumored as the choice for Democratic whip, has been the daily job—almost the creed—of Mrs. Johnson since she first came to Washington in 1934.

A SLENDER AND PRETTY black-haired woman with bright brown eyes and a soft voice, Lady Bird (a nickname given her in childhood) Johnson loves Washington and never seems to tire of showing Texas visitors the famous sights. She's been to Mount Vernon more than 200 times—once in a snowstorm.

As far as actual campaigning is concerned, it goes against the grain of so gentle a lady as Mrs. Johnson. But when it starts, she's at it every hour of the day.

When her husband was making his breath-taking photo-finish campaign for the Senate, Mrs. Johnson drove to San Antonio to participate in the final speech over a Statewide network. The car in which she was driving turned over twice, bruising her considerably. She climbed out to the highway, hailed another car, deposited her woman companion in a hospital, changed her torn and soiled dress, and shook hands with 200 women at a reception in a small town stop.

Then she drove on to San Antonio that night and made her first Statewide broadcast which, incidentally, brought her a flood of fan letters. Not until after the election was over did she tell her weary husband of the accident. She did that with humor.

"All I could think of as we were turning over," she laughed, "was 'I sure wish I'd voted absentee'!"

Lady Bird Johnson attended the University of Texas where she received both bachelor of arts and bachelor of journalism degrees. Through a mutual friend she met young Lyndon Johnson, then a secretary of Representative Richard Kleberg in Washington.

It was a whirlwind romance. Two months after they were introduced, they married and came to Washington to live. Her husband has climbed the political ladder quickly and friends give much of the credit to Lady Bird Johnson for relieving the Senator of all extraneous worries at home.

She manages their lovely two-story home at 4921 30th pl. with calm and perfection. She keeps the books and manages the budget which carefully has already set aside enough money to send their two daughters, Lynda Bird, age 7, and Lucy Baines, age 2, through

The Service Set

Shepherd-Ord Troth Announced

Lieut. Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd, jr., USMC, and Mrs. Shepherd announce the engagement of their daughter, Virginia Cartwright, to Capt. James Baseri Ord, jr., USMC, son of Mrs. James B. Ord of Washington and the late Lieutenant Colonel Ord, USA.

The engagement was made known last night at a small dinner given by the bride-elect's parents in Honolulu, where General Shepherd is commanding general of the Fleet Marine Force Pacific. Before going to Hawaii, General and Mrs. Shepherd were at Quantico, Va., where he was commanding officer.

Miss Shepherd is a graduate of St. Anne's School, Charlottesville, Va., and attended the Abbott Art School in Washington. She was presented to society at the Norfolk German Club in 1948. She is the granddaughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. Lemuel C. Shepherd, and of Dr. Wilson E. Driver and the late Mrs. Driver of Norfolk, Va. Her brother are Lieut. S. C. Shepherd 3d, USMC, now stationed at Little Creek, Va., and Wilson E. D. Shepherd, Norfolk.

Captain Ord, great-grandson of the late Maj. Gen. E. O. C. Ord, USA, is the fifth generation of his family to serve in the armed forces. He was educated at the English Preparatory School, Glion, Switzerland, and was graduated from the American School, Manila, P. I., and attended the University of Virginia, where he was a member of Phi Gamma Delta and Omicron Delta Kappa. During World War II he served with the Fifth Marine Division on Iwo Jima, and is currently on the staff of headquarters, Fleet Marine Force Pacific.

Capt. Kriner's Son Weds Miss McGriff

BETHLEHEM CHAPEL of Washington Cathedral was the scene of the marriage yesterday of Miss LaDonna Lee McGriff, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. Rollins McGriff of Arlington, and George Marion Kriner, son of Capt. George C. Kriner, USN, and Mrs. Kriner of Washington. The Rev. Alfred St. John Matthews officiated at the 4 o'clock ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a pearl-tone satin gown with fingertip veil and necklace of heirloom pearls, a gift of the bridegroom. She carried calla lillies.

Miss Patricia McGriff of Arlington was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Genevieve Sonnier, Miss Mary Jane Cricher and Mrs. Roy A. Scott, all of Washington, and Mrs. Laverne Britton of Baltimore. Miss Lyn McGriff of Arlington was flower girl.

Lloyd Kriner was best man and the ushers were Thomas Hopper, jr., Edwin Henry, jr., Frank Jones and James Burke, all of Washington, and Lester Barker of Kensington and Spotswood Quinby of Chevy Chase. Jack Lucas of Vienna, Va., was ring bearer.

A reception at the Washington Club followed the ceremony.

The bride attended Penn Hall Preparatory School, Florida Southern College at Lakeland and George Washington University, where she was a member of Delta Zeta sorority. The bridegroom attended Landon School and is a graduate of George Washington University, where he was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon. He served with the United States Marine Corps in the South Pacific during World War II.

The couple will live in Washington after a wedding trip by plane to Bermuda.

Col. Matthews to Marry .. Miss Elizabeth New

Mr. and Mrs. William Joseph New of Alexandria announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Priestley New, to Lieut. Col. Jack Beverly Matthews, USA, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas Matthews of Ozark, Ala.

Miss New attended St. Agnes' School in Alexandria and Sweet Briar College.

Colonel Matthews graduated from University of Georgia where he was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity. He received his master's degree from Princeton University and is now serving with the General Staff, United States Army, in Washington.

Col. Apgar's Daughter Bride of Robert Reardon

Miss Mary Patricia Apgar, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Theodore Besson Apgar of Front Royal, Va., was married yesterday to Robert Eugene Reardon, son of Mrs. Michael F. Reardon and the late Mr. Reardon of Washington. The ceremony took place in the Calvary Episcopal Church in Front Royal.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Colonel Apgar, one-time commanding officer of the former Front Royal Remount Depot. Miss Ann Hill of Washington was maid of honor,

QUIET HOUR—Two of the Lisner Home's members, Miss Elizabeth Hatfield (left), and Miss L. H. Francisco, have an after-dinner chat with the home's director, Mrs. Coleridge Ertz (at right). Ever since the home opened in 1940, the board of directors have been encouraging the members to take part in community life, and baby-sitting is part of this project

CROWDED CALENDAR—Requests for baby-sitters during the holiday season have been pouring into the Lisner Home since early this month. Mrs. Charles S. Wilson shows her calendar for December, which is fast filling up with appointments at neighborhood homes. As for New Year's Eve: "Why, we've been booked up since November!" proudly state the ladies

The Yule Log

Adorn Christmas Gifts With Seasonal Tie-ons

By Dorothea Cruger

"Put it in a box, tie it with a ribbon, and . . . throw it under the Christmas tree," to paraphrase a recent popular song. But before tossing your gift under the Yule tree, there are many extra touches you can add to it to make an especially festive-looking package.

Gifts wrappings become more and more elaborate every year, with tie-ons being the most recent addition to the traditional paper-and-ribbon match. Tie on a plastic reindeer (Rudolph, of course), a couple of sleigh bells, a sprig of holly, a cluster of snowflakes or a Christmas candle. They're all sold at wrapping counters along with glittering plastic and satin ribbons and unusually attractive paper.

Additions this year are papers printed with some 50 different girls' names, and including "Mother," and "Dad." Bearing the tradename, "Name Wrap," the papers unfortunately ignore masculine names.

Another special for Christmas are the holiday packages sold by Norcross, which contain paper, seals, tags and cards, all in matching pattern, bearing such names as "American Scene," a rustic view, and "Christmas Preview," combining green holly and blue bells on a red background.

HERE IS AN IDEA for Christmas wrapping. You can really personalize your gifts by creating one-color combination and style and using it each year. One giver chose a motif of blue paper and silver ribbon, with sprinkling of silver stars. Every year her friends look for the familiar wrappings.

From the book "The Art of Wrapping Gifts," by Drucella Lowrie, comes the thought of using less common material for wrappings. For the businessman, the stockmarket page of the newspaper, tied with red grosgrain ribbon. (Well, red tape, anyway.) For someone in the lumber business, wood-grained paper, for architects, graph paper, tied with plastic ribbon. Another idea for wrappings would be brightly colored comic papers for the youngsters.

Alexandria YWCA Celebrates Christmas

Members of the Alexandria YWCA held a Christmas program recently at the clubhouse on No. St. Asaph st. The Y-Teens, Business Girls and Adult Groups presented the program, which included lighting of the Christmas candles, the story of Christmas in other countries, and holiday music furnished by a string ensemble under the direction of Miss Grace Powell.

A New Twosome Suit With Matching Stole

Because we American women wear suits 12 months out of the year, there are always smart new suits to be found. Still, if you are buying a suit as late in the season as this, you want to be sure that it will still be smart in spring.

Such a fashion is the new stole suit—a suit with its own stole of matching or companion fabric. It came to us from the Paris openings in August, and we took it immediately here. And I can assure you that it will be one of the most important suits for next spring too.

The stoles are completely separate—do not change or interfere with the design of the suit in any way.

Feet First Into Christmas!

By Evelyn Hayes

STAY-AT-HOME evenings in this televised age are more and more spent before the TV set, often entertaining friends. One result has been to bring the so-called boudoir slipper out of the bedroom and into the living room or library—to be worn as a smart accent to "at home" ashions.

The girl who would at one time have sniffed t the idea of slippers for Christmas will this ear welcome such a gift—especially those designed as double-duty bedside and fireside fashions.

There are plenty of pretty slippers in the shops for both purposes—some irrevocably assigned to boudoir-bath shuffling, others designed solely to flatter as they are posed by the fireside.

Perhaps one of the prettiest compromises we know—and a gift that's surefire—is the elasticized gold or silver slipper that flatters the foot and feels like no slipper at all at Garfinckel's. Herewith are other highlights for the woman who likes to put her best foot forward at all times.

college. And she even lays out her husband's suits each morning and has his fountain pens filled with ink and in the right pockets.

MRS. JOHNSON takes her job as a mother seriously. Carefully she is on guard to see that the two girls become neither spoiled nor overshadowed by the limelight. They are generally present in the early hours of parties at the Johnsons and are introduced to the guests and given small assignments as hostesses.

The Johnsons have a wide circle of friends here in both high and humble places. Gatherings at their home include both the well-known and the unknown.

As one Government clerk put it after an evening at a Johnson party, "Lady Bird makes me feel as important as Chief Justice Vinson when she introduces me to him."

White House Study Group States Aims

"TO PROMOTE more general understanding of the art, literature and culture of Latin America," is the purpose of a new organization called the White House Spanish-Portuguese Study Group. Members include wives of Congressmen, and top-ranking Government officials.

First meeting was held last Thursday at the Hall of the Americas, Pan American Union Building, with Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, founder of the society, as chairman.

The club is an outgrowth of the White House Spanish classes organized several years ago. Mrs. Truman was one of the first "students."

MRS. GERARD L. GAUDREAU
. . . weds in nuptial mass

Miss Pugh Is Bride of G. L. Gaudreau

MISS MARY PATRICIA PUGH, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael O'Connor Pugh of Washington, became the bride yesterday of Gerard Lucien Gaudreau, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lucien E. D. Gaudreau of Baltimore. The ceremony took place in the Shrine of the Most Blessed Sacrament, the Right Rev. Thomas G. Smyth and the Rev. William Gaudreau, uncle of the bridegroom, officiating. Visiting priests who assisted at the nuptial mass were the Rev. Alfred G. Stritch, the Rev. Joseph McCort, the Rev. Lawrence Getti and the Rev. E. Carl Lyon.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore Chantilly lace over white satin, fashioned with a fitted bodice, hoop skirt and a long train. A fingertip veil fell from her Chantilly lace cap. She carried a white prayer book with white orchids and lilies of the valley entwined in the ribbon streamers and an heirloom lace handkerchief used by her paternal grandmother, Mrs. Edward Lawrence Pugh.

Miss Harriet Friemel of College Park was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Mrs. C. A. Wilson of Orange, N. J.; Mrs. William Rogers Wilson, 3d, of Ingleside, Md.; Miss Anne B. Gadd of Centerville, Md.; Miss Phyllis Strock of Arlington, and Miss Honora Whelan of Baltimore.

Thomas Gaudreau of Baltimore was best man for his brother and the ushers included three other brothers of the bridegroom, Paul Gaudreau, William Gaudreau and David Gaudreau, all of Baltimore, and Charles Edward Pugh of Chevy Chase, and Carol Feldman of Baltimore.

Brunch at the Columbia Country Club followed the ceremony. Sidney's stringed orchestra provided music for dancing.

The bride attended the University of Maryland where she was a member of Kappa Delta Sorority. The bridegroom attended Loyola College in Baltimore.

The couple will live in Baltimore following a wedding trip to Naples, Fla.

Miss Kennedy Becomes Bride

Miss Elizabeth Lochart Kennedy, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Carroll P. Kennedy of Fredericksburg, Va., became the bride yesterday evening of Samuel E. Saunders, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Saunders of Arrington, Va. The ceremony took place at 8:30 at the Fredericksburg Baptist Church, Dr. Robert F. Cavalee officiating. Immediately following the ceremony, there was a reception at "Hill Crest," the home of the bride's parents.

The bride's gown of magnolia satin was fashioned with a sheer yoke, outlined by a bertha of chantilly lace studded with pearls. Her full length veil of imported illusion was held in place by a cap of matching lace, and she carried white orchids and valley lilies.

The bride is a graduate of Mount Vernon Junior College. The bridegroom is a graduate of V. M. I. and is now a student at Medical College of Virginia School of Dentistry.

Nancy McGee Baxter Is Bride in Cleveland

Miss Nancy McGhee Baxter became the bride of Walter Thorwald Skallerup, jr., of Washington, yesterday in Cleveland, Ohio. The bride is the daughter of the late Charles McGhee Baxter and the late Marcella Andrews Baxter of Cleveland. Mr. Skallerup is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Skallerup of Philadelphia.

Conducting the Episcopal service was the Very Rev. Chester Burge Emerson, dean of Trinity Cathedral in Cleveland, and the Rev. Dr. Leslie Glenn, rector of St. John's in Washington. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Charles McGhee Baxter.

Miss Harriet House was Miss Baxter's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Matthew Andrews Baxter and Mrs. Charles McGhee Baxter, both of Cleveland, and Miss Barbara Skallerup of Philadelphia, sister of the bridegroom. Junior bridesmaids were Miss Diane Baxter, niece of the bride, and Miss Judy Young of Washington. Gordon Baxter and Andy Baxter acted as pages.

Henry Leader of York, Pa., was best man, and ushers were Matthew Andrews Baxter, brother of the bride, Jack Heires and Phillip Brown, both of Washington, and James Scheuer of New York.

The bride graduated from the Madeira School and Smith College and has been working for the past year for the government in Washington. Her husband is a graduate of Swarthmore and the Yale Law School and is with the office of the General Counsel of the Atomic Energy Commission in Washington.

Joyce Runge, Harold Newman Wed in Georgetown Church

In a candlelight ceremony last night at Georgetown Lutheran Church, Miss Joyce Runge became the bride of Harold Edward Newman. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Flemming Runge of Washington. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Thomas Ashby Long, also of Washington.

The Rev. Harold E. Beatty officiated at the ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the Broadmoor. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of heirloom satin, trimmed with imported French bridal lace. Her veil of imported French illusion was caught to a tiara of rosepoint lace.

Miss Marilyn Sheppard of Washington was the maid of honor and serving as matron of honor was the groom's sister, Mrs. P. Bruce Bass, jr., of Charlottesville, Va. The bridesmaids, all of this city, were Miss Katherine Kuehl, Miss Patricia Pyatt, and Miss Patricia Beall.

Commander Strong Boozer, USN, of Norfolk, Va., was the best man, and the ushers were Bruce Bass of Charlottesville, Neal Bass, Charles Izac and Lloyd Burroughs, of Washington.

After a Southern wedding trip, the newlyweds will make their home in Washington.

The bride is a graduate of the University of Maryland, where she was a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority. The bridegroom also attended the University of Maryland, where he was a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Ask Anne

All Sorts of Woes Beset A Wife, and, of Course, Men Cause Most of the Trouble

"NEEDLES AND PINS, needles and pins, when a girl marries——" Well, you know the rest of it and it certainly must be true if these letters are any indication.

DEAR ANNE:

I have been happily married for some years and hope to remain so, but regularly every winter a little domestic trouble threatens.

My husband's usually sunny disposition seems to change with the approach of winter and he becomes crabby and disagreeable as a bear. He is susceptible to cold and as a protection, always changes his underwear to garments with a 20 percent wool mixture and there lies the rub—too much skin irritation. If you can suggest a way to treat the garments so as to remove the ticklish effect of the wool mixture, I am sure my problem in domestic relations would be solved.

P. M., Washington

I know of no treatment that will make the garments less irritating, granted that you are now washing them properly so that they come out soft and fleecy. Evidently your husband is allergic to wool. I'd suggest he switch to cotton or nylon knitwear. If this doesn't help, maybe you'd better write Mary Haworth.

DEAR ANNE:

I have a problem concerning the vacuum my husband carries with his lunch. The evaporated milk curdles when I pour hot coffee in and nothing I've done helps, I've tried pouring the coffee in and then adding milk and sugar, vice versa, and half and half. Now I am desperate. Won't you please help me?

Mrs. A. H., Greenbelt, Md.

Keeping such bottles absolutely clean is quite a problem. Milk will gradually form a cake or film in them which is hard to remove. Do you have a long, narrow brush for cleaning the bottle? If not, I'd suggest getting one. A good washing with a strong solution of washing soda should help. If there seems to be a film or cake on the bottom of the bottle, you might put in some raw rice or sand with a little water and slosh it around to scrape off the deposit.

Lieut. Doris Anne Defenderfer Bride in D. C. Naval Chapel

LIEUT. DORIS Anne Defenderfer, USN, became the bride of Lieut. Comdr. Eugene William Krebsbach, USN, yesterday afternoon in the Chapel of the Naval Communications Station in Washington, Chaplain John L. Ecker officiating. A reception at the bride's home followed the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur William Defenderfer of Chevy Chase, Md., and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Thomas Krebsbach of Reeder, N. Dak.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white satin fashioned along princess lines. Miss Louise Dudley Vance attended the bride as maid of honor.

LIEUT. COMDR. Peter Kooy served the bridegroom as best man.

The bride attended Holton Arms, George Washington University and Bradford Junior College. She is stationed in Washington in the Department of Defense.

Harris & Ewing

MRS. GERALD SHERMAN COLLINS is the former Mrs. Jane H. Gordon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Brock Chilton Hampton of Washington. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Collins of Kenmore, N. Y. The ceremony took place yesterday at St. Peter's Church, the Rev. Clatus E. Snyder of Buffalo officiating. The bride attended George Washington University and is a graduate of Stanford University in California. The bridegroom attended Georgetown University and was an Air Corps officer in World War II. The bride is the widow of Staff Sergt. Robert R. Gordon, who lost his life in Italy in World War II.

MRS. DANIEL HENRY WARD, JR. is the former Miss Joyce Alexia Walmsley, daughter of Mrs. Janet E. Walmsley of Sydney, Australia. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ward of Richmond. The double-ring ceremony took place yesterday in the Chapel of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Franklin B. Gillespie officiating. The bride is a graduate of Brighton College and the Metropolitan Secretarial College of Sydney, and for the past two years has been in Washington. Mr. Ward is a graduate of Virginia Polytechnic Institute. He is now associated with the Department of Agriculture. The couple will make their home in Binghamton, N. Y.

Diplomats to Hear Israeli Orchestra

Many members of Washington official and diplomatic society have accepted invitations to the performance of the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra, which will be held January 7 in Constitution Hall. The orchestra, which will be making its first appearance in the United States on that date, will be conducted by Serge Koussevitzky, music director emeritus of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Among those who will attend the performance are Mme Pandit, Ambassador of India; the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, Supreme Court Justice and Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, the Ambassador of Australia and Mrs. Norman Makin, the French Ambassador and Mme. Henri Bonnet, the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Willard Thorp, the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Edward Barrett, the Chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and Mrs. John Kee.

Food Tips . . .

When you serve a canned vegetable in a cream sauce be sure to use the vegetable liquid from the can for part of the milk in the sauce.

Want a new way of sweetening breakfast cereals? Stir a tablespoon of old-fashioned dark molasses into a cup of milk or light cream and serve with the cereal.

When a recipe calls for toasted blanched almonds, the nuts should have their skins removed first, then be browned lightly in the oven.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Widowed Mother of Married Son and Daughter Asks If She Expects Too Much in Wanting Regular Calls From Them When She Is Ill; She's Self-Supporting

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: It seems to me that in any dispute between the older and the younger generation, you are always on the side of youth. Nevertheless, may I have your opinion on my case?

I have a son (Jerry), 27, married, who has a wonderful child, a little girl. My daughter, (Alice), 22, is married and has no children as yet. My husband died 16 years ago and I have worked much of the time since then, in order to preserve my children's inheritance and give them a good education. Both have college degrees.

I am still working to support myself, have never received any financial aid from either of my children, and have never made any demands on them. Now is it asking too much to expect regular visits from them and little extra attentions when I am ill? My daughter says she does more for me than her brother. She lives closer to me than he does. However, she also says I am always defending him unnecessarily.

My son doesn't visit me unless I am quite ill and, although I love his child, I only see her when I go there. Both my children have automobiles; I do not. My daughter is essentially good but she was always jealous of my affection for her brother. She seems to feel that he doesn't deserve it. I love them both and would like to see them closer to each other—and to me. What can I do? I shall be looking for your reply. H. K.

DEAR H. K.: Your attitude is a paradox. But you don't see that. You indicate that you've never asked anything of your children—never made any demands on them, never received or required any financial help from them. You've worked to preserve their inheritance, to be self-supporting, to put them through college, etc. In short, you've been the personification of self-reliance—even indeed of self-sufficiency, which is more rigorous yet—in running your life and shaping up theirs, until they got married, at least.

Now, more recently, when you feel that your health might be breaking—a possibility that frightens you with its threat of helpless need—you suddenly desperately want reassurance that your children are solicitously aware of you, and would be Johnny-on-the-spot with loving care, vying with each other to serve you in any crisis. Consequently you are disturbed and indignant to discover their attitude remains casual, perfunctory or lackadaisical; and in your anxiety you forget that your past performance and their past filial conditioning was keyed to the theory that "Mother is sufficient unto herself; don't worry about her."

Certainly your children owe you regular visits if you are ill abed for any length of time, the more especially if you live alone, without other near kin to look in on you. Also they should need no prompting to boost your morale with special watchful attentions and your little extra cherishing courtesies during bouts of illness. But if you find them negligent, just bear in mind their lack of drilling in filial thoughtfulness, and start now to educate rather than blame them.

In saying that Alice accuses you of always defending Jerry unnecessarily, I think you mean to say "unwarrantly." That is, you whitewash his faults, from her viewpoint; never give her an even break as compared to him; seem to expect more from her and take it for granted, while glossing over, and making excuses for what he fails to do. I suppose it's this show of partisanship, which you probably cannot in truth deny, that makes her jealous of your affection for him.

I think you make a mistake in trying to defend yourself against her criticism, which probably is justified. Doubtless she is more actively helpful than Jerry, so why don't you give her credit for it, instead of arguing, vaguely, that she lives closer than he. If you would be honest in seeing her point, and generous in underscoring her greater contribution to your comfort, it would be a master stroke of diplomacy. The person properly thanked for kind offices is well disposed to do favors again, whereas lack of spoken appreciation tends to diminish his will-to-do.

To draw the children closer to each other and to you, start by being perceptively grateful for every kind deed Alice does for you. This thankful attitude will cause her to feel more tender towards you, and there you will have the makings of a new mutual gentleness—which may become the nucleus of a more devotional unified spirit in the whole family circle. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Grace Learns Camouflage Makeup Tips

By Ann Lawrence

THE BASIS of canny camouflage in makeup as in other things is this: tone down any exaggeration of features, make an area less important with dark shades; make something small look big, or something thin, broader with light shades.

In Grace's case these tricks had to be done cleverly and extra subtly, for Grace is 52 and totally unused to cosmetics. Too generous an application, too much remodeling and reshaping, would not only make her look grotesque but would also make her feel ill at ease.

A LIQUID foundation with an oil base (for smoother application) was selected in a medium tone with a rosy tint. This rosy tint would be repeated in her powder as well, for Grace's skin is a little sallow. The medium shade foundation was put on her entire face—right up to the hair line, right down to the base of her neck.

Her long, narrow face and nose, the deep criss-crossed circles under her eyes were handled with the same foundation but in a darker tone. It made the circles less noticeable and when applied at the sides of her nose had the effect of shortening it, lifting the skin, and widening the cheek area. Next, a tiny bit of medium red rouge was put on, worked in carefully from her cheekbones out but not into her hairline or below the tip of her nose.

AS WE SAID, Grace's powder also had a rosy tint. It is Mauresque and its pleasant color has a tendency to make skin look transparent.

Grace had always been stingy with her lipstick and worse, used a light orange shade that faded out. Now she was given a bluish red shade, vibrant enough to bring out her thin lips. There was no business of trying to make her mouth larger, or curvier. The natural line was maintained, but now that her lips carried a better color, and more of it, put on completely and carefully, her mouth seemed bigger.

International Who's Who Contribute to New British Cook Book

By Marie McNair

REMEMBER COMDR. Kenneth Downey, RN? Big, blustery and red faced, with 57 varieties of charm, he was one of England's best-known ambassadors of good-will in the last war.

Here with the British Embassy, he made friends by the hundreds, liked nothing better than to entertain them at supper parties with the host as cook.

Commander Downey's interest in food hasn't lessened since he left. As organizing secretary of The Returned British Prisoners of War Association in London, he has edited a cook book "As We Like It," with recipes by world famous figures, the proceeds of the sale to go to the organization.

THE COUNTESS of Mountbatten of Burma, president of the association, has written a foreword, and the list of contributors contains such names as Mrs. Truman, Eleanor Roosevelt, George Bernard Shaw, Mrs. Winston Churchill, Clare Boothe Luce, Viscountees Alexander of Tunis, Sir Laurence Oliver, the Countess of Halifax, wife of the former British Ambassador to the United States; Mrs. Ruth Bryan Rohde, one-time American Minister to Denmark, and Betty Fulbright, wife of the Arkansas Senator.

The book, already obtainable in England, will, it is hoped, be available in this country before long.

Kenneth Downey has taken all the recipes, most of them hand-written and signed, bound them in leather, with the possibly that some day the collection might be an auctioneer's item in America.

FUNDS OF THE Returned British Prisoners of War Association, are at low ebb, Commander Downey writes. There are 60,000 former POWs, including civilian internees, who need help. Last year the association sent nearly 10,000 food parcels to ill members; gave more than 300 large bundles of clothing and found employment for 87 men. They also gave away in grants nearly 1000 pounds and helped many of the men to obtain or better their pensions.

DEBUTANTES DATES:

VIRGINIA WETHERILL, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Price Wetherill, whose coming out party will be a young people's dance at the Sulgrave Club on December 26, is having any number of other fetes planned in her honor during the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Eberhart Haynes will give a dinner party for the deb on December 23 before the debut dance of Mary Florence Kern, the William C. Kern's daughter, at the Sulgrave Club.

Before her own dance on the twenty-sixth, Virginia will be honor guest at Mr. and Mrs. William B. Willard's dinner at the Metropolitan Club. The next night, Mr. and Mrs. Warren L. Stephenson will entertain at dinner at the Sulgrave Club for Miss Wetherill, the group going later to the dance for Miss Eleanor Tydings at the Chevy Chase Club to be given by her parents, Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davies.

THEN ON December 28, Dr. and Mrs. William F. Burdick will give a dinner for Miss Wetherill and Sallie Zantzinger, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Chew Zantzinger. The following evening before Sallie Zantzinger's ball at the Chevy Chase Club, the Albert Walkers, uncle and aunt of Virginia, will give a dinner in her honor.

Sally Robinson, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Clinton Robinson, who'll make her bow to society on December 27, will be among the Washington girls to be presented at the 1950 Debutante Cotillion and Christmas ball Monday evening at the Waldorf in New York.

Household Hints

Soap and hot water will remove chocolate and cocoa stains from washable material.

If you don't want starch to stick to your iron when pressing clothes, dampen starched clothes carefully so they are not too wet.

Use the carcass of chicken and turkey to make an economical and delicious soup. Add tomatoes, onion, carrots, parsley, and celery leaves to the water you cover the chicken or turkey bones with and season with salt, peppercorns, whole cloves, and a bit of bay leaf.

MISS SANDRA ALDRICH SWEET will marry Dr. John Aure Buesseler of Madison, Wis. Her engagement is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd E. Sweet of Binghamton, N. Y., and La Solana, Daytona Beach, Fla. Dr. Buesseler is the son of the late John Xavier Buesseler and Mrs. Buesseler of Madison, Wis. Miss Sweet is a granddaughter of George F. Johnson, who was cofounder, president and chairman of the board of the Endicott Johnson Shoe Corp. at Endicott, N. Y., and the late Mrs. Johnson. She graduated from the National Cathedral School for Girls here in Washington and from Garland Junior College in Boston, Mass. The wedding is to take place at Daytona Beach, Fla. in mid-February

The Motor Tour

Christmas in the Tar Heel State

By Walter W. Hubbard
American Automobile Association

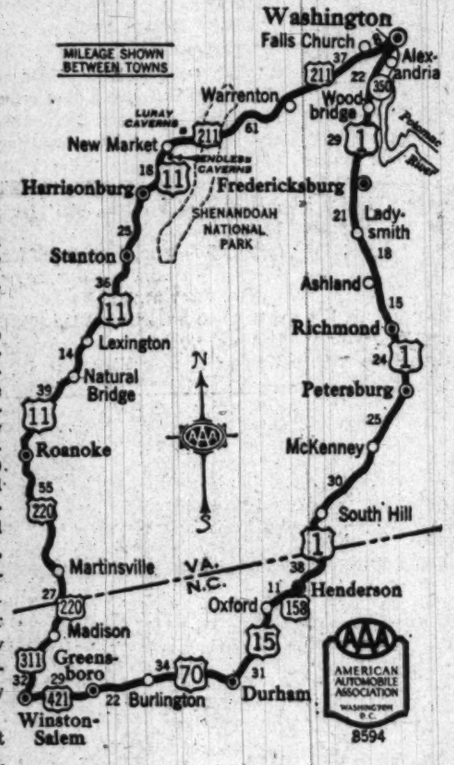
VISITORS TO DURHAM, in the Old North State—sometimes known as the Tar Heel State—may have an opportunity to hear the Christmas chimes ring out from one of the finest carillons to be heard in the Nation—the bells in the great tower of the chapel of Duke University.

This tower, 210 feet high, houses 50 bells, the largest of which weighs almost six tons and the smallest but 10 pounds. The bells may be heard during the holiday season, just as the Glee Club of Duke, formerly Trinity, University, in appropriate Christmas numbers.

Seventy-five miles to the west, other Yuletide festivities, which have attained national prominence, will be in progress. Like Durham, Winston-Salem is also a great educational center, three colleges being located there, all of which will contribute to the observance of Christmas and New Year's. The "Winston" part of Winston-Salem celebrates its centennial, having been founded in 1850, about one mile from Salem, which is the Anglicized name from the Hebrew "Shalom," meaning peace.

A minimum of 691 miles of over-the-road travel are involved in this trip to the Tar Heel State, as outlined by the American Automobile Association's map shown here; count on at least 700. That means a very early start, immediately after work on a Friday for example, and being away Friday and Saturday evenings, with possible return late Sunday night or very early Monday morning if you plan to try it in a week-end.

Planned stops could be made the first night out at New Market, Harrisonburg or Staunton, depending upon how early a start you get. These three cities all lie astride U. S. highway 11.



OUR START should be made by an eight-mile drive to Falls Church, Va., over U. S. 211, and 37 more miles to Warrenton in the thoroughbred horse-raising and fox hunting secton of the Old Dominion State. Here you will see stately, well preserved mansions appropriately decorated for the holidays, their owners preparing for an almost ritualistic observance of the Yule season.

Sixty one more miles southwest and we are in New Market, and on our way, having passed both the Luray and the Endless Caverns; 18 more miles south and we are in the county seat of Rockingham County, Harrisonburg, one of the greatest poultry and turkey processing and raising areas east of the Mississippi River. From here come tens of thousands of the fine birds, chickens or turkeys, which grace the homes and tables of residents of the Greater Washington area at Christmas time.

Drive another 25 miles south to Staunton where President Woodroe Wilson was born. Don't expect to hear of a great Christmas feast at the two military schools located here, for most of the boys will spend their holidays at home. And the same applies to the Virginia Military Institute and Washington and Lee University, located 36 miles southwest of Staunton, at Lexington, Va. If you haven't seen the crypt which houses the mortal remains of Robert E. Lee, stop off long enough to see the chapel where, in the hectic reconstruction days following the Civil War, the great Confederate leader presided as the president of W. and L. University.

NATURAL BRIDGE is another 14 miles further south, with Roanoke another 39 miles away. The old English architecture of the Hotel Roanoke lends itself ideally to the dinners, dances, receptions and entertainments which will be held there, by various organizations, during the Christmas holidays. Roanoke's shops are worth visiting, the department stores being creditably large and affording the greatest variety of gifts possible in any metropolitan area.

Fifty-five more miles, over U. S. 220 and we are in Martinsville, last important stop in Virginia before crossing into North Carolina and heading for Madison. Thirty-two miles southwest of Madison lies the city now known as Winston-Salem, the original settlement having been made in January, 1753, by a group of Moravian Christians from Pennsylvania. Most of these were from Bethlehem which had been established 12 years, previously by followers of Count van Zinzendorf, once a Bishop of the Moravian Church and an exile from Saxony because of his beliefs in religious freedom. The name Bethlehem having already been used in Pennsylvania, they choose Bethabara and Bethania as names for two of their settlements, later to be called "Wachovia," after the Austro-Hungarian estates belonging to Count von Zinendorf. In 1913 communities all became one under the name Winston-Salem, a metropolitan city of well over 85,000.

The Love Feast and Candle Service, at Christmas time, and the Watch Night services on New Year's Eve, attract visitors from many of the Eastern States. During the holidays, music is to be heard by the church's 400-piece band.

In addition to the Moravian Churches, graveyard and early Colonial houses, the city is one of the big bright leaf tobacco centers of North America, about 80 million pounds being cleared through its auction stalls annually.

LEAVING WINSTON-SALEM, we drive eastward over U. S. 421 and 70, through Greensboro and Burlington, to Durham. At Bennett Place Memorial, six miles northwest of this city of nearly 80,000, is the old house where, on April 26, 1865, General Joseph E. Johnson surrendered all of the Confederate armies remaining in the field, to Gen. William T. Sherman, bringing to a close the War Between the States.

Our return from North Carolina is made over U. S. 15, 158 and 1, through Oxford, Henderson and on to South Hill, N. C., from which point we continue northeast, according to our AAA map, to McKenney and Petersburg. Twenty-four more miles will bring us into Richmond, erstwhile capital of the Confederacy and a spot where, today, Christmas also receives the respect it deserves, by way of celebration and observance. A good bet is to make an overnight stop in this capital of Virginia, for it boasts of many fine hotels and motor courts.

On the morrow, go sightseeing, or head north over U. S. 1 to Ashland, Ladysmith, Woodbridge and Alexandria—and back to the District of Columbia. Take it easy, driving or walking, and you'll have a safe as well as a Merry Christmas.

Whistle-Stopping

Take the Napkin, Give Me the Greasy Spoon

By Orval Hopkins

ONE OF THE biggest problems we encountered on traveling up here to our shiny new building was finding suitable places to eat. The management (which also thoughtfully padded the walls of the elevator) issued a list of eateries and spotted their locations on a map. All were estimable, high-class joi . . . er . . . places; The Statler, the Carlton, the Mayflower, Harvey's, the Colony, Lee House, Dee Cee Diner (24-hour service). Great places to eat in. Famous, some of 'em.

But there was a Greasy Spoon near our old location on E st. where some used to eat. You walk in the joint, they greet you with insults. To get the waitress's eye you had to virtually dig it out of her head. The fry cook barks at you. So does the cash register man. The sort of place you wouldn't think of taking your wife. Unassuming and unspotless.

Up in our new neighborhood we got sparkley cutlery and snow-white napery (there's only one or two of us who know Snow White's last name). The service is strictly down-the-nose.

Well, I wandered one evening, disconsolate, into a dive I hadn't noticed before. It was called the Crumb. I climbed up on a bar stool and reached for a menu. A large tough waitress pushed my arm aside and began diligently swabbing the counter. A little warm feeling warmed me. I gave the man my order. He snapped at me, "We're outa that, Jack. Whadaya think this is, lunch?" This was more like it. Another waitress at that point busily began to sweep the floor behind me. Clouds of dust settled on me, on the counter, and in my water glass. At the rear of the joint the jukebox was rattling the windows and a semi-drunk was yelling into a pay phone, "I already paid a whole buck. And I didn't talk to nobody."

I settled down and happily shoved my nose into the coffee cup—a cracked cup.

THE PALM BEACH Biltmore opened for the season Friday under the watchful eye of Daniel E. Taylor, James J. Farrell and Sally Sloane. Taylor, a director of the Waldorf-Astoria, last year reportedly put a million dollars into the hotel in a proud effort to transform it into "the showplace of Florida."

THE TRAVEL Division of the Pan American Union here has just brought out a revised edition of its 52-page booket, "Motoring to Mexico." It costs 25 cents and may be had by writing the PAU travel division, Washington 6.

THE GLITTERY Caribe-Hilton Hotel in San Juan, Puerto Rico, celebrated its first anniversary the other day. Benefit dinner cost $20 per plate, proceeds to the P. R. infantile paralysis fund.

THE AUDUBON Society is conducting wildlife tours into Everglades National Park, starting from Miami every Sunday, Wednesday and Friday. Charles Brookfield is the man to see, at 13 McAllister Arcade, Miami . . . E. C. Fitt has been appointed manager of the Algonquin Hotel at St. Andrew-by-the-Sea, New Brunswick, Canada . . . Average rate for room and bath with meals in Switzerland is about $7 per day . . . Sarasota, Fla., hopes to have a population of 40,000 by 1960. It now stands at about 19,000.

SPEED RECORDS between Chicago and Washington, and Detroit and Washington, are claimed by Capital Airlines, which says one of its planes flew here from Detroit in an hour and 21 minutes, and that another sped here from Chicago in an hour and 50 minutes. George McKee of 1104 West Braddock rd., Alexandria, piloted the Detroit ship, and Edward Couples of 14 Tansey dr., Falls Church, the Chicago plane.

Nova Scotia and Sea

Visitors to Nova Scotia are intrigued by the influence of the sea. No matter where they go the sea is never more than an hour's drive away. They breathe sea air mingled with the balsam scents of pine and spruce. They never tire of roaring breakers sweeping up on silver sand beaches, or smashing against rocky headlands.

Man Finally Gets Tough Old Bear

CANTON, N. C.—"Old Toughy," a 400-pound bear whose elusiveness had made him a legend in this North Carolina mountain section, has had his last fight. After years of outwitting dogs and hunters in scores of chases, "Old Toughy" fell to a party headed by Uncle Joe A. Hargrove, 70-year-old bear-hunting dean. Tighe Smathers of Canton fired the finishing shot at the end of a four-hour chase.

"Old Toughy," known by his immense track and a missing left toe, had ruled for many years in the Sorrell's Creek section of the Sherwood Forest Wildlife Area. He won respect not only for his wits but also for his tenacity. Not once did a chase force him to pack up and leave his home grounds.

Airlines Adopting Winter Tour Rates

To offset trans-Atlantic fare increases, airlines have agreed to adopt a popular winter excursion rate and continue the lower off-season rates which were tried out last winter. Trans World Airlines has started regular service to London and Frankfurt-on-Main with a Constellation flight from LaGuardia Field.

Pan American World Airways has inaugurated a de luxe extra-fare sleeper service between New York and Buenos Aires which will cut the scheduled flying time by almost 30 percent. Colonial airlines has announced the inauguration of the Family Fare Plan, between its terminals of New York, Montreal and Ottawa, Canada.

Banff Lift Thrills Tourists

High above the village of Banff, in Alberta, Canada, the new Banff chair lift crawls up the eastern slopes of Mount Norquay, a Rocky Mountain peak. It lifts sightseers to an altitude of 6850 feet on the world's most scenic ride.

The new tourist attraction lifts 60 chairs in eight minutes to the upper terminal, a ridge overlooking the Bow and Spray Valleys and a vast panorama of mountain ranges.

Capable of handling 250 passengers per hour, the Banff chair lift is supported by 13 giant steel towers, brilliantly floodlit after dark for evening operation. The lift is equipped with all modern safety devices, and courteous attendants are on hand at all times for loading and unloading passengers and for operating the electrically driven mechanism.

Miss Margaret Mather, Herbert E. Mecke Wed

Miss Margaret Mather, daughter of Mrs. Frank W. Mather of Westminster, Md., and the late Mr. Mather, was married yesterday to Herbert E. Mecke at St. John's Roman Catholic Church in Westminster, the Rev. Francis X. Wills officiating. Mr. Mecke is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Mecke of West Orange, N. J.

Given in marriage by her brother, Frank W. Mather, jr., the bride wore her mother's wedding dress of ivory satin trimmed with velvet and sced pearl embroidery. The bride was attended by Miss Rebecca Ann Thomas, Miss Ann Didrickson, Miss Gertrude McNabb, Miss Mary Jean Huntington and Mrs. Dudley Rochester.

Best man for the bridegroom was Julian Foster and the ushers were Henry O. Mecke, Allen DeLanoy, William McClarence and Henry S. Coleman.

Mrs. Mecke, a member of the Holton-Arms faculty, is a graduate of Hanah More Academy and Barnard College. Mr. Mecke is an alumnus of Columbia College and Columbia University School of Engineering.

Food Tips for the Homemaker

Here's a recipe for any easy-to-make pie shell. Finely crush 18 chocolate nugget cookies and mix with two tablespoons melted butter or margarine; press onto bottom of an 8-inch pie plate. Stand whole cookies around the edge of the plate and chill thoroughly before filling with a gelatin mixture.

Add a handful of washed drained raisins to thinly shredded red cabbage that has been moistened with dressing. Serve in lettuce cups in individual wooden salad bowls.

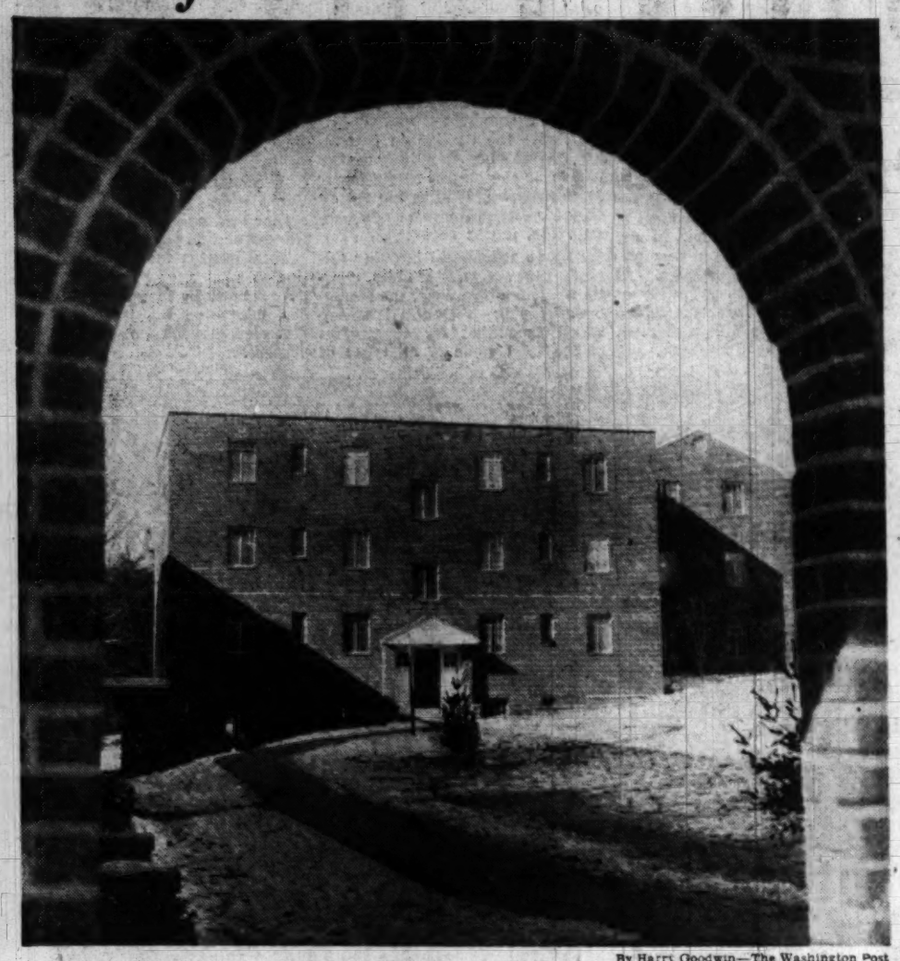
GI Influx Revives the Furnished Apartment



By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

Furnished apartments, like the Willston units here, are a boon to incoming military personnel

For Civilian Newcomers —Many Furnished Rooms

By Robert P. Jordan

MEMBERS of the armed forces are coming into Greater Washington for duty here at a rate of from 800 to 1000 a month—and the rate is increasing.

How many civilians are arriving to take defense jobs is unknown, but their number will run high into the thousands in the next few months, observers say.

Where are they going to live?

This is a problem that Department of Defense officials are tossing around now. And, as of now, they haven't evolved any housing plan of action for the civilians. So far, the problem is being more or less satisfactorily worked out by the individual incoming defense worker.

Too, officers and men of the Army, Navy and Air Force are finding places to live with a minimum of difficulty, thanks in good part to the Armed Forces Housing Office.

It's when the civilian defense employe begins turning up with his family—and this multiplied by the thousands—that the housing situation will get tough. So says Col. Waldron E. Leonard, director of the District Veterans Service Center.

"We haven't got a big problem yet. We realize it's on the way. The influx already is working a definite hardship," Colonel Leonard reports. The trouble is, he says, that while there are plenty of single rooms available, the defense worker's family obviously can't live in such cramped quarters.

And, in the majority of instances, the defense worker can't pay the going rent for apartments—of which the center lists more than 5000 right now. That's where it begins to pinch a little now, according to Leonard, and that's where it's going to get worse. They can't pay the $75 to $100 a month that is asked, he says.

FOR A TIME, back in the summer months, there was a surplus of rental space here, excepting houses for rent. It got to the point where rentals in some fringe apartment projects were coming down a little to attract tenants. But since Korea, and the beginning of the influx of additional Federal personnel, apartment project sponsors have been optimistic about bringing their developments to full occupancy.

The situation is like this now:

A 580-unit section of the huge Willston apartment project, which bisects Arlington's Lee blvd. a short distance east of Falls Church, is just coming on the market. Some 484 of these units will be put up for rent as unfurnished. Management isn't worried about filling them.

The remaining 96 have been completely furnished by the management. They represent the first sizable block of apartment units offered for rent on a furnished basis in a long time. They are one reason why the Armed Forces Housing Office, according to its officer in charge, can find places to live for 70 percent of its applicants right off the bat.

These furnished units may be the forerunner of hundreds of others throughout Greater Washington in garden-type and elevator apartment projects.

According to FHA spokesmen, there has been—and is, more than ever, now—a need for decent accommodations for "semitransient" persons. Officers and men of the armed forces, for instance, who come here with their families on temporary tours of duty, or who come here not knowing how long they'll stay.

For these, says Lieut. Comdr. Paul L. Donohoe, OIC of the Armed Forces Housing Office at the Pentagon, furnished apartments are a boon. Those at Willston have "helped a lot." They give members of the service a chance for a base of operations while looking around for a place to live when their furniture arrives.

AT WILLSTON, in the furnished units, this is what the deal is:

The owners have received permission of the FHA, since FHA's loan insurance is back of the project's financing, to furnish the 96 units. Rents have been scaled upwards by FHA accordingly.

Rents range from $117 a month for a second-floor, one-bedroom apartment, up to $139 monthly for a first-floor, two-bedroom apartment. Utilities are included in the rent, as well as a switchboard and secretarial service.

M. Seth Horne, one of the owners of the project, says it was decided to furnish the apartments after surveys showed a large need for such facilities. Commander Donohoe reports that the housing office at the Pentagon gets perhaps 60 percent of the rental houses it could use, for instance.

The FHA spokesmen report

Two homes in Rock Creek Palisades—the country's "best project of economy houses"

Montgomery County Subdivision

Project Judged Nation's Best

ROCK Creek Palisades, a new, 99-unit subdivision of homes off Connecticut ave. in Montgomery County, has been selected as the Nation's best project of economy houses.

The development, constructed by Standard Properties, Inc., is first place winner in its division of the National Association of Home Builders' 1950 neighborhood development contest. The association announced contest results yesterday.

Aim of the Nation-wide planning competition was to bring forth the building industry's best designs in residential construction and to find the "perfect neighborhood." Here's what the judges said about the Standard Properties subdivision:

"Rock Creek Palisades is largely surrounded by park areas, which are a definite asset. Relationship to topography has been well handled.

"Location of streets, orientation, and location of homes is good. Grading of lots has been well handled. Natural tree growth has been preserved.

"The building plan of the house is excellent. There is generous provision for storage facilities and excellent circulation. Exterior design is clean and makes good use of color."

STANDARD PROPERTIES, INC., is composed of the Daniel brothers, Cushing, Clark and Raleigh, and Donald G. Heyne. The Rock Creek Palisades development, as it is now, is just in its preliminary stages.

According to Cushing Daniel, the 99 units now built—and sold—are the first of 1200 homes to be built there on 350 acres. Grading of streets is beginning now for a new section of 54 homes. Plans also call for ultimate construction of a shopping center. Areas have been set aside for a school and churches.

Of the homes already constructed, 70 one-story dwellings are called "baby ramblers" by the company. The remaining 29 are one and one half story structures, with basements, built along Cape Cod lines. All are frame, two-bedroom homes, but a third bedroom can be built into the one half story houses.

Construction of the project began early this year, with prices pegged at $7900 for the "baby rambler" and $11,000 for the one and one half story house. The smaller house will sell in the future for $8350—an example of what rising construction and building material costs have done in the new-home market here.

Lot sizes average around 5200 square feet. The one-story home contains 678 square feet; the one and one half-story house has 696 square feet.

NAHB's neighborhood development contest was conducted by its technical services department. The Urban Land Institute here was technical consultant.

Judges were Waverly Taylor, well-known Washington builder and developer; H. Everett Kincaid, Chicago, land planning consultant, and John S. Highland, Buffalo, N. Y., architect.

$100,000 Worth

Fat Prizes Spur Home Designers

By David C. Bareuther
Associated Press Real Estate Editor

NEW YORK.—If you can afford to buy a new home next year—and if one can be built for you—you can expect a lot of surprises in the way of livability.

The plan of the house will be more efficient, room layouts will be more convenient and comfortable and there will be many attractive new features.

The entire architectural profession is competing to pack the 1951 house with the best ideas that can be inspired by $100,000 in prize money.

This contest is sponsored jointly by the National Association of Home Builders and the Architectural Forum, "Magazine of Building."

New Access to Potomac Palisades

Road Link Will Speed Home Building

THE SPOUT RUN link of George Washington Memorial Highway opened to traffic yesterday—a short stretch of roadway that will speed development of hundreds of acres of rolling, wooded terrain along the Virginia side of the Potomac.

Running about a mile in length from Key Bridge into Lorcom lane and thence into Lee hgwy., the new, dual lane parkway will provide ready access to a large, undeveloped—or relatively so—area along the Potomac palisades.

Opening of the highway extension brought the announcement from M. T. Broyhill, a large-scale area builder, that he will begin immediate construction of some 125 houses on land served by the Spout Run link.

Of these, he reported, 37—already sold—will be built on Lorcom lane. Around 90 other houses will be constructed nearby, Broyhill said.

To George Mason Green and Mrs. Green, developers of Bellevue Forest, the new highway extension will "put the property right on the map." Up to now, "access hasn't been too good."

Mrs. Green said that "lots of people don't know about it"—that the area is "hidden away" and not served by a primary highway. In Bellevue Forest, which she said is the last subdivision off the Potomac west of Key Bridge, there are some 65 acres yet to be developed. Seventy custom-built homes have been constructed there so far in the past seven or eight years.

PROPERTY ALONG the palisades, she reported, is zoned either R-10 (lots of 10,000 or more square feet) or R-20 (lots from 20,000 square feet up).

This land, because of its desirability, already is bringing high prices. An acre, Mrs. Green said, would cost from $6000 to $7000. Moreover, she predicted, the Spout Run link will increase its value. She pointed out that it is now about a five-minute drive from Bellevue Forest to Key Bridge.

Builder Broyhill plans to construct both contemporary-style, one-story homes and colonial-type homes on Lorcom lane and in the vicinity. They will range in price from $17,500 to $30,000, he said.

Broyhill cited the improved ingress and egress to the area brought by the highway extension as the main factor in the development to come. He said he either owns or has options on 100 or so additional acres there for future home building.

George Washington Memorial Highway now extends from Mount Vernon to the Lorcom lane-Lee hwy. connection. The Spout Run link was built at a cost of about $850,000.

The parkway ultimately will run westward along the Potomac to a proposed bridge crossing above Great Falls, where it will connect with another highway following the Maryland shore of the river.

Here's How to Keep Yule Tree Green and Fire-Resistant

WHEN it's time to decorate the Christmas tree, don't overlook the importance of making it fire-resistant as well as beautiful. A tinder-dry tree can burst into flames in a matter of seconds when ignited by the tiniest of sparks.

A little extra care will make the tree more resistant to fire, although the danger cannot be eliminated entirely.

The first thing to do is to select a fresh, green tree. Then place it in a pail of water as soon as it is brought home. A handy galvanized steel water pail or tub is ideal for this purpose and the same container can serve also as a practical and inexpensive tree stand.

Trim the branches from the lower part of the tree and stand the trunk in the center of the pail or tub. Pack wet sand firmly around the trunk.

Keep the sand wet during the entire time the tree is in the house. The branches absorb moisture from the sand and this slows the drying.

The container can be covered with a white bed sheet to make an attractive snow-covered base.

Construction Activity Stays at High Level

NONRESIDENTIAL building expanded in November, partially offsetting a decline in homebuilding, to hold total construction activity at a record level for this season of the year. This is reported by the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics and the Building Materials Division of the Department of Commerce.

The total value of all types of new construction put in place during November amounted to more than 2½ billion dollars, off by 8 percent from October, 1950, but 23 percent above the total for November, 1949.

A further tapering-off in the 1950 housing boom was indicated by a larger-than seasonal drop of 10 percent from October in the value of work done on new private residential buildings. At 1020 million dollars, the value of new private dwelling construction in November was still 36 percent above a year ago, however, and the highest November total on record.

The moderate rise in nonresidential building activity resulted from gains of 5 to 10 percent in commercial and industrial building and smaller increases in construction of religious, private educational, and hospital buildings.

Effects of the limitation order on new construction for social and recreational purposes began to show up with a small decrease in construction activity on projects in that category.

Despite the decline in November, private homebuilding continued to be the largest single factor in establishing 1950 as the record year for expenditures on new construction, it was reported.

Private residential building (including new dwelling units, additions and alterations, and nonhousekeeping residential structures) accounted for 44 percent of the total value of all types of new construction in November, and for 45 percent of total new construction during the first 11 months of 1950.

Private construction other than residential building made up only 29 percent of the total during the first 11 months of this year and public construction was 26 percent of the total.

All types of public construction declined in November. School and hospital building were down only slightly and highway construction showed a smaller drop than is usual at this season. Expenditures for military and naval construction, amounting to 17 million dollars in November, were higher by 3 million dollars than in November last year.

Total outlays for new construction in 1950 passed the 25 billion dollars mark by the end of November, exceeding the total for the first eleven months of 1949 by 22 percent.

$100,000 Design Ideas to Fill 1951 Houses

ready have applied for entrance in the competition for national, regional and local awards. A total of around 12,000 was expected by the closing date last Friday.

HOW MANY of the best ideas you will see in next year's houses depends on various factors. Among these are:

1. Whether war and defense will permit any home building. Under present credit curbs, requiring larger cash payments, optimists foresee 800,000 homes for 1951, instead of the 1,300,000 started so far this year.

2. Whether the best ideas men will conform to all regulations of the competition and get their plans into the final judging.

3. Whether it is physically possible to give adequate consideration to as many as 12,000 plans in a short time.

Many architects are especially concerned with that last factor. They are spending as much as 200 hours—the equivalent of 25 eight-hour days—in the preparation of their entries including plans, details and meticulous pen-and-ink drawings of the finished house.

They figure that if 12,000 plans are submitted, and the judges work full eight-hour days from January 8 to 12—the designated judging period—each entry can expect only 12 seconds' consideration.

On the other hand, they figure that if each plan were to be given three minutes' consideration, it would take 75 days, or 15 five-day weeks to judge 12,000.

However, a leader in the American Institute of Architects points out that many who have applied to enter the contest probably will not complete their plans. In this event the 12,000 may be shaved down. But many specialists in small home design are known to be submitting several plans, which may counter-balance those dropping out.

THE PROBLEM in the competition is to design an economical one-story house covering no more than 1000 square feet—to keep it in the $8000-to-$11,000 price range. It must contain three bedrooms in addition to living room, dining space, kitchen, bath and utility room.

It must fit on a minimum 60-by-100-foot lot. Other rules call for adaptability to new building materials, the accommodation of large glass areas and other popular features.

No basement is called for, but regional and local judging will be based on the suitability of the plan for use with a basement in areas where basements are preferred.

Such local requirements are widening the scope of the contest. Special awards of $1500 have been set up, for example, by the Long Island Institute of Home Builders in cooperation with the Dime Savings Bank of Brooklyn and the General Bronze Corp. This has resulted in 1100 entries in the Long Island contest alone.

The national association plans to store all entries in a warehouse in Chicago, where subcommittees will weed out obviously ineligible plans before the final judging. Winning designs are to be published in a booklet and the association will sell working drawings on a royalty basis for the designers.

Appraisers' Group Will Elect Officers

ANNUAL ELECTION of officers and governors of the District chapter of the Society of Residential Appraisers will be held at 6:15 p. m. Monday at the Burlington Hotel.

The nominating committee has recommended for officers and members of the board of governors the following men:

For president—James D. Skinner; first vice president—William M. Throckmorton; second vice president — William W. Mollan; secretary-treasurer—R. Lee Baxter.

Board of governors—Robert C. Boucher, Harry Dreisen, Charles L. Norris, Harry Overman, and Julian Scott.

Dinner will preceed the election.

Coolest Project In the Country Is Coming Up

CINCINNATI.—The Robert H. Wachendorf Co. reports that all homes in its new Meadowridge subdivision will be air-conditioned. Robert H. Wachendorf, the builder, said it would be the first all air-conditioned suburb in the country.

Announcement of the plan was made at the signing of a contract with Servel, Inc., of Evansville, Ind., to provide 175 or more gas-operated air-conditioning units at a cost of more than $700,000.

Homes in the subdivision will range in cost from $30,000 to $100,000.

BRANCH D. ELAM has been elected president of the Washington metropolitan chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

Elam succeeds Paul A. Goettelmann, who will continue to serve on the chapter's executive committee.

Other officers elected for 1951 are:

Theodore W. Dominick, vice president; William N. Denton, jr., secretary; Leon Brown, treasurer; Joseph Miller and Grosvenor Chapman, directors-at-large; Anthony Ferrara, Maryland division director, and George H. Boyer, Virginia division director.

20 Houses Scheduled

Walter Valentine, 925 New York ave. nw., plans to construct 20 two-story and basement homes, 18 by 32 feet each, at 24 to 80 55th st. se. Permit application has been made.

Permit Issued For 16 Homes

Potomac Development Corp., 1338 I st. nw., has received a permit to build 16 houses in the 8300 block of Navahoe dr. and the 1100 block of Quebec st., New Hampshire Estates, Md. The dwellings, to be constructed of brick and cinderblock, will be 17 by 37 feet each.

that sponsors of several other projects coming on the market now are studying the possibility of offering some of their apartments on a furnished basis. If, however, they find they can fill them on an unfurnished basis, according to the spokesmen, that's the way it will be.

IT'S PRETTY MUCH the same old story over at the District Veterans Service Center. They have close to 5400 apartment units listed as available. The least expensive one-bedroom unit is $68; for a two-bedroom apartment, it's $79.50. There are no three-bedroom apartments listed.

There is a plethora of sleeping rooms in the District. The service center has close to 1500 on its books, ranging from $25 to $40 a month for single rooms to $20 to $30 apiece for occupants of a double sleeping room.

This is fine for the small army of incoming Federal clerks and stenographers. A Civil Service spokesman points out that a sleeping room is what a low-income Government employe looks for on getting to Washington. Then, in six months or so, the employe teams up with another and takes an apartment.

That has been the procedure in postwar Washington. Now, however, Civil Service officials estimate that close to 250,000 additional Federal employes may be needed for defense agencies before the emergency is over. "A considerable number of these," the spokesman said, "will be in Washington."

White's Portable Dreamhouse

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

Hunched over the chimney he is installing is Byron White. The house, like Mary's little lamb, is sure to go wherever White goes—because it's portable

NEWPORT NEWS, Va.—Back in Vermont, not so long ago, Byron White and his wife began building their dreamhouse. Then White decided to take a job at Hastings Instrument Co. here.

So they simply hitched the house on behind their car and took it along with them.

Now the couple is putting the finishing touches on the house in its new location. The three-room home is 35 feet long, 8 feet wide, 11½ feet high when it's being towed.

For Defense: Lumber Yards Ready To Stockpile

THE NATION'S retail lumber and building materials dealers have enough yard capacity to store more than a full year's production of lumber in case stockpiling becomes desirable for defense purposes.

This was announced last week by H. R. Northrup, executive vice president of the National Retail Lumber Dealers Association.

He said the association is recommending that in the event of a serious emergency, regular retail storage space be utilized to accommodate any inventories which the Government may desire to accumulate.

"So far as is known, no plans for stockpiling large quantities of lumber are contemplated at this time, although moderate inventories are being built up to meet the current needs of the rearmament program.

"Because of the rapid rate at which lumber has been used so far this year, inventories in retail yards at the present time are only about 5.5 million board feet, but the yards are ready to receive large additional supplies as fast as they can be produced and delivered.

Heat's In, Cold's Out

Builders are using aluminum foil to insulate homes in some projects, a trade journal reports. Aluminum foil is used as "reflective insulation," keeping the heat inside in the winter and outside during hot summer days.

November Building Awards Topped Pace of a Year Ago

CONSTRUCTION contract awards in the 37 States east of the Rockies in November totaled $1,087,062,000 — 4 percent less than the October figure of $1,135,815,000, but 14 percent more than the total for November, 1949. This was reported by F. W. Dodge Corporation, construction news and marketing specialists.

The eleven-month total of $13,332,623,000 was 41 percent higher than the corresponding total for 1949, according to the Dodge firm.

Total of square feet of floor area for the first 11 months of 1950 was 1,217,512,000 or 54 percent above the same total for last year.

Residential awards in November totaled $496,682,000, a decrease of 6 percent from October but 14 percent higher than November, 1949. Non-residential awards totaled $434,894,000, which was 2 percent higher than October and 63 percent higher than November last year.

Public and private works and utilities were $155,486,00 in November—13 percent below October and 39 percent lower than November, 1949.

Plans in Progress For Stores, Offices

Plans are being drawn for nine stores and offices to be built at Colesville rd. and Fenton st., Silver Spring, by Wheeler Engineering Co., 925 15th st. nw. Owner is Fenton Construction Corp., Continental Building. Sub-bids will be taken later.

What better Christmas present for your family than a wooded homesite in beautiful, restricted "Bellevue Forest"? Within 15 minutes of downtown Washington, near the new George Washington Memorial Parkway, on a ridge near the Potomac River between Chain Bridge and Key Bridge, and close to the Washington Golf and Country Club, lies this beautiful community.

These homesites, wooded with towering trees and dogwood, range in size from ¼ acre to ½ acre.

There are 70 individually designed better-type homes now occupied by contented home owners. City conveniences such as 50-ft. streets, water, sewer, curb and gas are in and there is transportation to downtown Washington.

Satisfy your family by driving out today and selecting one of these choice sites. They are a smart buy for your family's future security and are the perfect setting for the better-type home you plan to build.

Real Estate Roundup

YULE PARTIES all over the place—some already held, others on tap.

Seventeenth annual Christmas party of the Washington Real Estate Board, for instance, will liven the Mayflower Hotel ballroom at 12:30 p. m. Thursday. Scheduled are refreshments, lunch, entertainment, music, prizes.

The yearly Yule celebration of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, on the other hand, was held yesterday at noon at the Statler Hotel, with several hundred builders and their guests present.

Net proceeds of ticket sales will be split between the Boys Club of Washington and the Police Boys Club. It will buy athletic equipment.

NEXT FRIDAY, at noon, the Montgomery County Real Estate Board's annual Christmas party will get under way at the Stone House Inn, Four Corners.

Members are asked to bring gifts for the Christ Child Society Home, Rockville. They will be distributed to children there on Christmas Day.

The Alexandria-Arlington-Fairfax Real Estate Board held its annual dinner dance and Christmas party last Thursday at the Belle Haven County Club, below Alexandria, with more than 200 persons attending.

Miss Washington of 1950—Sandra Stahl highlighted the evening's entertainment with several songs. Lee Potter, Arlington realtor, was toastmaster. The entertainment committee was headed by Mrs. M. T. Broyhill, Arlington, and Mrs. Blanche Caton, Alexandria.

CHRISTMAS PARTY of the Washington Building Congress will be held from 5 to 8 p. m. Monday at the Mayflower Hotel.

Also coming up is the yearly party of the District chapter of the Producers' Council. This celebration will be held from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m. Wednesday at the Carlton Hotel.

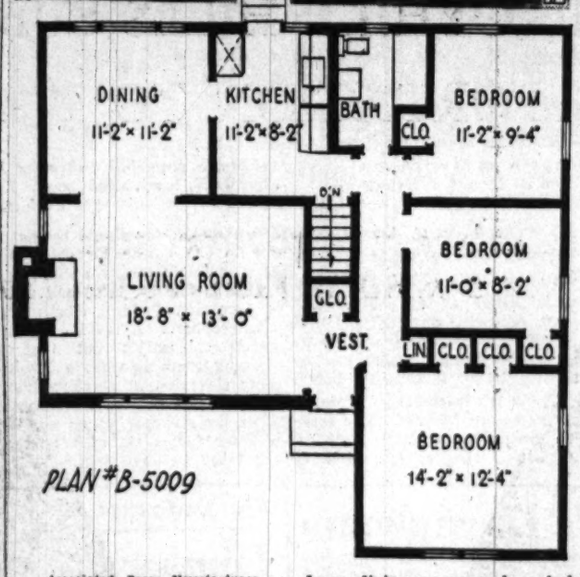
A 'Ranch' on an Urban Lot



Associated Press Newsfeatures

A COMPACT version of the popular modern one-story house layout, commonly referred to as the "ranch" plan, this design can be used on urban lots.

The house is only about 38 feet wide, yet features a center hall, large living room and secluded sleeping porch.

This is Plan B-5009 by Alwin Cassens, jr., architect, 116-55 Queens blvd., Forest Hills, N. Y.

The house covers 1141 square feet and with full basement contains 25,102 cubic feet.

Building Workers' Pay Hikes Average Ten Cents an Hour

UNION PAY SCALES of journeymen in the building trades increased an average of 10 cents an hour between July 1, 1949, and July 1, 1950, while helpers and laborers' scales moved up 9 cents an hour.

This is reported by the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics. The bureau said that the upward movement was led by lathers and stonemasons with average hourly increases of 24 and 17 cents.

Bricklayers' tenders and terrazzo workers' helpers, with advances averaging 12 cents an hour for all workers in these categories, showed the greatest gain among the helper and laborer classifications, BLS announced.

Upward revisions in scales were typically for 10 or 12.5 cents an hour and affected 70 percent of the 825,000 unionized construction trades workers in 77 cities included in this forty-fourth annual survey.

Union scales are the minimum wage rates agreed upon through collective bargaining between employers and trade unions. Overtime beyond established maximum daily and weekly hours is excluded. The scales do not reflect premium rates; thus, they do not represent total hourly earnings of union labor.

On July 1, 1950, union hourly scales for journeymen in the building trades averaged $2.45, and individual trade averages ranged from $2.23 for paperhangers to $2.84 for stonemasons.

Bricklayers, plasterers, and lathers also had average scales of more than $2.75 an hour. Among helpers and laborers, average scales varied from $1.35 for composition roofers' helpers to $1.97 for terrazzo workers' helpers.

Building laborers ($1.55) was the only other classification below the $1.65 national average for helpers and laborers.

Company Slates 28 Dwellings

Hamilton Construction Co., Inc., has applied for a permit to build 28 houses on Kilmer st. in Landover, Md.

The dwellings will be two stories in height and of frame construction. Dimensions are 18 by 28 feet. The builder-owner is located at 3018 Hamilton st., Hyattsville.

New Building Block Reported A Cost-Saver

A NEW interlocking building block for defense walls and low-cost housing, made entirely from waste materials and requiring no mortar, has been developed by Hydro-Forged Stone Associates, Inc., of Cleveland, Ohio.

The patented Speedblock, which resembles cut stone, granite or marble when assembled, is made in a tongue and groove design within tolerances of 1/128-inch and can be manufactured at a cost less than ordinary concrete blocks.

According to Gerald P. Dooley, president of the corporation, Speedblocks are designed to meet the increasing requirements of fire-walls for defense purposes and low-cost housing everywhere.

Tests, he said, revealed that Speedblocks make good firewalls, and can withstand heavy pressure.

When laid, they are locked together and do not require the use of any mortar. After erection they are sprayed with a composition of cement, sand, waterproofing and color, thus strengthening the bond and joints, and obtaining a complete waterproofing and painting job at the same time.

The accuracy and uniformity with which the blocks are made make it possible for an unskilled worker to build a perfect wall merely by laying one block into another, it was reported.

Speedblocks are available in all standard sizes, and are hollow in the center. That provides about 75 percent of the volume on the block as dead air space for insulation. The blocks are true-sided and are available for all modular units.

The machine which makes them has an output of 3500-4500 blocks per day with a minimum crew. It is manufactured exclusively for Hydro-Forged Stone Associates, Inc., by The Mishco Corporation in Miami, Florida.

Blocks have been turned out from scores of materials, most of them normally considered waste. These have included sand, oyster shells, iron ore waste, crushed brick, mine tailings, stone dust, flue ash, and pumice.

Hewitt Elected Vice President of Md. Realty Group

FRANK L. HEWITT, JR., secretary-treasurer of the Montgomery County Real Estate Board, has been elected vice president of the Maryland Real Estate Association.

HEWITT

Hewitt was elected at the association's annual meeting last week in Baltimore. He was also named to the organization's board of governors.

His tenure in both offices will be for two years.

Gardening and Homemaking

For Yule Season

Garden Can Supply Decorations

By Katherine Barrett Pozer

CHRISTMAS is becoming more and more a gardener's season. In other seasons, garden parties and tours have played their part in raising funds for causes of peace and goodwill—their plants have offered friendliness and cheer to shut-ins and those far from home. Their flowers have given the silent word of sympathy often so difficult to express. At Easter time, blossoms best express the spirit of the season, and at Christmas the garden can furnish decorations and gifts with the personal touch.

Making Christmas decorations and gifts from one's own garden is becoming more and more popular. Holly and evergreens supply the wreaths and brightly tinted berries and seed pods give the needed touch of Christmas color. Many amateurs have learned to grow their own poinsettias and homegrown African violets in bloom make welcome and very personal gifts.

In this climate it is possible to have almost continuous bloom out-of-doors. The "Christmas Rose" looms large in present day floricultural interest. Seedsmen and nurserymen have recently introduced more superior forms. It is a thrill to any gardener to find the large glacier white blooms when all the rest of the garden is taking its rest. Cut and brought indoors, they take ranking place over their more spectacular hot house companions.

WHILE THE "Christmas Rose" is new to many gardeners, records show that it was introduced into England as early as 1596. A native of Asia Minor, it adapts itself to our cold winters and stands the heat of our summers—a virtue which many plants from cold climates do not have. It was brought to America in the very early days, and several varieties were featured at the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society in 1880. Once established, it blooms from October to March, and in this climate its blooms frequently come at their height for the Christmas season.

A correspondent to Horticulture writes an interesting account of a Christmas Rose which in its 50 years of existence has been moved from New Hampshire to Massachusetts and once again in that state. It has bloomed each year, has never been divided, and this year with a little special attention of lime and manure has more than its usual quota of buds.

It will grow in ordinary garden soil, but does its best when planted in sandy loam, well enriched with cow manure. It does well planted in the shrub border or under deciduous trees, for it likes a partly shaded position. If planted late, it should be mulched heavily with leaves, tucked around the foliage, never over the plant.

HERB COOKERY has become one of America's particular fancies. The herb garden occupies a small space and yet can offer a multitude of interests. Aside from their successful culture, the drying and blending of herbs for cookery is an art in itself. Like other dried materials, they should be dehydrated as quickly as possible. The simplest method is to tie them in small bunches and hang in a dry, well ventilated place. If such a place is not available, the leaves can be stripped off and placed on a wire screen. Dried quickly, they retain their color, and are more attractive to use if not powdered too finely.

The blue spruce makes a handsome Christmas tree

Small jars of herbs make welcome gifts, but many times the recipients are dubious as to their proper use. The Cottage Herb Garden at St. Alban's Cathedral has done much to encourage the use of herbs in gardens in cookery. The garden at the Cathedral is a lovely example of the proper use of many varieties for garden decoration as well as for kitchen and linen shelf use.

This year the garden has for sale along with its books on herbs a chart which shows at a glance the proper use of herbs, for sauces, soups and salads and other dishes. The chart is colorful and attractive and will make a useful and pretty decoration for kitchen or pantry.

"Lavender, sweet lavender" was one of the well known street cries of old England, and here, once again, the fragrance of lavender is heading the list of favorite scents. It is easy to grow, yet expensive to purchase. Rose jars, too, are coming into popularity again and rose sachets are being widely used.

Good Drainage Helps Plant's Hardiness

By Alfred Putz

HARDINESS in plants is relative. It does not depend altogether on the temperature but to a large degree on general conditions. One of the most important of these is drainage. Many plants that can stand extreme cold succumb to much less severe freezing weather if the soil is soggy while they are dormant.

Exposure to wind and sun also enters into the picture. Both are equally destructive and are especially harmful to plants that retain all or part of their foliage. Strong icy winds accelerate loss of moisture, and unless the soil is well supplied to replace this loss they may be dying from thirst.

Frequent alternate thawing and freezing not only puts a strain on the tissues, and this applies also to deciduous plants that are leafless during winter, but activities within the plant cells are subjected to frequent sharp changes.

THERE IS no better way to remedy these conditions than by protecting the plants with some sort of screen to keep the wind and sun off. Burlap fastened to stout posts set deeply into the ground and preferably far enough away to clear the longest branches is effective and procurable by anyone.

Where straw, salt hay or cornstalks are available, they may be placed right against the plants and held in place by several tiers of string or twine.

For extra-choice specimens, a wooden wall to form a right angle is fine but it should be high enough to ward off the sun when at its highest point at noon.

As no one can predict just what kind of winter is ahead, it is wise to anticipate the worst. For hybrid-tearoses, nothing is better than loose soil heaped over the plants so that at least two eyes on every branch are covered.

THE SOIL will have to come from some other part of the garden because scraping it from around the roses is likely to injure many of their roots besides bringing others so close to the new surface as to subject them to severe freezing temperatures.

Under the new method of keeping roses rather high, two buds on each branch are not enough, but adding more soil entails considerably more labor. For the protection of additional eyes, leaves come in very handy.

To keep them in place, a guard of chicken wire may be used around either individual plants or entire beds. There is virtually no danger of their being blown away but a few evergreen boughs or a little soil on top will be extra insurance.

Climbing roses are especially vulnerable to extreme cold. Covering with burlap will help if this is fastened securely to the supports; but for reliable protection the canes should be taken from the supports, tied together, laid on the ground and covered with 6 inches of soil.

SO FAR, only the parts above ground have received consideration. But there is real danger that the roots of some plants will suffer should frost enter deep into the soil. The best cover for them is snow. But there are few sections in this area where the gardener can depend on it to safeguard his plants.

Nature also provides another cover in the form of leaves. They do an excellent job either over the bare soil surface or nestled among low-growing plants which prevent their being packed down by the weight of snow or the action of repeated rains. Never let any leaves remain on the lawn or plants that retain all or part of their foliage.

For lack of leaves, peatmoss may be used. It has excellent insulant qualities but holds much moisture so that its use must be restricted to well drained soils. Ground corncobs, tobacco stems, shredded bark, peanut shells, cocoa shells, buckwheat hulls and other mill waste also are valuable.

Evergreen boughs are especially valuable but few gardeners can get enough of them unless they can acquire them from discarded Christmas trees.

ALL THESE winter ground covers must wait until frost has entered the soil surface. To apply them before may cause considerable harm by keeping the soil warm, which in turn might influence the plants to become active when they must be kept dormant.

Plants which retain their foliage always are happiest if their tops have free access to air. A simple way to insure this condition and yet have them covered is to place berry boxes, wooden crates, baskets, barrels or the like over them. Large flower pots will serve for quite small plants but it is best to tip them slightly so that some air can enter at the soil level.

Newly planted trees should have the trunk and base of the main branches wrapped in burlap, applied as strips which overlap.

A Guide to Home Repairs

GOVERNMENT mortgage credit controls, which reduce the number of new homes to be built, place a higher valuation on existing homes.

The home owner's property is worth more; prudent care will maintain its high level of value. The sooner small home repairs are made, the less the cost.

A repair guide follows, as suggested by the Construction Research Bureau, national clearing house for building information:

EXTERIOR WALLS

Masonry: Remove loose mortar between joints: press fresh mortar firmly in place. Refinish to match existing joints. To repair broken brick, stone or tile, remove with chisel; press new unit into fresh mortar.

Clapboard or wood shingle: Remove damaged pieces with nail ripper, or slip a heavy hacksaw blade under shingle and saw off nails which hold it. Slip loose shingle or clapboard into place; fasten with rust-proof nails under lower edge of the overlapping one.

WALLS, CEILINGS

Plaster cracks: Remove all loose material and dirt. Wet surface thoroughly and force fresh plaster into crack, to form firm bond with the old plaster.

Loose or bulging plaster: Remove before replacing. Dampen sound plaster and all exposed lath. Apply new plaster hard against lath so it will ooze behind it and in sufficient quantity. Bring to smooth finish.

WOOD FLOOR BOARDS

If lifted out of position, lay a piece of old carpet over bulge and place wood block over carpet. Drive down loose strip with heavy hammer.

Sagging floors: Level out by jacking up if there is access to space beneath floor.

To replace damaged boards: Drill holes with brace and bit 2 inches beyond damaged part; insert keyhole saw in holes and cut across. Pry out damaged piece and insert new pieces of flooring.

PLUMBING

Clogged trap in kitchen sink: Place bucket underneath removable clean-cut plug in lower side of bend in trap. Unscrew plug with wrench. After water drains out, insert bent wire into trap opening to remove accumulated grease and dirt.

Frozen water-supply pipes: Thaw out by electrical resistance, direct flame or applications of hot water. Always start at lower end and work upward. Keep faucet open to indicate flow start.

Electrical resistance method: Connect welding generator to water pipe with two electrical conductors clamped to span frozen section. When sections thaw out, move conductors to another section.

Direct flame method: Apply to frozen pipes with gasoline blowtorch gradually to spread heat evenly.

Hot applications: Wrap pipes with cloth and saturate with boiling water or pour boiling water directly over pipe. Place receptacle below pipe to catch water.

HEATING SYSTEM

Furnace wastes: Keep ashpit damper and door and feed doors tightly fitted. Plug any holes or perforations in smoke-pipe caused by corrosive action of flue gases. Clean inside of furnace with wire brush and scraper. Spray lubricating oil on fire side of heating surfaces of steel boilers to prevent rust. Coat all machine parts with oil or grease. Replace broken or defective parts.

ROOF

Leak in wood shingles: Put new wood shingle in place or use piece of galvanized or copper sheet metal size of shingle. Nail through shingle with galvanized copper shingle nails. Cover nail heads with roofing cement.

Corroded flashing: Loosen ends of flashing by digging mortar out of joints with small cold chisel. Put in new flashing, using mortar or roofing cement, applied with trowel. Fill small holes in tin flashing with plastic roofing cement.

Chimney cracks: Remove all loose mortar in joints. Brush out dust in joints; dampen surface before filling with fresh mortar. Pack mortar in tightly, smooth with trowel.

What Next?

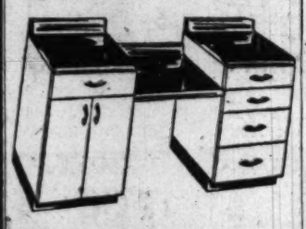
The Kitchen Becomes an 'Office'

FOR MANY a homemaker, the kitchen is more than the room in which she prepares meals and does the clean-up job afterwards. Frequently it serves as her "office."

Here she keeps the family's budget, writes checks to cover the household bills, copies and files recipes that look enticing — and helps the children with their homework.

Sometimes the modern kitchen is criticized because it doesn't allow for such "extra curricular" chores. But modern kitchen equipment can be arranged to provide the comfortable and efficient facilities for this part of the homemaker's work.

Take a look at the arrangement illustrated below and suggested by the Youngstown Kitchens Planning Service.



Here a standard base cabinet top is hung between two standard steel base cabinets at a level 30 to 31 inches above the floor. It is firmly supported on a wooden strip secured to the wall and by bolts secured to the side panels of the cabinets.

This forms an ideal kitchen desk, with drawer space handy in the adjacent cabinets. The top is smooth, making an ideal writing surface, and is easily kept clean.

Furniture Prices Are Going Up

By Gay Pauley

NEW YORK.—The price of furniture has been rising and one industry spokesman believes it will swing even higher after the first of the year.

"Prices have gone up seven to 10 percent since spring," said Arthur Kouri of the Furniture Industries of America. "It's hard to predict whether they will go higher."

However, Eugene Eppinger, sales manager for the New York office of the Herman Miller Furniture Co., predicted there would be another price rise by the end of the year.

Eppinger and Kouri agreed that increases so far were caused by mounting costs of labor and materials and Eppinger said any further rises would be for the same reason.

Neither Eppinger nor Kouri would predict whether shortages of metal and rubber, already felt by the manufacturers, will create a shortage of specific furniture items.

Eppinger commented, however, that some manufacturers now using considerable metal and foam rubber would have to convert to wood, if the Korean war continued.

His firm will be one of those hard hit, for it uses rubber for cushioning and metal for knobs, legs and framework.

ITS NEW LINE of modern, just now hitting the department stores and decorator shops, is about the closest thing to all-metal furniture.

His firm hired designers Charles Eames and George Nelson to produce a group of streamlined storage cabinets, coffee tables, chairs and dining room tables.

Eames came up with a chair which promptly won the New York Museum of Modern Art award for good design in low-priced furniture.

The chair, which will sell for less than $40, has a seat of plastic, reinforced with fiber-glass and is close to the shape of a bowl with one end sliced off. Legs are metal.

New products are on the light side this week.

Sylvania Electric Products Engineers of New York have a new patent on a method of tripling the life of a fluorescent lamp. In the process a small amount of aircon-ium dioxide is added to the cathode coating of the tube.

Sylvania says it increases the rated life of its tubes to 7500 hours from 2500 hours for ordinary tubes.

Duro-test Corp. of North Bergen, N. J., has a new incandescent lamp with an all-white color obtained by fusing a new type of coating to the glass of the bulb.

The company says the new lamp gives almost total diffusion of light without glare or loss of lumen efficiency. The same standard of lighting is maintained throughout the life of the bulb.

A bleaching compound to remove stains from certain types of plastic without destroying color or causing fuzziness has been developed by Turco Products, Inc. of New York. The company says the new compound removes stains of tea, coffee, chocolate and other foods.

A test marketing program for a new frozen concentrated chocolate drink has been started by Beatrice Foods Co. of Chicago. National distribution is not expected to start for several months.

The company says the product is "made with fresh dairy ingredients from which only the water has been removed." When three cans of water are added to the can of the frozen product, it produces "a chocolate-flavored drink of full strength that is indistinguishable from the drink prepared from fresh milk."

LOOKING PRETTY FOR CHRISTMAS

NOW IF THIS were a giveaway show, we could give you a tip as to whose gams Red Skelton is supposed to be snapping. They belong to "Miss Lucky Vista," played by Ann Miller in Red's new comedy, "Watch the Birdie," opening Thursday at the Capitol with Arlene Dahl and Pam Britton among the birdies. Fred Astaire is another favorite who'll be with us for Christmas. Below you see him about to land on a piano while dancing in the Warner's "Let's Dance," with Betty Hutton, arriving Saturday. Right, you find Bing Crosby looking younger than ever; his happy partner is Nancy Olson and they'll be along Thursday at the Palace in his new musical, "Mr. Music." Hit Shows Having No Trouble With Christmas 'Slump;' 'Let's Make an Opera' Draws Some Polite Nods

THE BROADWAY LIGHTS.

The plays: The Christmas season slump attacked only the so-so shows, confirming George M. Cohan's oft-quoted line: "There's nothing the matter with show business that a hit won't cure" . . . "Bell, Book and Candle", a recent arrival starring the Rex Harrisons (Lilli Palmer), enjoyed a better-than-capacity trade in its fourth week . . . Celeste Holm and "Affairs of State" played to standees again. When it opened, several reviewers insulted it . . . "Call Me Madam" with Ethel Merman romped over the $53,000 mark and could do more than that if the fire dept. permitted more standees. This is the musical which twits Perle Mesta and Margaret Truman's vocalizing, more topical than ever . . . "South Pacific" is playing to its usual wall-bursting business and "Country Girl", "Guys and Dolls", "Cocktail Party" and "Lady's Not for Burning" are others that guarantee your money's worth . . . "The Cellar and the Well", which opened last Sabbath, received unanimous regrets . . . "Let's Make an Opera", from London, drew polite nods and little else . . . "Bless You All," a musical, brought back Mary McCarty, Pearl Bailey and Valerie Bettis, all of them affectionately embraced.

WINCHELL

THE CINEMAGICIANS: "For Heaven's Sake", thanks to Clifton Webb's crisp drollery, was rated good entertainment . . . "Ways of Love" is a French-Italian 3-cheer trilogy. The tales are expertly dramatized and deftly played, especially the one starring Anna Magnani . . . "Trail of Robin Hood" was reported a light-hearted adventure shackled by a leaden-footed tempo . . . "Rapture" offers a foggy fantasy more confusing than entertaining . . . "The Last of the Buccaneers" is piracy piffle . . . "Operation X." was blackmailed as "vague".

"DEAR WINCHELL," writes Dr. D. M. White of Boston University's Division of Journalism. "I suspect you are in sympathy with my crusade to make newspapers comprehensible to the average reader. I recall when a New York newspaper went in for color comics. It advertised that section this way: 'Eight pages of iridescent polychromous effulgence.' Now, I ask you, how many children would understand that? Or how many grownups?" . . . Prof. White also noted that for his pains to improve matters several editorialists tch-tch'd him. We wish the professor would unravel the following from the Herald Tribune music reviews: "Textures almost throughout are a continuous vista of partial dissonance, the contrasts that inhere in consonance, or in sharper dissonance are eschewed, nor is the contrast factor of rhythmic dynamism introduced save briefly here and there" . . . Then there's the same gazette's book critic, who tagged James Thurber a misogynist . . . He could've said woman-hater, but you'd have savvied that!

THE PRESS-BOX: Happy Chandler complained that his ouster voting was conducted secretly . . . Well, isn't that typically American—the secret ballot? . . . Winston Churchill, the papers reported, devoured a dozen oysters, two bowls of soup, a huge steak, triple order of ice-cream, (plus chocolate sauce) followed by two bottles of champagne and some brandy . . . Making a mountain of a Churchill. (Joke over) . . . Ilse Koch, the Buchenwald butcher, was carried from the court screaming: "I am guilty" . . . Come now, child. Everyone knows, as General Clay said, there was "insufficient evidence" . . . Hallam Richardson, the lawyer for Benjamin Freedman, drew up the crackpot charges against Anna M. Rosenberg (of the Defense Dept.) which proved phoney . . . This man once attempted to jail us on a criminal libel charge. It was thrown out of court . . . Most shocking part of Mrs. Rosenberg's persecution was that several Senators gullibly accepted the accusations which originated with notorious hate-peddler Gerald L. K. Smith, who has never been investigated.

THE MAGAZINES: John Hersey embellishes the New Yorker with an essay searing newsmen, who corkscrewed the President's innocuous A-bomb statement into an international nightmare. It reddens the faces of many Washington journalists . . . New Republic accuses Time-Life Publisher H. Luce as going "wholly mad" for announcing that the third World War is already raging . . . Newsweek's outline of the grim U. S. strategic position is crowded with answers to silver-lining spotters, who expect a miracle when it is just a mirage . . . Woman's Home Companion cops the good-timing award with its next number. It has a piece on Margaret Truman's career. She offers her father a lesson in common-sense: When a friend was appalled by a vitriolic review, she calmly replied: "Most of my notices are all for me. Forget it."

THE INTELLIGENSIA: Flair's prose-portrait of Katharine Hepburn omits the familiar fan mag goo . . . Louella and Hedda, Hollywood's top historians, predict in current cinema mags that Elizabeth Taylor and Nick Hilton will enjoy "a long and happy" marriage . . . "Louisa" is a wholesome-as-milk movie offering a love story between grandpa Charles Coburn and grandma Spring Byington, so the ads for the film display a curvy maedchen, who is practically nekkid . . . H. Barnes, the movie critic, reported "a cornucopia of killings" in "Highway 301" . . . He means there's a helluva lot of 'em . . . The column's tip that Chicago would have a new dramatic critic was denied vocally there. New critic Dedman (what a name for an actor killer) was appointed officially today.

ALICE AND ALL: Mary Mangum plays the title role in "Alice in Wonderland," opening a special Christmas run tomorrow night at Arena Stage. Here's Alice with the Red Queen and the White Queen —Jacqueline Dudley and Kip Conlon. Nightly performances will start at 8 o'clock; all matinees are sold out for the run

The Barry Ego Stands Alone

By Sonia Stein

IF YOU were hunting for an eligible bachelor, you wouldn't normally beat the bush in the neighborhood of a batch of small children or a cluster of cackling and outspoken old folks, either.

BARRY

But tossing caution to the winds, that's exactly where you'll find one. Jack Barry, owner and emcee of "Juvenile Jury" (WEAM, Sundays at 7:30 p. m.) and "Life Begins at 80" (WMAL-TV, Tuesdays at 9:30 p. m.), is quite attractive in a dark, self-satisfied way. He's young (32), educated (Wharton School of Finance and Commerce at the University of Pennsylvania), well housed (Park ave. apartment and country home on Long Island), well-clothed (a trifle natty), well-wheeled (Cadillac convertible), and well-heeled (over $100,000 a year before taxes set in).

His potential is pretty sharp, too. Now grossing about a million dollars a year for his radio and TV shows, which include the Saturday afternoon Joe DiMaggio show (WNBW, 5:30) as well as the senile and juvenile panel shows, Barry has something besides handmade cufflinks up his sleeve. In New York he does a show using the children of famous people as guests, and he has his "Star and Starter" show which has been around the network once, and is ready for a new contract. ("Star and Starter" involves a star who gives a start to a talented young person by singing or acting with them.)

AFTER he gets "Juvenile Jury" back on TV (in February, probably) and "Life Begins at 80" back on radio, and "Star and Starter" back on a network and the "Junior Celebrities" show on a network, he'll be ready to start using his complete TV rights to 1500 short stories and 60 novels by Faith Baldwin as the basis of a daily TV series. He'd have 10 shows working if he had all of his current ideas in use. Future ideas will come, too, because he's primarily an idea man. Not that he'd let anybody else emcee his shows while he sat around thinking up new ones. He's both talent and ideas for most of his packages.

(John Crosby has given Barry the "Multiplicity" prize in a list due out this week in Look magazine, because at one point he was on radio with the DiMaggio show (recorded) at the same time he was on TV with the octogenarian Solomons.)

In Time for Your List

Gifts for the Show Trotter

By Richard L. Coe

JUST IN TIME for your Christmas list comes the year's handsomest book about the theater—Daniel Blum's "Pictorial History of the American Theater: 1900-1950."

While this isn't exactly being given away—it's $7.50—its 3000 pictures and season-by-season text make it a book that will delight the soul of the rabid theatergoer. If I didn't already have a copy, there's not a book of recent vintage I'd rather be given.

Blum is the man who's made a career in recent years of adapting pictorial journalism to the stage and screen record. The six volumes of his "Theater World" ($3.50 clothbound) and his first "Screen World" ($2 paper edition, $3.50 clothbound) prepared the way for this voluminous history, each page of which will conjure up all manner of musings about plays, players and playwrights. Considering the size of his book, 277 pages about the size of "Life's" and a splendid index, Publisher Greenberg's engraving bill must be cut pretty fine to produce such a volume for the price. I'll hazard a guess and say that the printing seems to be an off-set job.

Blum gives us scenes from most of the hits and has evidently gone to some trouble to dig up pictures of famous folk in the days before they were famous. There's no point in going into the names of the period, for virtually everyone is included and you react one of several ways: you marvel at the length of some performers careers; you wonder what happened to people like Vivian Hart (a Gilbert and Sullivan darling of the early '30s); you wonder why you hadn't before known that Ellen Terry played in America (the first performance of "Captain Brassbound's Conversion" in 1907); you smile that when you saw Ethel Waters in "Rhapsody in Black" you hadn't realized what a fine emotional actress she would become or that a minor character in "Three's a Crowd," sharing a scene with Libby Holman, would become a movie star named Fred MacMurray; you muse about the numerous people who've played the same roles in such recent smashes as "Life With Father" and "Oklahoma!"

It is, in short, a book that will give you all sorts of ideas and stirrings of memory. Whoever gets this book will be mighty grateful.

OF the standard-sized books, Gilbert Seldes' "The Great Audience" (Viking, $3.75) is the most provocative. This is a 25-years-after follow-up to his classic "The Seven Lively Arts" and what he has to say about movies, radio and television is provocative, strongly personal and based on years of executive work in the fields.

The annuals, or nearly annuals, have been reviewed in these columns before. John Chapman's continuations of the Burns Mantle Best Plays series this year includes such plays as "The Cocktail Party," "The Member of the Wedding" and "The Wisteria Trees." The only "Best Plays" of last season Washington is sure to see are "Come Back, Little Sheba" and "I Know My Love." (Dodd, Mead $4.)

George Jean Nathan's rattling good opinions are in his "Theater Book of the Year" (Knopf $4) and the rambling essays of John Mason Brown "Still Seeing Things" (McGraw-Hill $3.75) are yours, although Brown's loose prose would surely benefit from firmer editing.

Though Ward Morehouse hasn't come up with a new one this year, his "Matinee Tomorrow," covering the same period as Blum's new book in personal, inside-story style (Whittlesey House $5) is one of the few left over from last year you can still hunt up with profit. By all means give the Morehouse to anyone who doesn't have it.

OF the plays in print, two English poets top the list—T. S. Eliot, with "The Cocktail Party" (Harcourt, Brace $3), and Christopher Fry, with the Oxford Press publishing all three at $2.50 each: "The Lady's Not for Burning," "Venus Observed" and his translation of Anouilh's "Ring Round the Moon." I don't think you can make a better book buy this year than the $2.50 you'll spend for "The Lady's Not for Burning" and in about the same bargain bracket I'd put "The Cocktail Party." Both are wondrous reading.

Out of a distinguished past comes "Seven Plays," by Elmer Rice (Viking, $5). This reminds you that the still active member of the Playwright's Company has given us: "The Adding Machine," "Counsellor-at-Law," "Two on an Island," "Judgement Day," "Street Scene," "Dream Girl" and "On Trial." Its a performance by a lively mind and rereading "The Adding Machine" the other day I was struck by the influence this Theater Guild production, which ran only 72 performances in 1923, had on later writers. Arena Stage will revive that play this winter.

Give Your Musical Friends Some Books for Christmas

By Paul Hume

WHAT TO give your musical friends for Christmas: give 'em books. There are plenty of new and old books that most musicians would like to have around, and plenty of variety from which to choose.

Among the new books, a particularly good gift choice would be:

Strunk: Source Readings in Music History. W. W. Norton & Co. 903 pp. plus index. $8.50.

Oliver Strunk is professor of music at Princeton. His book is a fascinating procession of writings on music. From Plato's Republic, Aristotle's Politics, and the Sophists of Athenaeus, he moves through 2300 years.

His choices range through early Christian views on music to the musical theorists of the Renaissance. The Reformation and Counter-Reformation move in, followed by discussions of the Baroque period and its falling before the great operatic uprisings in Italy and France.

Finally the great composer-critics, Weber, Berlioz, Schumann, Liszt, and Wagner speak. Those were the days when critics really spoke their minds.

Whenever a book is compiled from original sources such as these, readers have the rare opportunity of learning for themselves, without outside interpretation, what eminent authorities said about subjects in which the readers are especially interested.

See HUME, page 7, column 4

STAYING AT THE GAYETY: Rosemary Kuhlmann, as the consulate secretary, and Russell George, as the heroine's husband, in "The Consul," which remains on the Gayety stage for a second week starting tomorrow night

Gayety Holding 'The Consul' For Christmas Week Run

RISKING the traditional shopping - wrapping - mailing opposition of the pre-Christmas week, "The Consul" will remain for a second week at the Gayety starting tomorrow night.

While the music drama is not a cheerful one and serves to reflect the world's sores, it does so in a triumphantly moving fashion. The leading role is magnificently sung and acted by Patricia Neway, who shares the role with Bruni Falcon, an equally gifted soprano, who sings the part at both Saturday performances.

More theater news on Page 4L

The story concerns a young woman who seeks to get consular permission to move her family outside the borders of a police state into freedom. Her husband has been working against the authorities and all their efforts are doomed to failure.

Gian-Carlo Menotti wrote and composed the work, achieving even more acclaim than with his previous "The Medium" and "The Telephone." His skill at telling an interesting story in moving words and fitting music has suggested new paths for the American music drama.

Marie Powers, who created "The Medium" has a lesser but far more appealing role as the heroine's mother-in-law. To her is assigned a lullaby of charming melody, which she sings with her accustomed artistry.

Others in the cast include Norman Kelley, Russell George, Leon Lishner, Rosemary Kuhlmann, David Aiken, Maria Marlo, Maria Andreassi, Elinor Warren and Francis Monachino. Evan Whallon, jr., conducts the orchestra. Menotti did the staging.

PRE-PAN: Jean Arthur made "The Lady Takes a Chance" with John Wayne several years before becoming a Gotham stage hit in "Peter Pan." Keith's revives the comedy next Wednesday on a bill with Cary Grant's "Mr. Lucky"

Arnold Next at Gayety In 'Apple of His Eye'

After a summer theater tour in the part, screen star Edward Arnold will start a Nation-wide tour in "Apple of His Eye" at the Gayety Theater a week from Tuesday night. The Washington run will be for two weeks.

Frances Waller, Katherine Squire, Fred Sherman, George Mitchell, Mary Beth Fitzpatrick and Michael Sivy will appear in support of the star, remembered in Washington from his days as leading man of the National Players.

Christmas Matinee Slated at Hyattsville

A toy or canned food will be admission to the special Christmas cheer matinee to be held Wednesday at 4 p. m. at the Hyattsville Theater under auspices of the Sidney Lust Theaters and the Christmas Bureau of Prince Georges County.

Proceeds will be distributed to needy families of the county. "Shaggy," a dog story in Cinecolor, and two color cartoons will be on the bill.

In Wonderland

'Alice' Starts Tomorrow at Arena Stage

NUMEROUS STAGE versions have been written for "Alice in Wonderland," but when it came to staging one Arena-style, Arena Stage Director Edward Mangum and his cohorts had to prepare their own.

The production opens a holiday run tomorrow night at the central-staging theater, with virtually all the local company's artists in the cast.

"To work out our own version," Mangum states, "we had to keep in mind that each person has his favorite characters or pet sequence. And so many phrases and little poems have become as much a part of the language as Shakespeare's, we've had to think of that, too. So we've done our culling from both 'Wonderland' and 'Through the Looking Glass' in hopes that we'll please all Alice-fanciers."

Mary Mangum will be the Alice. George Grizzard is the White Rabbit, Henry Oliver has three parts: Tweedledum, Humpty Dumpty and a Card. Lester Rawlins will be the Mock Turtle and Barbara Cole the Knave of Hearts. Henry Danilowicz, the hit of "The Delectable Judge" and "She Stoops to Conquer," has two roles—the Caterpiller and the March Hare. Others in the company include Warner Schreiner, Jacqueline Dudley, Kip Conlon, Dick O'Neill, Harry Scully and Lois Copenhaven.

Major Theater Lists Card

"THE KING of the Golden River" will be presented Thursday, December 28, as the first in a series of plays to be presented here this winter by the Clare Tree Major Children's Theater of New York.

Seats for the plays are on sale at the Book Mart, 820 F st., which also is the agency for the Pollock Toy Theaters, whose American rights are controlled by the Children's Museum of Washington, local sponsors of Mrs. Major's players. Phone reservations at District 8143.

Gifts for Theatergoers

On the rare side is Percy MacKay's "The Mystery of Hamlet, King of Denmark, or What We Will." This is an abstruse and original work by the aged poet, originally published at $100 and now reprinted in off-set by a specially organized firm, Bond Wheelwright, for $6.50. It was given a special performance at Pasadena several seasons ago with the New York Times' Brooks Atkinson going out to report on what he called "logical contributions to a fascinating legend."

ALSO on the Shakespearean scene is a surprisingly readable and scholarly study by Henry N. Paul, "The Royal Play of Macbeth." Dr. Paul is a Philadelphia lawyer who devoted a lifetime of study to the play and the detail and ideas he comes up with are remarkably stimulating (MacMillan, $6.)

The year brought several Shakespearean studies, the freshest of which was surely Marchette Chute's "Shakespeare of London," a Book-of-the-Month selection that got around (Dutton, $4.)

Nor would a list of the theater books of the year in which Bernard Shaw died be complete without the latest Shaviana. Next year will bring a half-dozen at least, but already Hesketh Pearson is out with a P.S. to his now-standard "G. B. S. A Full-Length Portrait." This one, "G. B. S. A Postscript," (Harper $2.75) is to some extent merely a justification of some of his arguments with Shaw, but it does contain intimate glimpses of the dramatist's final years.

GRAPES OF THE SOUTH: Sylvana Mangano has scored one of the hits of the year in Italy's "Bitter Rice," now in its fifth week at the Dupont. Her next picture will be about an Italian Robin Hood in "Il Bandito Musolino," nothing to do with the late duce

Ballet Film Due at Plaza

A BRITISH FILM made especially for children and first shown in America last fall at the Plaza will have its first showings for the general public this week at the same theater.

The picture is "The Little Ballerina," a story of the Sadlers Wells ballet company featuring the dancing of Margot Fonteyn. The J. Arthur Rank organization created this especially for child audiences, but its success at several Saturday morning showings for children convinced Plaza Owner Sam Roth that his adult audiences would be interested in seeing it.

"The Little Ballerina" will be shown with two other films about the dance, the Col. de Basil Ballet Russe in "Swan Lake," and a revival of the recent Sadlers Wells short recently seen at the Plaza.

This ballet bill will open next Friday morning, with special morning showings Christmas Eve for children from local orphanages.

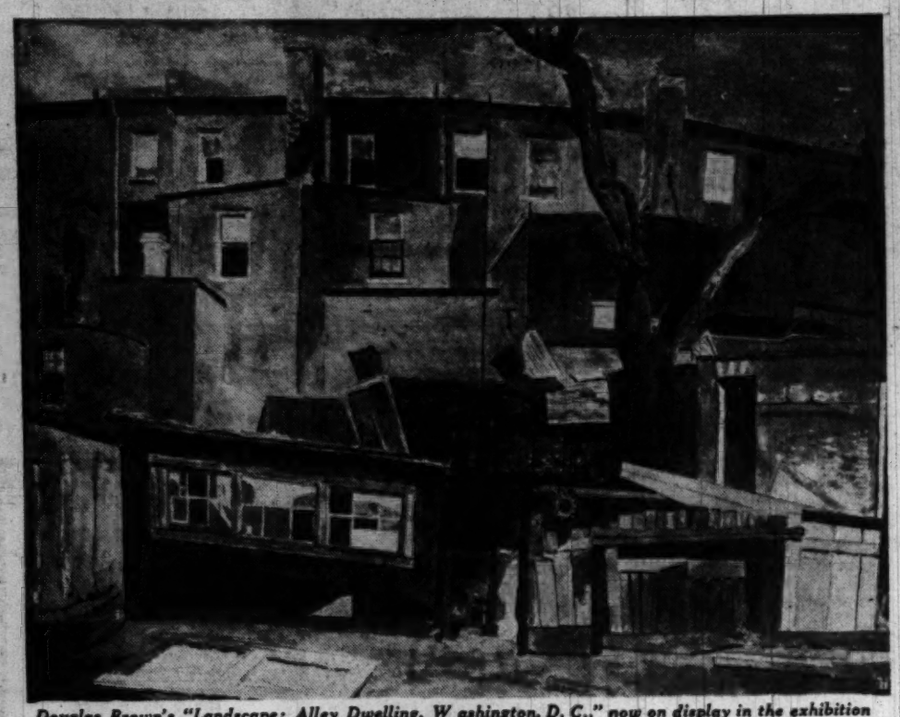
Two Exhibitions

About Prints and Water Colors



Douglas Brown's "Landscape: Alley Dwelling, W ashington, D. C.," now on display in the exhibition of the Washington Water Color Club at the United States National Museum

By Jane Watson Crane

THE BRIGHTEST new show in town is by a Philadelphia architect, Albert Bendiner, who also has a reputation as a printmaker. The exhibit is at the headquarters of the American Institute of Architects until December 28. It includes a series of sketches of music makers in action, several studies of the opera in full swing, and a miscellany of lithographs, some of which are already well known and all of which are bound to be enjoyed by any spectator with a sense of humor.

Bendiner was at one time staff cartoonist for the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin. He is at present president of the Philadelphia chapter of the AIA, spends most of his time working at his profession, but still turns out drawings, prints and water colors whenever occasion permits. The informal character of most of his works makes their landing places the more amusing by comparison.

Take, for example, his "Afternoon of a Middle Aged Faun," so clever a mockery of the aesthetic approach that it could give offense to no one. This print is owned by the Library of Congress and by the Louvre. A number of the Bendiner lithographs are in the Rosenwald collection (now part of the National Gallery of Art), the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, the Princeton Library, the Philadelphia Museum and so on.

While caricature plays a major role, it is by no means the whole story. In time, the prints shown range from the 'twenties ("Jerusalem," a brilliant study in pattern is chronologically the first) to the present ("Paris Herself Again" is the most recent). The most serious are two inclusions relating to the workings of the law ("Mouthpiece" and "Sweet Innocence"). Here is effective satire in a great tradition.

THE WASHINGTON Water Color Club's Fifty-Fourth Annual, in the National Collection of Fine Arts at the Smithsonian, is the best of these exhibits that we have seen. It benefits by good hanging and a more restrictive selection policy which has resulted in fewer entries than usual and more breathing space for each one shown. The choices were made by the club's executive committee, the awards by a single juror—the painter, Herman Maril, who is on the faculty of the University of Maryland.

The outstanding virtue of the award winners is good design. This is as true of the linoleum cut in the print section by Ralph Della-Volpe (a work which looks simple at first glance, but in fact has a great deal to it) as it is of the paintings by Bose, Boyle, Brown and Maxwell, all of which were among those singled out for special prizes or mention.

The club's shows always attract entries from such veterans of the field as Eliot O'Hara, Henry Gasser and Frederic Whitaker. While a good majority of the paintings are by local artsts, there are a number from out-of-town. Members wish to stress the fact that these annuals are open to all artists throughout the country. Queried about the delicate matter of club members getting the ax, one of their number assured me that they did indeed, membership being no sure passport to a place on the wall. However, despite the inclusion of nationally known water colorists, the exhibit falls short of the mark set by the country's major displays in this field.

Among the prize winners, we were particularly attracted to the work of Douglas Brown and John R. Maxwell, the latter one of the few deriving mainly from gouache. Our personal choice is "April From Sugar Loaf Mountain" by Fritzi Morrison, a delicate impression which reveals the character of the medium in its purest aspects. Other works to which we should like to give special mention are Clara Saunders' "Mademoiselle from Abbeville," a sensitive portrait study, Kenneth Stubbs' "Olive Trees," Peter Blanc's "Nude," Belisario Contreras' "Ruins," Tom Lias' "Spatial Equilibrium," Edward Rosenfeld's "The Falls," and Frances McQuillin's "Spring Plucking."

THERE IS NOT MUCH to be said for the loan exhibit of drawings from the Durlacher galleries shown at American University, but the one-man show of oils by Ken Noland, a young painter who studied with Josef Albers and is now associated with the Insitute of Contemporary Arts, is eminently worthwhile. The idiom is familiar, to the point of being stereotyped. What gives the group character is an unusually good sense of color and design.

GEORGE WASHINGTON University Library has an exhibition of paintings and drawings by Atanas Tasev, a European-born artist recently arrived in this country. It includes a number of straightforward portraits, ably done. There are also several landscapes well carried out in conventional style. Best of all, there are charming sketches of animals sketched in the Washington Zoo, a favorite haunt of the artist. It is a good show, revealing throughout a high standard of workmanship.

Eaton Paintings Up; Yule Gifts at Studio

Paintings from Quebec, Maine and Mexico by Merwyn Eaton, on loan from a New York gallery, are shown at the United Nations Club. Also on view are color lithographs by the same artist.

A group show of works suitable for Christmas gifts at the Studio Gallery, 4 Hillyer ct. nw. (in back of the Phillips Gallery) continues through the coming week.

The Music Box

The Messiah Is Set for Tomorrow

TOMORROW NIGHT brings the annual Constitution Hall performance of Handel's Messiah.

Paul Callaway will conduct the Washington and Cathedral Choral Societies in a performance that promises to surpass last year's brilliant account of the famous oratorio.

Soloists are Ruth Diehl, soprano, Irene Watson, contralto, Harold Haugh, tenor, and Edwin Steffe, bass. The orchestra will be drawn from the National Symphony with Richard Dirksen playing the organ.

THURSDAY EVENING in Lisner Auditorium, Jennie Tourel will sing Paul Hindemith's magnificent song cycle, Das Marienleben, the Life of the Virgin Mary. The poems for these fifteen songs are by Rainer Maria Rilke.

Tourel is famous for her impressive revival of this cycle two years ago. Since then she has sung it frequently across this country and in Europe where she sang it last summer at the Edinburgh Festival.

Her performance on Thursday is her first public presentation of the songs in Washington. She is singing them this afternoon in a Dumbarton Oaks recital. It is a rare opportunity to hear such high art.

THE AGRICULTURE Choristers, directed by Richard Dirksen, are planning a performance of Handel's Acis and Galatea. Auditions for principals and chorus members are being held on Wednesday evenings from 5:30 to 6, in the Jefferson Auditorium in the South Agriculture Building.

In conjunction with the coming convention of the Music Teachers' National Association, December 28, 29, and 30, at the Shoreham, two vocal clinics will be held.

Those interested in acting as guinea pigs or demonstrators for four eminent vocal authorities should get in touch with Mme. Gilderoy Scott, Falls Church 3329. Applicants should be prepared with an aria or foreign language song, and a song in English. The clinics are set for 9:30 to 11:30 on the mornings of December 29 and 30.

L. to R.: Harold Haugh, tenor; Ruth Diehl, soprano, and Edwin Steffe, bass, soloists tomorrow under Paul Calloway, in the Washington and Cathedral Choral Societies performance of Handel's Messiah in Constitution Hall

Eddie (WTOP) Gallaher ON RECORDS

MY HEART CRIES FOR YOU—Guy Mitchell-Mitch Miller, Columbia: If at first you don't succeed, try, try again . . . under another name. At least, that's what one young singer did. First he sang with Carmen Cavallero's Orchestra under his original Yugoslavian name, Al Cernack. Then King records decided he should be featured as a solo artist on their label, and he became Al Grant. Now he belongs to Columbia Records and seems headed for big things at last, under the name of Guy Mitchell. Al Cernack, Al Grant, Guy Mitchell, they're all the same person. And they all sing well, too.

Strangely enough, the song which is boosting Guy Mitchell to fame affords another example of name switching. "My Heart Cries for You" was actually written by Percy Faith, the eminent musical conductor.

Percy is a modest sort of fellow and, after finishing the melody which should become a last-minute major hit of 1950, he thought so little of it that he decided not to attach his name to the composition. Instead he coined the name "Peter Mars," a combination of the two Faith children, Peter, aged 13, and Marilyn, a young lady of 19.

Just to make matters complete, the song was originally titled "Please Come Back to Me," these being the last five words of the chorus. This, too, was changed to a title taken from the first five words of the chorus, "My Heart Cries for You."

PERCY FAITH, astute musician that he is, knew what he was doing in creating "My Heart Cries for You." At the time he sat down to write the melody, "Goodnight, Irene" was the top song hit of the day. And "Goodnight, Irene" differed from most popular songs in one respect which probably would not be noticed by an ordinary observer, but which was as apparent to a professional musician as the unbroken nose on Paul Hume's face.

Most songs consist of a verse and a chorus, but the verse is rarely if ever played. I'm sure you're familiar with the refrain which the chorus of "La Vie En Rose" or "Tennessee Waltz," for example, but I doubt if you've ever heard the verse. "Goodnight, Irene" was different. Starting with "Last Saturday night I got married" it consisted of several verses, each of which was invariably played along with the short chorus which gave the song its title.

"My Heart Cries for You," a wholly original composition, borrows this feature of a verse which is an integral part of the song, it being the portion which begins, "If you're in Arizona I'll follow you."

I must place one further qualification on the originality of the number. Just to make sure that his verse was a good one, Percy Faith used a theme from an ancient French composition which is said to have been written by Marie Antoinette.

Eddie Gallaher is heard on WTOP every day except Sunday on the Sundial, 7:45 to 9 a. m.; Moondial, 11:30 p. m. to 12:30 a. m.

Paul Hume's record column and the art and music calendars are on Page 7-L.

Symphony Greets Yuletide Today

Today the National Symphony plays its annual Christmas concert. The Washington-Lee Choir and its noted director, Miss Florence Booker, will join the orchestra. John Walser, baritone, and Sylvia Meyer, harpist, are added soloists. The afternoon opens with the Nutcracker Suite and will end with audience, chorus and orchestra singing familiar carols.

Bach, Beethoven and Brahms—magic names in music, come to the symphony's Wednesday series this week.

Howard Mitchell will conduct the third suite of Bach—the one with the famous Air for the G String. He follows this with the fourth symphony of Beethoven.

As a Bachelor, He's Eligible

BARRY HAS QUITE a sense of humor about himself. Disparaging another successful producer for using two old ideas he'd picked up from others, he suddenly broke into a grin: "I use four old ideas, myself." He admits there are no really new ideas, just new and better ways to use them. "I don't claim a copyright on children, I just present them differently," he explains. The show which uses small fry to give advice to troubled juveniles, their parents and their parents' parents, was inspired when Barry overheard some before-air-time chatter between Uncle Don at WOR and the youngsters who had come to watch the show. "The best part of the show was going on out in the hall before air time, so I put it on the air," Barry explains.

The show made Life magazine's cover, practically every newspaper in the land, went from local show to Mutual network—all within four weeks of its start. That year "Juvenile Jury" copped every single award for best new show of the year.

"Life Begins at 80" got its start when Barry read in a little newspaper filler that there were a million persons over 80 years of age living in the United States.

THE OCTOGENARIAN panel members, like the little ones, are completely uninhibited. In fact 85-year-old Mrs. Georgianna Carhart got the TV show banned in Boston after the first telecast by telling a risque story. It became a cause celebre in the Boston papers, and finally was put back on the air.

On the whole, his guileless charges have seldom embarrassed Barry. He remembers one time when a Juvenile Juryman of tender years created some tension on tour by addressing a mayor as "governor." Seemed the old party had thrown his hat in the gubernatorial ring every which way except officially, but protested disinterest all the time.

Barry got into this nice cushy radio-TV deal the long way around. Son of a handkerchief manufacturer, he acted as a traveling handkerchief salesman, an accountant and other oddments for his father and became a junior executive in a dress chain before he finally saw an out. Northwestern University was advertising a summer course in radio in cooperation with NBC in Chicago. Barry grabbed a little learnin' out there, told a Trenton, N. J., station he'd been "with NBC" in Chicago and grabbed plenty of experience in Trenton. That led him to WOR in New York.

If you really have your eye on Bachelor Barry, step lively. He's been rumored courting Singer Gigi Durston and Actress Eva Gabor. Actually he's already engaged—he and Fonda Ruby Plotkin of the "Juvenile Jury" panel have a marriage agreement effective 15 years from now. It was signed Wednesday when the Jury was here for the National Press Club's father and daughter banquet. But what's a little man-snatching among girls when there's $100,000 a year involved?

Address proposals to Jack Barry c/o NBC, ABC or Mutual. For the moment he happens not to have a show on CBS.

RADIO STATIONS which also own TV stations are naturally somewhat reluctant to get involved in round-table discussions about color TV since each station has a pretty firmly established opinion. But WWDC, having no TV station to worry about, gladly gives time to the subject.

Tonight's "District Rountable" at 10 p. m. will include a discussion of that touchy subject by Senator Edwin C. Johnson, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, who has taken a decided interest in the situation; Sol Taishoff, editor and publisher of Broadcasting Magazine, and Henry G. Fisher, radio and TV attorney and editor of "Pike and Fischer's Radio Regulations."

High point of eligibility about Jack Barry is probably his income of $100,000 or thereabouts a year. But income tax time makes a snarling wreck of him, which might make him hard to have around the house. Any takers?

Ginny Simms . . . has her own show on ABC-WMAL Sundays at 10 p. m.

Crosby Boys Join Dad Wednesday

Bing Crosby's four sons, Gary, Philip, Dennis and Lindsay, are guests on the holiday broadcast of WTOP's "Bing Crosby Show", Wednesday, 9:30 p. m. in a program of varied Yuletide song favorites and a skit which purportedly takes place in the Crosby home on Christmas eve.

Traditionally, Crosby opens the show with "Adeste Fideles," sung in Latin and English. Crosby and his oldest son, Gary, are teamed in "Jingle Bells" and "That Christmas Feeling". The twins, Philip and Dennis, offer "The Snowman". Crosby's youngest, Lindsay, is featured in "I'd Like to Hitch a Ride With Santa Claus". Bing follows with "White Christmas" and closes with "Silent Night".

Grand Ole Opry Coming New Year's

Grand Ole Opry, the popular hillbilly radio standby from Nashville, Tenn's. WSM, will take over the National Guard Armory on New Year's Eve for a party from 9 until 2 p. m. Added attractions will be Ralph Case and Don Patton calling for the Tennessee Square Dancers, the Swing Boys and Connie B. Gay, whose "Radio Ranch" is a WARL, Arlington, Va., feature.

Among the Grand Ole Opry notables on hand will be Minnie Pearl, Red Foley, Rod Brasfield, the Cumberland Valley Boys and the Jordanaires. Reservations at Owens 7666 or Owens 4142.

Olsen and Johnson Taking Week Off

The Olsen and Johnson revue, "Pardon Our French," will close down during the pre-Christmas lull and reopen for business the afternoon of December 24.

"The Golden State," by Sam Spewack and the 250-year-old comedy, "The Relapse," closed on Broadway last night after brief engagements, both failing to make the grade.

There is a single opening scheduled for next week. This is "Out of This World," the new musical comedy with Cole Porter songs. Charlotte Greenwood is the star, returning to Broadway after an absence of 22 years.—(U.P.)

7 Bowl Games Set for Radio

NEW YORK (AP).—Seven of the year-end Bowl football games will be available on the four radio networks, as now scheduled. In television no direct network relays have been announced, but all except one of the contests will take place in areas where regional or local TV facilities are functioning.

The broadcasts are divided between two days, the last Saturday of the year and the first day of the next. MBS, which is doing three Bowls, will have the Saturday events, the North-South College All-Stars at Montgomery, Ala., followed by the East-West game at San Francisco.

The New Year's schedule will run this way: Cotton Bowl at Dallas on NBC, Orange at Miami, Fla., and Rose at Pasadena, Calif., on CBS, Sugar at New Orleans on ABC and 'Gator at Jacksonville, Fla., on MBS.

As to television, a Pacific Coast three-city hookup of San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego is expected to have two games, Saturday's East-West and the New Year's Rose Bowl. Television facilities are available for local pickups of the games at Dallas, Miami, New Orleans and Jacksonville. Any network handling will be on the basis of filmed summaries transmitted later.

America's Town Meeting, ABC forum which a year ago cut from an hour to half-hour, is going back to a longer schedule in its first 1951 broadcast. The shorter form didn't work out as hoped. The extra time will be added to give a 45-minute session and permit wider studio participation in the discussion

Miss Skinner to Open Here on January 8

Cornelia Otis Skinner will present a group of monodramas and sketches at the Gayety Theater during the week of January 8.

Apart from her international renown in this metier, the daughter of actor Otis Skinner is noted for such extracurricular work as an official of theaterical and veterans' committees and for her latest best-selling book of humor, "Nuts in May."

Guinness at Guild

Alexandria's Guild Theater, which lately has gone over to a policy of presenting imported films, today will start a three-day run of "A Run for Your Money," starring Alec Guinness as a garden editor assigned to show two Welsh miners on a prize-winning trip around London.

Paula Pace to Send Yule Greetings on Air

Paula Pace, 8-year-old daughter of the Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Frank Pace, jr., has been selected to represent the United States on the annual International Children's Christmas broadcast from 5:30 to 6 p.m. Friday over WMAL.

This is an annual ABC network broadcast and features children of foreign diplomats. Paula will give greetings from this country to children all over the world.

The broadcast will be done by WMAL from the Mayflower.

CBS 'Report' Summarizes Weeks News

"A Report to the Nation," described as "an unprecedented step in broadcasting," and as "one of the biggest adventures in news coverage that the Columbia Broadcasting System has yet essayed," made its debut as a weekly full-hour documentary Friday (WTOP, 9 p. m.). Future broadcasts will be heard at 10.

Offering an hour of "spoken history," "A Report to the Nation" will broadcast in both "live" and recorded form the actual voices and sounds of people and events in the world news, using a technique pioneered by Commentator Edward R. Murrow in collaboration with Producer Fred Friendly in the three "I Can Hear It Now" Columbia Record albums. The partnership of Murrow and Friendly in writing and producing the program will provide listeners in one hour weekly with a complete summary of the important news of the preceding seven days: the great speeches; press and radio comment on world affairs, theatrical, motion picture and musical happenings, sports news, the drama, humor and human interest, of big and little events.

The "talent" for "A Report to the Nation" will include statesmen, politicians, newspaper and radio columnists, headliners from the entertainment field—anyone, from leader to plain citizen, who has done something unusual or has something arresting to say. Whenever possible, the program will bring the newsmaker in person to the CBS microphone. Edited tapes, recorded out of the heat of the news here and abroad, will also be used.

CBS has said it was "scheduling 'A Report to the Nation' for a full hour every week in prime evening time when the largest listening audience is available. The program is being broadcast over the radio because we want to reach all the people we can. However, plans are also being drafted to put it on television later on. We feel that no time could be more appropriate for the debut of this program, to answer the challenge imposed upon radio by the crisis in international relations."

Two roundtables on the world in review, one radio and the other television, will be the CBS way of looking back on the last 12 months as a year-end feature. To do so it plans to bring to New York a half dozen or so of its overseas broadcasters to serve at the table under the guidance of commentator Edward R. Murrow.

Sam Levene . . . to be heard with Kirk Douglas and Vicki Cummings in "Boomerang!" tonight at 8:30 on WRC-NBC

Willis and Art Make Record

WWDC disc jockey Willis Conover and jazz pianist Art Tatum teamed up to transcribe a 15-minute program for the United States Treasury Department for distribution to 2800 radio stations throughout the Nation.

The program was part of the "Guest Star" series presented weekly by the Government agency.

Featured on the program were Tatum playing "My Heart Stood Still" and "How High The Moon" and comments by Conover on the jazz idiom.

The Art Tatum "side" is the second that Conover has done for the "Guest Star" series. The first, two months ago, was with Duke Ellington and his orchestra.

Conover and Tatum were signed for the Treasury Department show immediately after Tatum appeared as a guest artist on Conover's WWDC radio program.

Nate Colwell, a jazz enthusiast and chief of the Treasury Department's radio division, heard the program and phoned Tatum and Conover to come down to the department immediately to record.

TV Set Output Now Half That of Radio

NEW YORK (AP).—Reflecting the public figures for the year so far show television set production is running a little more than one-half the number of radio receivers manufactured. To be specific, the totals are: TV sets 6,529,615; radio sets 12,785,917.

However, with the tubes and other components required for a television receiver, the actual material used far outstrips radio. A TV set has an average of 20 tubes or so and multiple components to match. A radio receiver contains only around five tubes and not nearly so many other parts.

As to dollars and cents, television is way ahead. The total for the year is expected to be about $2,100,000,000 for TV against 700 million dollars for radio, or approximately three to one.

Philadelphia on Friday became the first city outside of New York to join in the public demonstrations of the CBS color television system.

Philadelphia's WCAU-TV, a CBS affiliate, is cooperating. The network says it intends to extend the demonstrations to other cities when facilities, including receivers, become available.

The Big Top, the CBS version of what a circus looks like on television, is getting its first sponsor. He will take over on January 27, when the program moves from 6:30 p. m. to 12 noon.

Opera Opens Today With 'Carmen' on TV

By Wayne Oliver

NEW YORK (AP).—Opera fans are in for their best season yet on television.

With the opening performance of the Metropolitan in New York already televised, probably a dozen or more operas will be offered on the networks during the winter and spring.

TIBBETT

The most ambitious plans for opera have been made by the National Broadcasting Co. Starting with "Carmen" this afternoon (Sunday), NBC-TV will present eight operas—double last season's production.

The Columbia Broadcasting System, which offered two television operas last season, has not yet announced definite plans for its operas, but says it hopes to have "a few" in the spring. It was indicated there would be more than last season's two performances.

Other plans for video opera include those of H.R.H. Television Features Corp., headed by Gustave Haenschen, who is known to millions of radio listeners as director of the orchestra on "Album of Familiar Music" and other shows. Haenschen and his associates are dickering with potential sponsors on a repertoire of 57 music dramas which he says is ready for television production.

ALL OPERAS will be especially produced for television and will be sung in English.

To old guard opera fans, opera in English is unthinkable. But there's a growing school in favor of translated versions—a group that includes Haenschen, Peter Harmen Adler, who directs NBC's operas, and Lawrence Tibbett, who collaborated in the production of "Traviata" and "Carmen" on CBS last season.

Tibbett long has contended that opera would become popular with the general public in this country if produced according to American stage traditions and sung in English. But he says the translations must be good ones.

HAENSCHEN SAYS the foreign language barrier is the main obstacle to be surmounted.

"There are English translations of all the standard operas but in almost every instance, literal translations, which sound strange to our ears and are unsingable," he says.

His organization commissioned youthful producer Paul Rosen to collect and prepare translations for its repertoire of operas and after two years, he says, "This collection is complete and satisfying in every respect."

"In every opera the drama is left intact, with the motivation and conflict entirely understandable and the English words poetic and lyrical," he adds.

BY CONTRAST, the American Broadcasting Co. for the past three seasons has televised the regular season-opening performance of the Metropolitan direct from the stage of the opera house. There were no translations and no special production for television.

However, many observers feel opera is much more effective on television when produced especially for the cameras than when picked up from the stage during regular performances.

'Little Women' Take Their Time

IN ORDER TO PRESENT Louisa May Alcott's "Little Women" with something like completeness, "Studio One" will devote two Monday nights to it. The first part, to be presented tonight, is subtitled "Meg's Story," and will star Mary Sinclair. The second part, "Jo's Story," will star Nancy Marschand. Also in the cast will be June Dayton who has appeared frequently at Olney Theater; Berry Kroeger, Una O'Conner, John Baragrey and Lois Hall. "Studio One" is seen Mondays at 10 on WTOP-TV.

DENNIS JAMES, WTTG's star of "Okay, Mother" (weekdays at 1 p. m.) celebrates his third anniversary as emcee on that show today.

"MRS. MIKE," the story of life in the Canadian wilds, will be presented tonight at 9:30 on WNBW with Barbara Britton and Glenn Langan.

Diana Lynn plays a Louisianna teenager of the early 1900's in "Down Bayou DuBac" tonight at 8 on WTOP-TV. Lon McCallister co-stars

Drama Series Has D. C. Premiere

"THE FIRST NIGHTER," a film series seen on the ABC-TV network, will be seen on WMAL-TV starting tonight at 8 when "Never Too Late to Mend" is presented. This story, starring Todd Slaughter and Marjorie Taylor, is all about a rich and conniving suitor and a poor but honest one. Justice, need we say, triumphs.

WARD

BAXTER WARD, one of Washington TV's handsomest men, is now doing a weekday five-minute newscast on WMAL-TV at 3:25. Ward has frequently substituted on the nightly "Telenews" on that station when Bryson Rash's duties as special events director and White House correspondent of ABC have called him away from Washington.

BILL LAWRENCE, young singer with the Arthur Godfrey morning radio show and his Wednesday night TV show (WTOP-TV, 8 p. m.), is back from a road tour and will appear tonight. He'll hit the road again soon and is due in Washington at the Capitol Theater January 11.

WENDY DREW plays Judge Peabody's daughter in "Village Green" tonight at 9 on WNBW.

"JOHNNY and Mr. Do Right," comic strip on WNBW weekdays at 5, is getting the nod from educators.

feature. O'Morrison is also taking over the radio role of Wild, when the radio series switches to CBS (WTOP) January 7. Currently the show is on NBC (WRC) with George Petrie in the lead.

O'Morrison played the second lead in the movie version of "Dear Ruth," and has been in "Golden Gloves Story" and "Never Fear." Before the war O'Morrison was in a number of Orson Welles Broadway productions.

BRIAN DONLEVY and Gene Raymond star in "The Pharmacist's Mate" tonight at 9 on WMAL-TV. Written by Budd Schulberg from a news story which won the 1943 Pulitzer Prize for George Weller of the Chicago Daily News, it's the account of an emergency appendectomy performed in a submerged submarine by a pharmacist's mate. The program was filmed for TV aboard the U.S.S. Sawfish. The cast includes Harold Lloyd, jr. and Alan Hale, jr., as well as Darryl Hickman, Phil Shawn, Frank Jenks and Bill Mauch.

THE ROSCOE KARNS mystery series on WTTG (9:30 p. m. Fridays) is changing its name, as of tonight, to "Rocky King, Detective."

Murray Christmas on the Cuff

KEN MURRAY, star of his own Saturday night show on CBS (WTOP-TV, 8), is an actor in more ways than one. Just before Christmas in the early 30s, Murray found himself quite broke, with no bookings in sight and not even a promise of one. On the strength of his name—he's an 11-time headliner at vaudeville's Mecca, the Palace Theater—he was able to string along his hotel for accommodations for himself, his writer and his writer's wife.

MURRAY

But buying Christmas presents was a problem. If he didn't give presents as usual—something Murray considers a way of saying "Everything is nice and rosy"—his friends would suspect something was wrong. So he bought a thousand dollars' worth of gifts, charging them to his hotel bill. Out shopping to buy wrapping for these baubles, Murray thought he'd give one of the vaudeville circuits just one more quick call. Fortunately, a lead comic was needed in Boston in a hurry. While the writer's wife stayed in New York to keep the hotel from getting suspicious, Murray and his writer went to Boston and laid 'em in the aisles. The circuit booked him for the rest of the season. Season's greetings to him, you might say.

Murray, by the way, is one of the most astonishing producers of all time. When everybody was sure vaudeville was dead indeed—long before TV revived it—Murray put together a bunch of acts as a revue called "Blackouts." Nobody figured it to run very long, but it ran from June, 1942, to August, 1949, in Hollywood, and then had a short run in New York. "Blackouts" holds the record for the longest-running production in the legitimate theater.

In 1947 Murray invested his own money in a novelty feature film called "Bill and Coo," starring 300 love birds. The industry predicted disaster, but the film won an Academy Award.

'Science Review' Has Wide Appeal

"THE JOHNS HOPKINS Science Review," seen Tuesdays at 8:30 p. m. on WTTG, is one of five programs recommended as having educational value for both elementary and high school students, by Dr. Harold C. Hunt, general superintendent of the Chicago schools. At college level, the professors and students both like it and send much fan mail. Requests for films of the show to use in teaching college science courses come in.

Some teachers write to thank the show for ideas. Sample: "I never thought of using puffed wheat bouncing in a jar to illustrate the action of electrons. It's so simple, clear and applicable. Do you mind if I borrow the idea for my classroom demonstrations?" No, Johns Hopkins doesn't mind. It's the spirit of sharing the wealth of ideas that inspired the program.

Happy Returns Any Day Now

PETER LIND HAYES and his wife, Mary Healy, celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary last Thursday, the 14th, on their TV show (WNBW, 8:30.) It wasn't exactly on the nose, but it's hard to know what the nose is. Originally a big church wedding was planned for Christmas Day, invitations were printed and all was going well except that the bride and groom didn't want all the fuss. So they slipped away and were married quietly on December 17. Two days later, they were married in a church ceremony before members of the family. The invitations gathered dust. But the young Hayes couple had a bright idea. They printed "Null and Void, We're Already Married, Merry Christmas" across them and sent them as Christmas cards.

The David Nivens, originally scheduled as guests last week, will join Peter and Mary tonight.

Rumor Says the Stamp Clubs Will Soon Get Together

By William M. Stuart

RUMORS PERSIST that early in the New Year an effort will be made to combine all Washington philatelic organizations under one head. No plan has yet been revealed giving credence to such a rumor, as friends of the merger are remaining silent. There are two large stamp societies in Washington and quite a number of smaller clubs; however, the field is not overrun.

STUART

It is not an easy task to conduct a stamp club with success, which is obtained only when the spirit of cooperation exists in all activities of each and every club. One club desires to stress the auction program; another group seeks to favor the bourse; another requests that stamp exhibitions and philatelic discussions be given a prominent place in all programs and lastly, exchange of stamps has many friends.

To agree to any single program in any new movement would be a difficult task, for there would sure be a question of the practicability of one thing or another. It would be hard to so weld all interests as to make any new organization work smoothly. Philatelists who are backing the new movement should have interests welded closely, for rough edges are bound to appear as time goes on.

AN EIGHT-ORE postage due label, reddish mauve color, has been issued by Denmark. The label was placed on sale November 27 at the Postal Philatelic Agency.

Copies of the 1951 yearbook of the American Philatelic Society are being mailed to its members with the December American Philatelist. There are 11,546 members listed in 79 countries and the United States. Canada leads for membership outside the United States with 309 members.

AN AUCTION was held at the meeting of the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., Tuesday evening in Pythian Temple. Ernest Woodhouse acted as auctioneer. The members present went on record as disapproving of an issue of stamps for the United Nations. The Club will meet again Tuesday evening at Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw.

The Woodridge Stamp Club will meet tomorrow evening at 9 o'clock at the Woodridge Public Library, 2206 Rhode Island ave. A Christmas party will be held.

The General Services Administration Stamp Club will meet tomorrow at 5:30 p. m. at the General Service Building, 19th and E sts. nw. Herman Lichty, president of the Government Printing Stamp Club, will speak.

Works of Art Put on Display At W and L

LEXINGTON, Va.—A collection of 23 original works of art by great masters of the Renaissance went on public view at Washington and Lee University recently.

Described by Dr. Marion Junkin, head of the Washington and Lee fine arts program, as "one of the most important collections ever to be sent to the South," the loan comes from the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

Works of Rembrandt, Goya Lucas Cranach, Carlo Crivelli, and other well-known masters of the 15th and 16th centuries are hung in the browsing room of McCormick Library. Some of the paintings have been loaned to the university for as long as three years.

Unlike many loans arranged through the generosity of museums and collectors, through Dr. Junkin, the university was allowed to select the works included in the exhibit. Trying to achieve variety, Junkin's choices run the gamut from saints to sinners, from the beautiful to the grotesque. "We wanted something that would give our own students at Washington and Lee the most exciting show and the deepest aesthetic experience," said Junkin.

One of the important paintings to be hung in the show is a Rembrandt, "Portrait of an Admiral's Wife." From Goya's work is a portrait of Maria Louisa of Palma, Queen of Spain.

Representing the Flemish school is a Peter Huys fantastic in the manner of Bosch, "Temptation of St. Anthony," as well as a painting of "Christ Appearing to His Mother," identified only as the work of the Master of the Saint Ursula Legend, and a tempera and oil, "Virgin and Child." Dr. Junkin describes the latter work as a masterpiece in subtle tones by the Master of the Mansi Magdalen.

By Peter Brueghel, the Younger, sometimes called "Hellbrueghel," a painting entitled "Gamblers Quarreling" is one of the most exciting works in the loan.

"The Crucifixion" is depicted in tones of green and gray, a 15th Century German primitive, by an unknown artist.

Dog Show Will Feature Birds

The Christmas spirit of peace will be represented by an all-dove program on "Tailwaggers" at 6:45 p. m. Monday, December 25, over WMAL-TV. All types of pigeons and doves will be shown.

Whisky, Soda and Emperor, regular tailwaggers on the show, will be on hand to wish the viewers a Merry Christmas.

Tomorrow night, flying squirrels will be featured with a part-Spitz pup as give-away. Flying squirrels resemble bats, so don't tune in if you are afraid of bats.

New Song Debuts

A song written by Washington Postoffice Employe Gene Addison will be played tomorrow night on the Les Sand "Game Room" on WTTG at 7:30 p. m. Addison has won a local contest with another of his songs, and was featured on the network show, "Songs for Sale."

Music Books for Christmas

There have been far too few such books of general interest in music. This is a beautifully made book, one any lover of music or of good writing will want.

SO OFTEN I am asked to recommend a good general encyclopedia of fairly universal musical coverage. In such instances I prefer to tell people about the International Cyclopedia of Music and Musicians, edited by Oscar Thompson, and published by Dodd, Mead & Co.

For breadth of subject matter, absence of overtechnical presentation, and general usefulness and accuracy, this is still my favorite.

FOR THE real student of music and the practicing musician, the Harvard Dictionary of Music, edited by Willi Apel, and published by Harvard University, is the Bible. It is astonishing how much can be found in this seemingly modest-sized volume.

On the lighter side, and for the opera lover, Farrar, Straus & Co. have just put out Mary Ellis Peltz's "Behind the Gold Curtain," subtitled the story of the Metropolitan Opera, 1883-1950.

No volume of 96 pages, with numerous illustrations can pretend to be so lengthy a story. And the book is actually another way to add to the funds of the Opera Guild. But it has some pictures of interest, and opera lovers may well want to add it to their collection.

I am much amused by one line in the book: "Marjorie Lawrence sang the first lines in French, fresh from the Paris stage."

Even in Paris, and in French, the first lines allotted to Brunnhilde in Die Walkure are, "Ho-yo-to-ho, ho-yo-to-ho, yo-ho, yo-ho, ho-yo-to-ho," and so on, for at least three or four pages in the score. French, eh?

AND MANY thousands who have loved Fritz Kreisler with that unique devotion Kreisler has commanded for a half century in this country and Europe, will want his biography recently published by Macmillan. Written by Louis Lochner, the book is a complete and graphic account of "the fiddler" as Mrs. Kreisler calls her great husband.

Kreisler has faded from public sight in recent years. His name is not heard now as often as that of Heifetz, Francescatti, Milstein, even Elman. But there are people throughout the world who will tell you that there never was violin playing that did to them precisely what Kreisler's playing did. For these and many others, you will want this book.

FINALLY a book we have not yet reviewed, but which to hordes of people will represent the spirit of music at Christmas and through the year as nothing else can: The Victor Book of Ballets and Ballet Music, published by Simon & Schuster, written by Robert Lawrence. Sounds good.

TV Hobbles The Hartmans

NEW YORK, (AP). — In the opinion of many viewers the comedy team of Grace and Paul Hartman has plenty of ability as television talent, but the adaptation of their Broadway musical, "Tickets Please," for the camera did not permit them to display it to the fullest extent. The show seemed just too sketchy, possibly abetted by commercial announcements inserted too abruptly.

It was the Hartmans' first appearance in the NBC-TV comedy hour, but not the first time on TV. The hour's time alloted for the telecast necessitated a number of cuts in the original "Tickets Please," no doubt contributing to the overall effect of an act by act stage presentation rather than a well-blended TV show.

Also new to video is an early Sunday night dramatic series on CBS-TV, produced in Hollywood and relayed from films. Quality of the film reproduction was good, but still not up to a live show. However, this was largely overcome by the type of drama presented, a pleasing story about college exams in which Victor Jory played the part of a professor.

Christmas Gift Suggestions To Be Had at Disk Counters

WANT SOME gift suggestions for records that seem especially made for Christmas giving?

Here are a few, mostly recent, that ought to be just right for various friends and family recipients. They are recommended because each one, in its field, is outstanding, and they are all outstanding recordings. All listings here are for 33 1-3 r.p.m. long playing disks.

For youngsters: Peter Pan. The Broadway cast headed by Jean Arthur, Boris Karloff, and all the rest with chorus, orchestra, music by Leonard Bernstein. Columbia 4312. $4.85.

Slightly older children: Ravel: L'enfant et les sortileges. Cast of Paris Opera Comique. This is the only item I hold over from year to year. It is good for every age from five or six up. Columbia 4153. $4.85.

BACH: Well Tempered Clavier. Wanda Landowska, harpischordist. Two records, presenting first sixteen preludes and fugues. Here is some of the world's greatest music, greatest playing, and greatest recording. It is for Bach lovers a necessity. For musical listeners, something they will place at the top of their collections. Victor LM 1017 and LM 1107, $5.45 each.

Bach: Prades Festival. The ten 12-inch disks containing almost all of the great Bach Festival conducted by Pablo Casals last summer are now available.

At present they are for sale only in complete sets, at $50 per set. There are only 1000 of these sets. At a later date they will be for sale in single disks. I have not yet heard them, but they contain playing not alone by Casals but with some of the world's finest artists as well. Columbia ML 4345-4354. $50.

Opera lovers: Verdi: Rigoletto. The "complete" version on Victor, with its sumptuous production and recording. Leonard Warren, Jan Peerce, Erna Berger, and the RCA Victor Chorale. LMX 6101. $15.55.

Children and adults again: Saint-Saens: Carnival of the Animals. Kostelanetz with orchestra, two pianos, cello, and Noel Coward reading verses of Ogden Nash. Don't miss giving yourself this for Christmas. Columbia ML 4355. $4.85.

HERE ARE MORE, all equally fine, some of which have not even been reviewed yet, but are tops as gifts:

Menotti: The Consul—complete, with Broadway cast. Decca DX 101. $10.70.

Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 1 in C Major. Gieseking, with Philharmonia Orchestra under Susskind. What a tremendous performance and recording. Columbia ML 4307. $4.85.

Strauss, Johann: Fledermaus excerpts. Met cast including all these: Melton, Peerce, Rise Stevens, Munsel, Merrill, and the RCA Victor Chorale, all under Reiner. This ought to be terrific—I haven't heard it yet. Victor LM 1114, $5.45.

Chopin: Mazurkas. Horowitz. We have needed these for some time. Victor LM 1109, $5.45.

VOICES OF FREEDOM. 1901-1950. Script by Sol Panitz, score by Emerson Meyers, with Chamber Chorus of Washington under Paul Callaway. ES (Educational Services 1) $5.95.

Here is a documentary record conceived, written, and produced in Washington. It is a credit to those who put it out. It presents actual voices of Bryan, Taft, Edison, Peary, Teddy Roosevelt, Wilson, Earhart, Will Rogers, FDR, and Truman.

It is bound together by a narrative read by Robert McCormick, and a choral score of freshness and vigor. I prefer the Friendly-Murrow type of disc noted above. I do not like the folksy approach McCormick gives his text, but Panitz wrote it that way. To me, the lines about Freedom are resonant but not substantial.

For one instance: "Edison dreamed and made the dreams come true—which is a privilege accorded only those who live under a free sky." History, arts, and letters, as well as the whole field of religion have too often proved that statement wrong.

Some of the statements chosen for recording are important and impressive. But my favorite, except for FDR's first inaugural, is Will Rogers' simple bite on politics. The choral singing is expert, the music nearly always apposite. HUME.

Sylvia Meyer, harpist with the National Symphony, is one of the orchestra's soloists this afternoon in its annual Christmas program

Three Artists Having Show

THE BARNETT-ADEN Gallery is showing until December 29 a group of lively paintings by three local artists, Jack Perlmutter, Richard Dempsey and Sam Herman. Perlmutter, an award winner in the current show in the National Collection of Fine Arts, has several dramatic canvases, including a study of the base of the Washington Monument that effectively dwarfs the approaching spectators in the foreground. It is calculated to be an eye-stopper to gallery visitors. Dempsey, it will be recalled, was one of the winners in last year's Corcoran Washington annual. His paintings here are mainly in the vein of abstraction, except for a portrait of his fellow artist, Lawrence. Herman's paintings are subjective and highly imaginative. The effect of the trio's exhibit is fresh and provocative, if somewhat uneven in performance.

Why was Felicity Attlee teaching English to these Italian children on the Riviera?

MYSTERY of the Prime Minister's Daughter!

EYEBROWS LIFTED RECENTLY on the Italian Riviera when pretty Felicity Attlee (left), 25, youngest daughter of Britain's Prime Minister, was reported living as an English teacher with the family of Enrico Stabile, Italian industrialist. The mystery thickened when another Felicity, also English (below, right), was reported doing the same thing with the same family.

Had the Prime Minister's daughter really taken a job? (Some sources claimed that Felicity had answered an advertisement for an English tutor in a London paper.)

If she had, who was that other Felicity (a chunky girl who stoutly refused to divulge her last name)?

Felicity Attlee smiled, refused interviews. Best solution to the "mystery": Felicity, bound by currency regulations, can spend only $140 abroad. So, like any other bright youngster, she looked for a job in exchange for a vacation. The other girl? Two tutors are better than one!

FELICITY'S hostess: Signora Enrico Stabile, wife of a wealthy Italian industrialist.

SECOND Felicity (last name unknown) also tutors Stabile children. No one knows why.

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

KENNETH KEYES, JR. . . . a man who came back

I Can Do Anything!

Polio has made a better man out of him

DISEASE almost scored a knockout over Kenneth Keyes, jr., when he was just getting started in life. But Keyes came back and today—at 31—he's a better man than ever.

Keyes had just gone to work in his father's real estate office when he was felled by polio. Yet right now, despite the fact that he can't use his arms or legs, he's a prosperous realtor, an engineer, an inventor, a designer and the author of a book ("How to Develop Your Thinking Ability," McGraw-Hill, $3.50).

The Keyes' drama began when he was struck down by illness shortly after leaving the Navy in 1946. For weeks he fought for his life and when he had won this battle he discovered he still had another one to fight. His arms and legs had been paralyzed for life.

Keyes' recovery was painfully slow. After months of agonizing effort he finally learned to prop himself into a sitting position with his elbows. Then he went to work in earnest.

How He Came Back

Within a year Keyes revolutionized his life and that of his family. He designed an electric wheelchair, a telephone that didn't require the use of hands and a bookstand that automatically flipped the pages of his books.

"One of my big worries, then, was lack of sleep," he recalls. "I couldn't turn over in bed and would lie awake all night. So I invented an electric mattress that flips me over automatically every two or three hours."

Keyes now works a full eight-hour day as a realtor, then comes home, plays with his children, helps his wife with dinner, repairs all the household machinery and writes until midnight.

"Although I can't walk any more," he says simply, "I'm a better man now than I was when I could!"

BRIDGEPORT citizens listen attentively as lecturers tell how to answer children about sex.

How one city finds a NEW approach to...

Early sex training: watching little boy in bath, Maureen Mackey, 4½, learns that sexes are different.

SEX EDUCATION

BY SID ROSS

BRIDGEPORT, Conn.

A COMPELLING new civic program in full swing here may be the solution to one of parents' most vexing problems: how to answer their children's questions about sex.

Already this program is teaching 1,000 parents how to meet—with tact and wisdom—the pressing questions all children ask.

Tomorrow, if other U.S. communities copy the progressive program of Bridgeport's Board of Education, millions more may feel competent—for the first time—to guide their own children through the delicate years of growing sexual awareness.

Bridgeport started by recognizing that no matter how well equipped schools may be to teach sex, the best instruction is given at home, by mothers and fathers.

Hence it has organized a series of six free, public lectures for parents on how to deal with the problem. The lectures, held in Klein Memorial Auditorium, are followed by question-and-answer periods. Each is recorded for possible use in future discussion groups.

Support is city-wide. Catholic, Protestant and Jewish churches are behind the program. So are P.T.A. groups. Radio plugs, 6,000 posters, news stories and word-of-mouth enthusiasm have brought crowds. Best of all, it has the backing of parents—like Douglas and Norma Mackey. (See next page.)

What are the "guideposts" to follow in sex education? Turn the page.

To teach your child sex, you must know him first

It's a good series, Bridgeport feels...

Bridgeport's man-in-the-street is keenly aware of his city's important campaign in the field of sex education. Here is a random sampling of opinion:

HOUSEWIFE

Mrs. Anna Waller, mother of seven: "I think the lectures are a very good thing. I don't like the idea of a total stranger telling my children about these things. Sex education should be taught in the home first."

TAXI DRIVER

Michael Serrone, father of two: "Kids have to know about it sooner or later. Teaching parents to instruct their own kids is a lot better than having kids find out the wrong way alone."

GROCER

Zoltan Sabo, father of two: "Something like this should have been started long ago. It would have saved a lot of grief for parents and kids both."

GAS STATION OPERATOR

Bruce O. Carlson, father of one: "I feel that there are some things about sex education that should be taught, and some not. But it should come from the home, and it's good for parents to have the knowledge."

BUSINESS WOMAN

Mrs. Ethel Namian, mother of three: "It's hard, very difficult, for most parents to talk to their children about things like sex. Children learn about these things anyway, but most of the time it's not from their parents. I'm going to try to go to some of these lectures. Some of the things I'll learn there might be of help to my children."

HOUSEWIFE

Mrs. Frances Deber, mother of four: "I attended the first three lectures and my husband and I will be there at the others. In the very first lecture, I learned things that already have helped me with two of my children!"

TO DOUGLAS MACKEY, who teaches physical education in a Bridgeport junior high school, and to Norma, his wife, childhood's awakening to sex is very real.

It is present right in their own modest, comfortable duplex house on High Ridge Drive. There it takes the form of regular and frequent questions posed by their two daughters: blonde Brenda, 8, and dark-haired Maureen, 4½.

Norma Mackey tries to meet their questions–and attitudes–squarely. Some samples (see also pictures at right):

- "Are all fat women going to have babies?" Brenda once asked her mother?
- "Why should one calf be black and white, and the other just white?" she inquired after watching a cow give birth to two calves.
- "Why are some babies boy babies and some girl babies?" Maureen wanted to know.
- "Why are women made different from men?" Brenda wondered.

Even small Maureen knows already that she will marry a boy, and that he won't be a relative.

Both girls laugh at stories about the "stork."

You Must Be Honest!

NORMA MACKEY feels keenly her duty to give right answers to her children's questions. "You have to be awfully cautious and honest about what you tell them, because one girl passes it on to the other," she says

Anxious as she is to give her girls the best possible instruction in sex, Norma Mackey has attended all three of the Board of Education lectures on sex education given so far. She was in the audience last Monday night to hear Louise Bates Ames, head of research at the famed Gesell Institute of Child Development of New Haven, speak candidly on "A developmental approach to problems of sex behavior in the child."

What she heard applied directly to Brenda and Maureen–and with equal directness to the sons and daughters of America who will become the husbands and wives of the next generation.

"Our goal," Miss Ames declared, "is to bring up men and women who will have happy and vigorous sex lives. It is not simply to keep children 'out of trouble.'

"Our customs and traditions about sex are very different from what we actually feel or do. We must face the facts and let our culture stop being so two-faced about sex, whether with young children, adolescents or adults."

The problem of sex education, she continued, is usually HOW and WHEN to offer sex knowledge to children. "We must grade the average ability of the child's readiness to know, understand and accept sex knowledge."

Here are her guideposts for parents:

- Study your child. Children's interest in sex develops predictably, but children differ among themselves. A simple answer is usually enough. Your best guide is your child's own questions.
- Talk calmly. A parent should never betray alarm, disapproval, or a sense that questions are "not nice." If neither parent can talk without embarrassment, find someone else to do it – a relative, a teacher, a doctor, or a book. Above all, don't evade your child's questions.
- Never force information on a child. Wait until you know he can understand and wants to know. Proper timing is important. Don't try to get sex education "over with" in one sitting.
- Never be shocked at what your child does. Lack of interest in sex is as serious as over-interest. Treat both as sympathetically as you would poor eyesight. Your own shock may hurt your child.
- Never alienate your child, especially as he or she approaches the teens. Scolding, coldness, or a sense of shame may drive him to seek answers –wrong answers, perhaps–elsewhere.
- Never concentrate simply on keeping your child "out of trouble." That is only half your job. Your full job is to give him a complete, gradually unrolling view of himself and how sex fits into the whole pattern of his life.

Two lecturers preceded Dr. Ames in the Bridgeport series – Dr. Frank J. O'Brien of the New York Board of Education, and Anna W. M. Wolf of New York's Child Study Association.

Sex Is Not a "Horrid Thing!"

STILL TO APPEAR are Aline B. Auerbach and Dr. Grace McLean Abbate, also of the Child Study Association, and Park Avenue psychiatrist Dr. Nathaniel Ross. All were invited to participate by attorney Paul H. Cullinan, Board of Education chairman whose efforts have been largely responsible for arranging the series.

Like most Bridgeport people (see column at left), Douglas and Norma Mackey feel that the lectures are deeply important.

"I want my children to grow up with a feeling that they can always come to me and get a truthful answer about sex just as about other things," says Norma. "I want them to believe that sex is beautiful, something that is creative and makes life go on–not a 'horrid' thing to be whispered about."

Bridgeport's program will surely help.

"PLAY NICELY, CHILDREN," Mrs. Mackey urges four-year-old Maureen and a little boy friend from neighborhood. Instead of being shocked and punishing sex curiosity, natural at this stage, she diverts it with toys, games.

ROUGH play with boys by Brenda is normal at 8, say experts, should be allowed.

BOY-GIRL signs of affection intrigue Brenda, make her stare. Mother explains.

The Mackeys apply lecture advice . . .

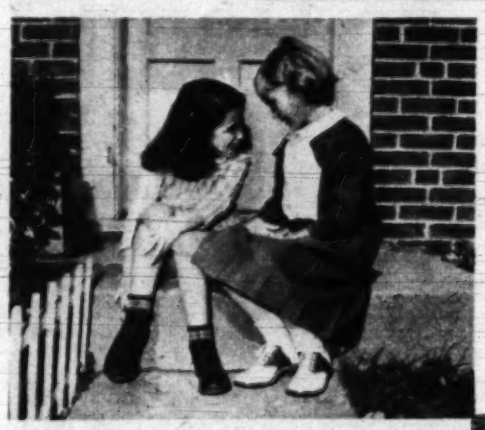
Rightly or wrongly, these are the solutions that in the particular cases of Maureen and Brenda seem to work.

Other mothers, recognizing the same signs in their own children are cautioned that different children may need entirely different answers.

Brenda, at the age of 8, has a very warm and loving interest in babies—not merely in sex as such. She enjoys playing "mother" and demands sensible answers about pregnancy.

Maureen, still satisfied with dolls, and just getting curious about boys, is more easily misled. Misleading either is dangerous – which is why Douglas and Norma Mackey share the responsibility of guiding both their daughters.



GIGGLING about daring words is recognized by Mrs. Mackey as a phase.

PREGNANT woman on street arouses Brenda's curiosity. She asks mother.

NURSING PUPPIES fascinate Maureen. Older neighbor explains this is how all babies feed. Brenda knows already.

MR. MACKEY helps Maureen understand sex by reading her books like attractive "Story of a Baby" by Marie Hall Ets.

How to Be Scared to Death!

MUNICH.

PEOPLE, it seems, are forever coming up with new ways of scaring themselves to death.

Apparently with this objective in mind, "flying autos" were introduced at a carnival here last month. The cars were attached to a track on a drum which was then set in violent motion. Result: reactions you see on these pages.

Actually the passengers were reasonably safe. Even when upside down they were held in their seats by centrifugal force—and straps. Nevertheless, faint-hearted riders sometimes collapse from sheer fright.

As car spins, woman screams in delight (or is it terror?)

Everyone shudders as cars whirl madly.

On downgrade, all you can do is hang on.

To the spectators it's best show on the midway.

9 A.M.: Army of early-arriving bargain-hunters starts to attack the well-stocked shelves of rummage sale.

Rummage Marathon

PASADENA, Calif.

TWICE A YEAR the women of Pasadena (1) scour the town for used household goods, (2) engage a hall and (3) put on what they believe is the world's biggest rummage sale.

Its purpose: to raise money for the welfare of the 100 boys in the California Junior Republic home. Its sponsors: the Women's Pasadena Auxiliary.

This year the sale brought out 10,000 bargain-hunters. Long before closing time the shelves and racks were stripped bare.

"THESE might come in handy," thinks lady carting off battered dress form, dress, and basket.

SHOES, at 15¢ a pair, were bought eagerly by ladies looking for super values. Some bought all they could carry or wear.

"IMAGINE!" says shopper, displaying bargain jewelry. Others look enviously.

3 P.M.: Bare racks are taken down to await next sale. 1,000 volunteers will hunt new stocks.

Youth begins to...

Build the Bridges

PEN PALS (l. to r.) Maria Bono, Norma Thomson, Renee Kirsch, fasten cards from overseas to "Friendship" Xmas Tree with cellophane tape.

BY EDWARD FALES

BOSTON

IN an office festooned with Christmas decorations here, a vast world force is beginning to take shape: the quiet little voices of kids in different countries talking things over!

Each day at 10 a.m., a mailman up-ends a U. S. mailbag on a battered desk in the office of the International Friendship League—letters from other kids to kids in America.

In fact, the league is a growing clearing house for boys and girls in 56 countries who want to make friends with one another through letters.

This Friendship League, cooperating with local groups in many cities, is gaining momentum. Already, in letters coming to American youngsters, you can read earnest words:

Hannelore Geissmann

▸ From the German town of Tinneberg, Holstein, 15-year-old Hannelore Geissmann (see photo) writes to an American girl:

DEAR GIRL: Many of my school friends have an American friend and so I write you hoping that we will also become friends. I think this is the best way to understand other countries when youth builds the bridges . . . I send you a photo of my confirmation. It is not pretty but I think you may get a conception of me. I would be very thankful if you write me. With love, HANNELORE GEISSMANN.

▸ And a boy ball-player in Japan writes to an American girl named Betty:

MY DEAR BETTY: I saw your genre sketches. I hope our friendship will grow by this letter . . . I like to travel and it will be wonderful to see you. Don't you think world friendship is a good thing? What lessons do you have? What games do you play?

▸ From a Brazilian boy:

DEAR NANCY: How do the people of your country feel about us? Answer this honestly and I promise I won't be angry no matter how bad the opinion.

▸ In a letter from the "American Zone" in the German town of Schluctern, Agnes Paulsen tells what the young people of Germany are thinking about today, and what some of their problems are:

Letters link youngsters of 56 countries in friendship . . .

DEAR LOUISE: . . . you must try to understand us and we Germans must try to learn to live in another way. Do not think that the German Youth is not ready to learn. It is not very easy—no, it is very difficult in a country where there is nothing, nothing. I believe if you hear the words, "Youth of Germany," you think of Hitler Youth. I hope you'll believe me when I tell you that I did not love Hitler . . . We did not know anything about other countries—where people choose their leader, and if he is no good they take a new one. We knew only bad things about other countries . . .

▸ A Greek boy wrote this touching letter:

DEAR AMERICAN: I am a Greek boy who desires with ardor to know better the manners and language of your country because I am admirer of it and I always announce with pride that my father had lived his life in your country, and had been an ardent supporter of it. Today he is not living, but I will do everything to continue his traces because I am his son . . .

Rysard Leszark

DEAR AMERICANS: I should want very much to correspond with a young boy or girl. I am 15 years old, am tall. My hair is bright, the eyes blue. I go with ski good, because the town in which I live is between high mountains. I like very much to read books . . .

▸ A boy in Michigan received this letter from T. Sitompoel, a boy in Sumatra:

DEAR ANDREW: Can you imagine what kind of a boy am I? I am a Batak boy, a native of Sumatra. My grandfather was a savage or a heathen. He had tasted human flesh, for at that period, Batak people were maneaters, but when he was 40 years old he became a Christian. Christianity was brought here in about 1840. So you understand that I am a grandson of a Christian and a Christian . . .

DEAR GRETCHEN: I am very glad to hear from you. I thank you very much for the chewing gum. We cannot buy it at all and we are very fond of it . . . I am collecting stamps. I have more than 300.

Els Renten

Letters across the sea gave Skippy Carter, a 16-year-old Marshfield, Mass., boy a chance to help a Dutch youngster. The boy wrote that he had developed a tubercular leg, which made the five-mile daily hike to school a grueling ordeal. Skippy decided to do something about it. He collected dimes from his school pals and bought a bicycle from a local hardware dealer, who sold it to Skippy at half price. An airline delivered the bike to the Dutch boy just in time for Christmas!

. . . These, then, are the voices of kids in other lands. What a tremendous force America could have if every American kid would write to boys and girls overseas, telling them the TRUE story of America!

● EDITOR'S NOTE: The International Friendship League is permanently established. Teachers, children and civic or church groups interested in its program can write the League at 40 Mount Vernon Street, Boston 8, Mass.

"M-m-m! Nothing Smells as Good as Coffee!"

Who wouldn't give out with an extra-sweet refrain of "Silent Night" when the reward's fragrant, steaming hot coffee. A-h-h-h, that tantalizing aroma! You can't mistake it!

"M-m-m! Nothing Tastes as Good as Coffee!"

Christmas time or any time—at home or in your favorite restaurant—rich, freshly-brewed coffee is a treat! Yet, with every meal you can enjoy it for practically a song.

"M-M-M... Nothing Satisfies Like Coffee!"

DO YOU KNOW?

It takes an average of 5 long years before a coffee tree matures and reaches normal production.

The average mature tree yields the equivalent of only 1½ pounds of roasted coffee annually.

About 3500 hand-picked coffee beans make 1 pound. Yet coffee, at home, costs just a few pennies a cup!

"SAVE OUT" stuffing from Christmas bird; roll in bacon, broil crisp.

TWO-TONE scrambled eggs: drop whole eggs into skillet; add milk.

CHRISTMAS MORNING is a gala occasion for all the family. Everyone wants to admire the tree; everyone wants to peek at at least one present, but everyone gets hungry, too, and it will be a long time before dinner is served! Last year we solved this problem by serving a buffet breakfast, and it worked out so well that we suggest you try it this year. It's fun!

For the assorted fruit juices you have a wide choice among the kinds that are canned or quick-frozen: citrus, prune, cranberry cocktail, nectars, etc. The cereal duet is a novel idea, with a nice contrast in texture. And recipes for the balance of the menu are at the right. Merry Christmas!

*Cereal Duo

Fill cereal dishes with hot, cooked cereal; top with crisp ready-to-serve cereal. Suggested combinations:

- Oatmeal topped with bite-size shredded wheat or wheat flakes
- Cooked whole wheat cereal topped with crisp rice or oat cereal
- Cooked farina topped with bran flakes, corn flakes or crunchy grapenuts.

*Two-Tone Scrambled Eggs

Drop eggs into buttered frying pan. Add 1 tablespoon milk for each egg. Season with salt and pepper. Set over low heat. When egg whites begin to cook, break yolks. Continue to cook slowly, stirring occasionally, until eggs are cooked through.

*Stuffed Bacon Rolls

Save out some bread stuffing used for turkey or goose for Christmas dinner. Roll about 1 tablespoon stuffing in each bacon strip. Secure with toothpicks. Broil until bacon is crisp, turning once.

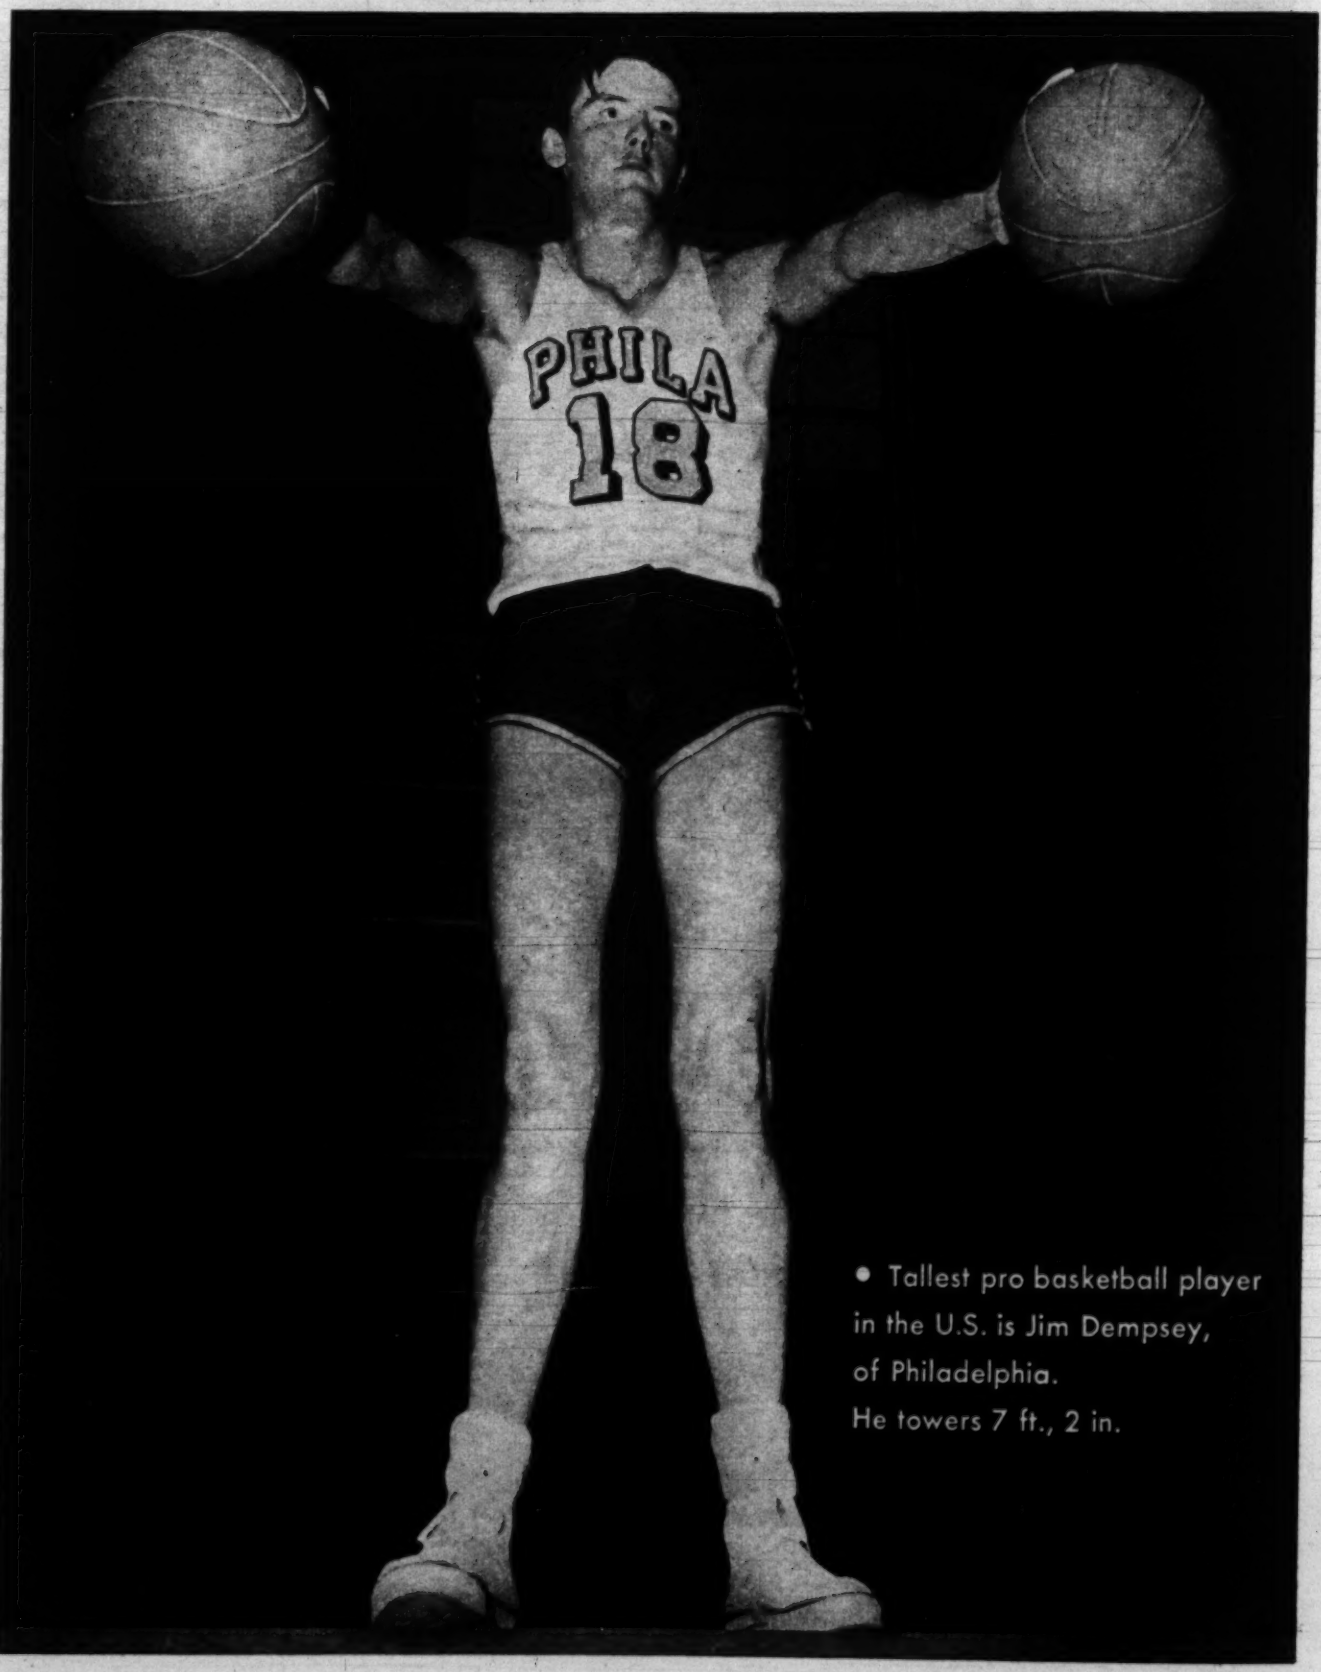
MEL ALLEN ASKS:

Has Basketball



• Tallest pro basketball player in the U.S. is Jim Dempsey, of Philadelphia. He towers 7 ft., 2 in.

SPORTSCASTER Mel Allen is best known for his baseball and football broadcasts but he has also played, watched and announced basketball games, beginning at the age of 12.

Gone Haywire?

The answer is "yes"—but the fans like it that way!

GALLOPING INFLATION has hit basketball scoring this season – and you don't have to be an economist to figure out why.

Actually, the trend began a number of years ago. As a result, the simple game that Dr. James Naismith started by hanging a couple of peach baskets at opposite ends of a gymnasium in 1891 now has become the nation's highest-scoring sport!

Last year Bob Zawoluk (see cover) of St. John's University in Brooklyn, scored 65 points in a single game. Bud King, of Morris-Harvey in West Virginia, scored 967 during the season. Twenty years ago an entire team would have settled for fewer points than these!

Is this really basketball–or just a numbers game?

Whatever it is, fans seem to like it. Court attendance last season climbed to a new high and enthusiasm mounted to hysterical levels. Yet coaches are skeptical.

They're afraid (a) that the sport's finesse will be lost in haywire attempts to roll up more and more points. And they think (b) that it's high time to put a lid on the basket.

How did the game get this way?

1. Rule changes helped. In 1925, The College of the City of New York beat Rutgers, 19 to 15, in a typical game of that era. Twenty-five years ago scores were low because there was no ten-second rule. (Today the attacking team must move the ball to the forecourt within ten seconds.) And there WAS a center jump after each field goal. With the elimination of the jump except at the start of the second half, scoring really began to zoom.

2. The speed-up started. Soon the patterns of play altered completely. No team had quicker success in running up adding-machine scores than Rhode Island State. In 1939 State's Rams beat Connecticut University by the whopping total of 102 to 81.

In the Rams' offense, a guard would take the ball off the enemy backboard and fire it the length of the court to a forward. The forward then would loop it into the basket–and the cycle would begin again.

It was simply a matter of getting the ball, shooting and scoring in the shortest possible time.

As Rhode Island prospered, other schools began to change their style of play. Western teams, stressing a whirlwind offense, came East and shocked coaches with their off-balance shooting and reckless play.

"BABE RUTH" of basketball is Minneapolis Lakers' George Mikan, voted best player in last 50 years. He's 6 ft., 10 in.

Hank Luisetti, of Stanford, dazzled fans with his one-handed push shots. De Paul's George Mikan became the most publicized player in the history of the sport. Yale's Tony Lavelli hung up an all-time college scoring record – and basketball attendance figures reached into the stratosphere.

It wasn't long before the old-fashioned, low-score games became as obsolete as mutton-chop whiskers.

3. Finally, the "goons" arrived. The day of the seven-foot basketball player dawned soon after scores started to shoot up.

There were few glandular freaks in the old days of basketball, but just before the war these huge and lumbering grotesques began to steal basketball headlines–and games.

Among them were players of real talent. Such giants as Mikan (6 feet, 10 inches) and Oklahoma A. and M.'s Bob Kurland (7 feet, 1 inch) are among the all-time greats. Others, like Philadelphia's Jim Dempsey (see picture at left) showed much promise. But many of them had limited ability and scored points because of height alone.

Basketball's rule-makers now prohibit goal-tending by a defensive team–another boost to tall men on offense. Last year Zawoluk scored 65 points against St. Peter's; Sherm White, of Long Island University, hit 63 against John Marshall; and Ray Druncan, of Rio Grande, reached into the clouds for a startling 87 points against St. Paul.

The Fans Want High Scores

Is anyone ever going to stop the tall men?

Phog Allen, outspoken coach at the University of Kansas, says "yes" –if officials raise the height of the baskets to 12 feet. Other suggestions: (1) that backboards be removed, (2) that the free-throw lane be widened and (3) that the ten-second rule be abolished.

In the midst of all this frenzied talk and wild scoring, there remains one team which practices old-fashioned basketball. At Oklahoma A. and M., Coach Hank Iba has had outstanding success teaching ball control and a shoot-only-when-you're sure-philosophy.

But many observers think Iba's idea is as outmoded as the Stanley Steamer. The fans, they say, pay their money to watch the ball go through the basket–as often as possible. That's the game they like!

Now...false teeth wearers eat corn, steak, apples!

Solve your loose-plate problem with a dentist's discovery that holds dentures tighter

AT LAST . . . you can keep dentures in place, really tight—with the application of a new dental adhesive formulated expressly to keep dental plates in tighter, longer.

This new adhesive—developed by a dentist—is letting thousands of false teeth wearers eat apples, steak, corn on the cob—foods they had to "pass up" before because of their loose and slipping plates.

The secret is simple. This new adhesive contains an ingredient that literally impedes the penetration of moisture—exerts maximum resistance to the fluids (saliva, coffee, other liquids) that weaken and "break down" the action of adhesives and cause dentures to work loose.

This new adhesive, Staze, is a homogeneous gel of a viscous, binding gum. It has a binding, "clinching" action. That's why it "takes hold" almost instantly.

Easy, pleasant to use. Get a tube of Staze at any drugstore.

"Undoubtedly," Homer's pal observed, "the script will call for you to be the male rival opposite the heroine. And sure as shooting, the last scene of the film will show the two of you walking arm and arm down the beach." "Very likely," Bigart nodded, "first because she's a beautiful babe, second because that's the only way to keep Marguerite from beating you to the radio truck to file the story." . . .

IT HAD TO COME. A New York curio shop, whose management is alive to the times, has this sign in its window: "Antique Television Cabinets."

ISN'T-SCIENCE-WONDERFUL DEPT: After exhaustive tests, a doctor named John H. Mitchell recently discovered that a patient's hives were caused by a strange malady – he was allergic to his mother-in-law . . .

SPEAKING of mothers-in-law, in Hollywood a year or so ago, Herb Stein insists, a big-shot movie executive promised his bride that he'd make her mother his secretary, an assignment to which the local white collar union agreed with great reluctance. Recently he divorced his wife, but his mother-in-law is still on the job. Union officials ruled that divorcing your secretary's daughter is no justifiable cause for dismissal . . .

AND HERE IS our idea of the height of pessimism. The family of a Broadway actress has such a low opinion of her talents, instead of changing her name –they changed theirs . . .

HOT ROLL MIX GOES HIGH HAT IN FROSTED WALNUT ROLLS!

1 pkg. yeast roll mix
2 tbsps. soft butter or margarine
¼ cup sugar
½ cup diced candied fruit-mix
1 cup coarsely chopped Diamond Walnuts

Prepare rolls as directed on package. Roll out on floured board to rectangle ¼-in. thick. Spread with butter; sprinkle with remaining ingredients. Roll up tightly and cut in 1-in. slices.

Arrange in wreath shape in 2 greased pie pans. Let rise and bake as directed on package. While warm, spread with this frosting: Mix 1 cup sifted confectioner's sugar, ¼ tsp. vanilla, 1 tbsp. cream. Decorate with plump Diamond Walnut halves. So pretty, so tasty—with walnuts inside and out. And the same trick works with any hot bread mix. Just add Diamond Walnuts to make it deliciously different!

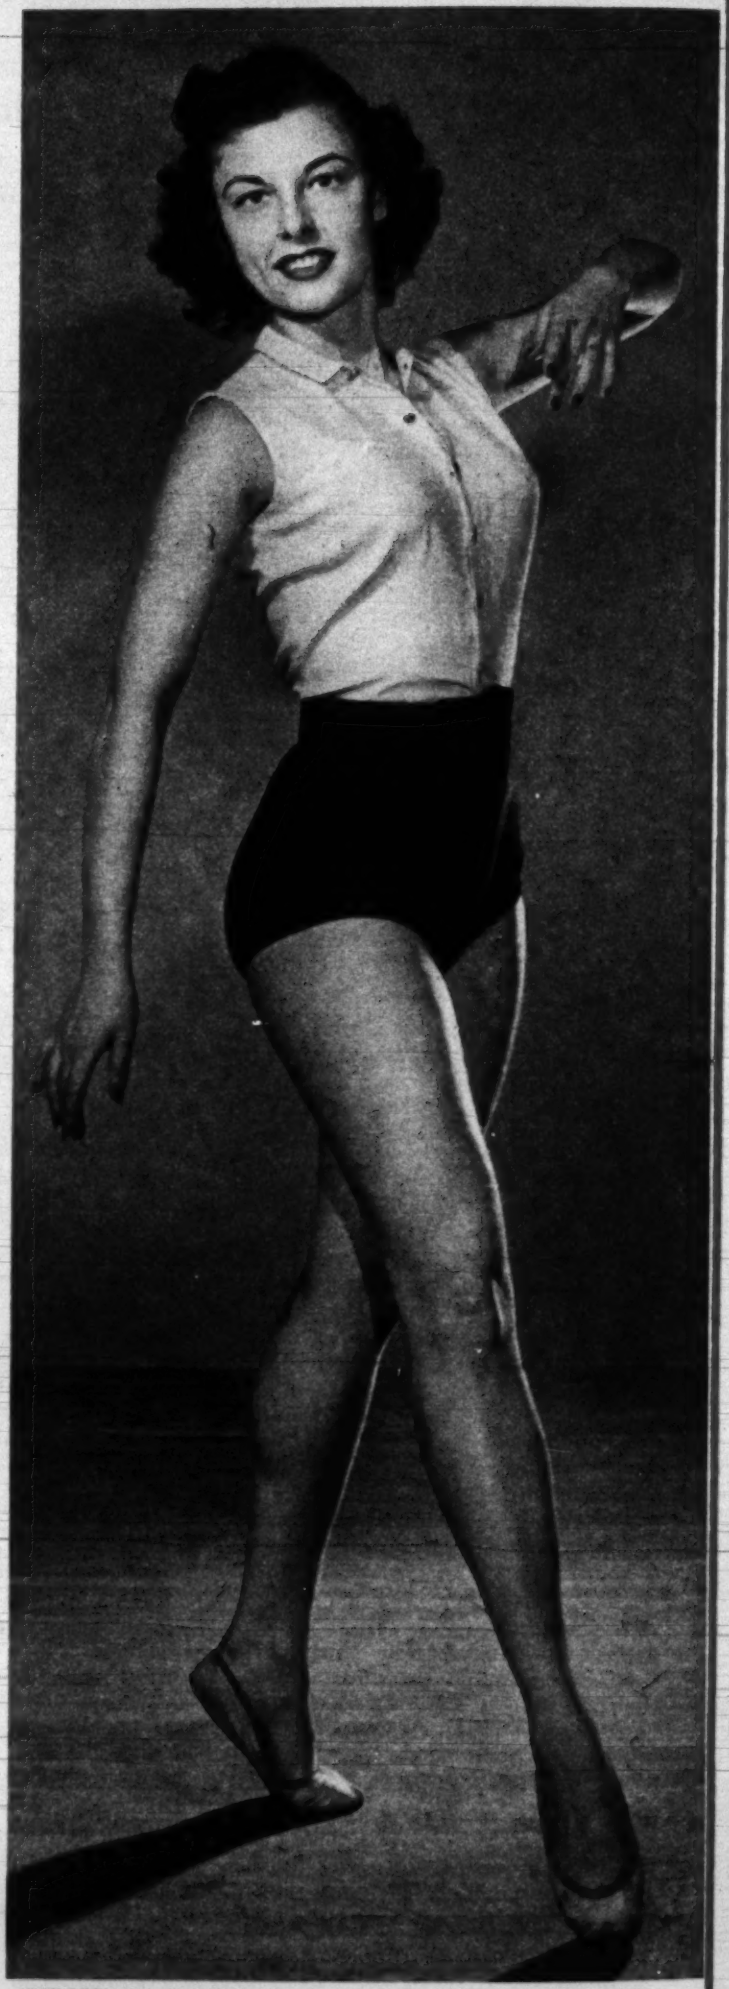
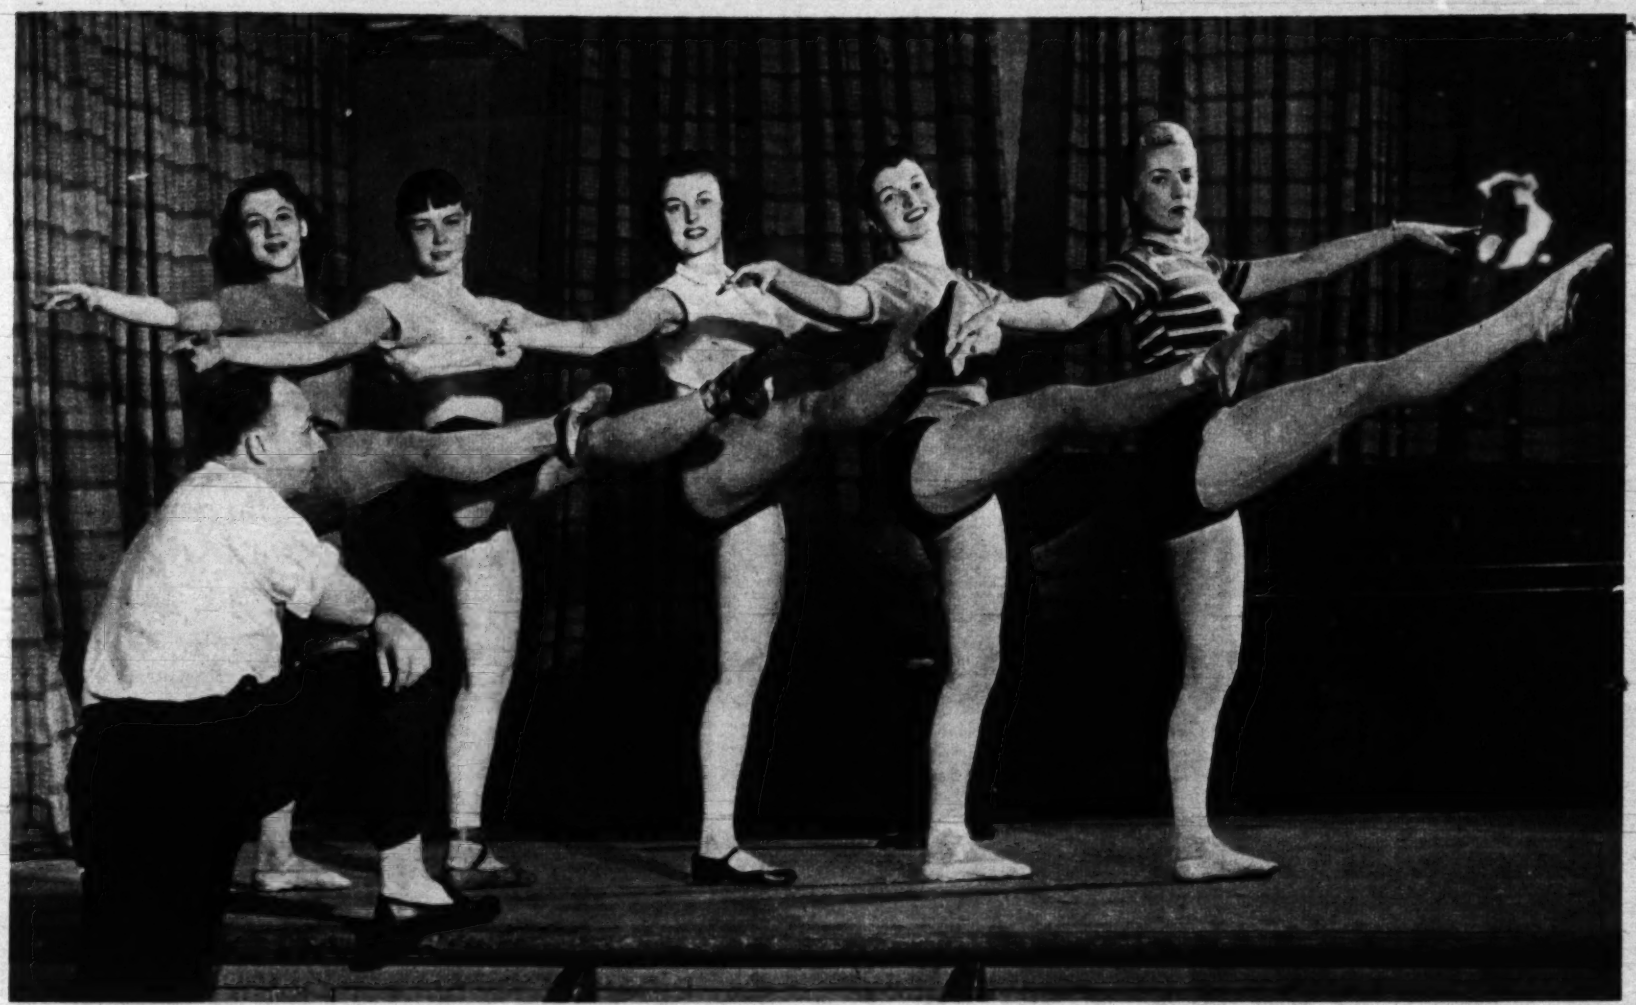
Yes, walnut prices are down! But Diamond Walnut quality is still tops! Big shells bursting with plump, sweet kernels. Buy Diamond Walnuts in 1 lb. cellophane bags (red for large-size, blue for medium)—or ready-shelled in 8 and 4 oz. cans, vacuum-packed to stay fresh all year 'round.



'PERFECT TV CHORINE' is Norma Thornton. She weighs 112, is a little less voluptuous than the average stage chorus girl.



High and wide kicks don't go on television. Here Wray reminds chorus line-up for "Toast of Town" that they must keep camera scope in mind.

TV Chorus Girls

They're shorter, don't kick as high as others

CONSTANT rehearsals for each week's new programs make TV chorines' job hard. Here they relax.

THE YOUNG WOMEN in the picture above represent a new phenomenon in the entertainment world: they're television chorus girls. And as such they are a good deal different from chorus girls you've been used to seeing.

The tall voluptuous blondes so popular in stage shows, it seems, won't go on TV for several reasons. One reason is this: they simply won't fit on TV screens!

Take the case of Norma Thornton, the dancer in the white blouse above and at left. She's five-feet-four, whereas many stage dancers are five-feet-eight. Her hips are 34. (A Broadway dancer's hips might be 37.) Her director on CBS-TV's "Toast of the Town" is John Wray, one of television's better generals. Wray points to Miss Thornton as a perfect example of the new breed of dancers. Why?

"First of all she is letter-perfect as a dancer," Wray says. "All TV girls have to dance; they spend most of their time dancing, not parading about and looking pretty.

"We choose girls who are lithe and slim. Gracefulness is a 'must' since cameras exaggerate the slightest awkward motion."

How Much Does She Make?

Another practical reason for using small girls like Norma, Wray says, is this: TV stages are small. A stage show may have a line of 40 girls or more. A TV "line" is seldom more than five or six; often only four.

There's still another requirement: TV dancers must also be actresses–at least of a sort. Often they're given lines to speak–something that seldom happens to a stage dancer!

Norma makes about $75 a week, comparable to a stage dancer's salary. She earns it. As a rule she practices eight hours a week for a four-minute break on the screen!

ANN DOES!

PEG DOESN'T!

With or without rinsing —

Tide DOES A BETTER WASHING JOB THAN ANY SOAP ON EARTH!

Never before Tide could you wash your heaviest, dirtiest clothes SO CLEAN!

- Leaves no soap film ever!
- Miracle clean clothes— with or without rinsing!
- Dazzling white clothes— with no bleach or bluing!
- Soap-dulled colors come bright and fresh!
- Clothes dry soft— iron beautifully!
- And Tide is safe for all washable colors—all washable fabrics—rinse or no rinse!

Whichever way you wash — Tide gives you WHITE, BRIGHT, DAZZLING CLEAN CLOTHES!

No matter how much women may differ about the rinsing question—they sure seem to agree that Tide beats any soap they've ever tried! And it's true! Tide, unlike soap, forms no soap film . . . in fact, Tide removes film left by former soap washings. What's more, Tide actually dissolves dirt out of clothes . . . holds dirt suspended in the sudsy water. Wring out the clothes—and the dirt wrings out with the washwater. And your clothes have such a bright, fresh look—such a clean, CLEAN look, you'll say it's a miracle! Get Procter & Gamble's Tide today—there's nothing like it!

"Clean is the word for every wash you do with Tide!"

says Mrs. Jean Riché, Dallas, Texas

"With Tide, white things are such a gleaming, clean white . . . wash prints have such a fresh, clean brightness! I've tried all the leading washing products, but nothing ever got my clothes cleaner than Tide. I'm sticking to Tide!"

1 "THIS IS THE COLORING DEPARTMENT", ANNOUNCES SANTA CLAUS, "WHERE THE DWARFS COLOR THE TOYS.
"WHAT DOES THIS LITTLE DWARF DO?" ASKS FEE FEE.
"THAT'S STUMPY," SANTA TELLS HER, "HE MIXES THE COLORS. RIGHT NOW HE IS MIXING GREEN."

What colors would result from the following mixtures?

1. YELLOW AND BLUE
2. RED AND YELLOW
3. BLUE AND RED
4. YELLOW, RED & BLUE

2 "WHAT'S THIS MACHINE?" ASKS MAIZIE.
"THAT'S A DESIGNOTYPER", SANTA TELLS HER. "BY TOUCHING CERTAIN KEYS, YOU CREATE CERTAIN DESIGNS AND LETTERS ON CANDY."
"LOOK!" CRIES CLOUDY, "HE'S TYPED A MESSAGE FOR US, BUT IT'S IN CODE.

Here's how to solve the message.
Note that on each key of the designotyper there is a design plus the letter it represents on the paper. You only see the design. Can you read the message?

"THAT DWARF IS TESTING A VERY NICE TOY," QUEENIE SAYS ADMIRINGLY.

If you want to see the toy draw over the dotted lines then color each space with the following colors.

A - RED
B - YELLOW
C - BLUE
D - GREEN

4 "WE MUST BE GOING NOW," SAYS WIZZIE. "WE WANT TO GET HOME BEFORE YOU ARRIVE WITH THE PRESENTS."
"ALL RIGHT," SAYS SANTA, "AND TELL ALL THE BOYS AND GIRLS TO GO TO BED EARLY. EARLY TO BED AND EARLY TO RISE WINS THE RACE---REMEMBER?"
"HA, HA, HA," LAUGHS MAIZIE, "YOU'VE GOT THAT OLD SAYING MIXED UP WITH ANOTHER!"

Here are 5 well known sayings, but they are mixed up. Can you straighten them out?

1. A NEW BROOM SAVES NINE.
2. TOO MANY COOKS CATCHES THE WORM.
3. A STITCH IN TIME IS WORTH TWO IN THE BUSH.
4. THE EARLY BIRD SWEEPS CLEAN.
5. A BIRD IN THE HAND SPOIL THE BROTH.

AN INDUSTRIOUS FOX SQUIRREL BURIED MANY NUTS IN THE GROUND BEFORE THE SNOW CAME...

AND NOW THAT HIS SUPPLY IN THE HOLLOW TREE IS LOW, HE GOES DOWN TO DIG THEM UP!

BUT WITH SNOW ON THE GROUND, THESE NUTS ARE HARD TO FIND...

ESPECIALLY WHEN FOXES AND HAWKS ARE FOREVER TRYING TO CATCH HIM AWAY FROM THE SAFETY OF A TREE!

SO THE FRUSTRATED NUTEATER SCOLDS HIS ENEMIES AND STRETCHES HIS FOOD SUPPLY

BUT HE SHOULDN'T BE UNHAPPY ABOUT THOSE LOST NUTS...

FOR THEY'LL GROW INTO TREES AND PROVIDE FOOD FOR HIS GREAT GRANDCHILDREN!

Synopsis: PRINCE VALIANT, EGIL, RUFUS AND ARF ENJOY A NIGHT'S LODGING BUT THEIR AWAKENING IS RUDE. ERE THEY CAN LEAVE, THE CASTLE IS ATTACKED.

THEIR HOST, RUY FOULKE APPEARS. "YOUR LOSS IS MY GAIN, FOR THIS IS A FIGHT TO THE FINISH AND EVERY FIGHTING MAN IS WELCOME!"

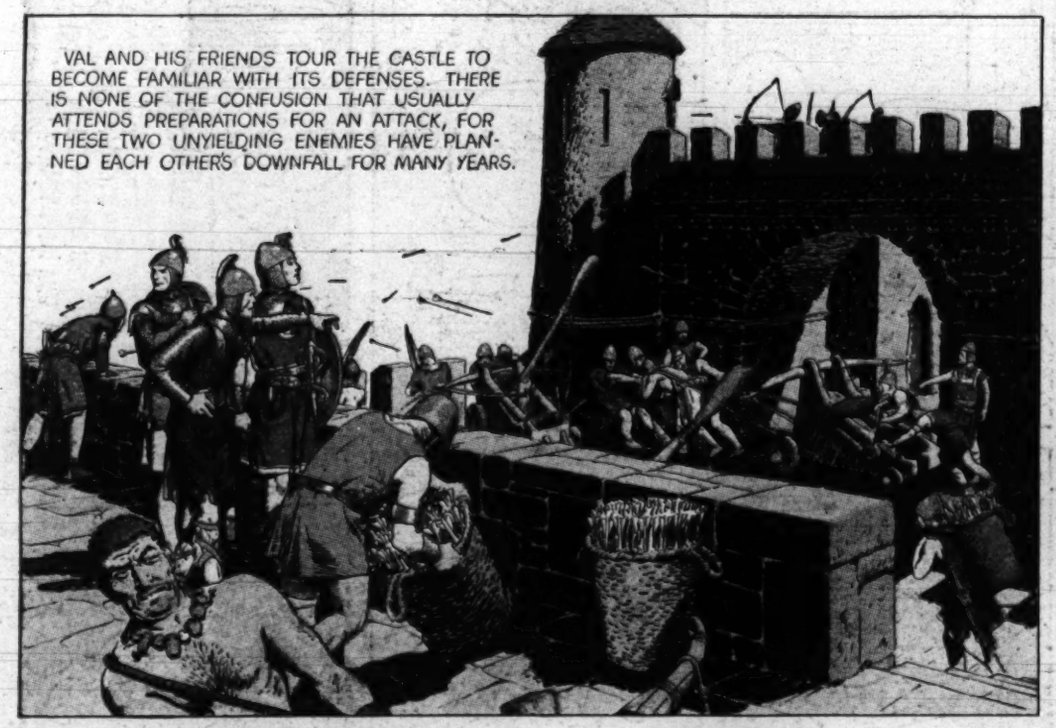
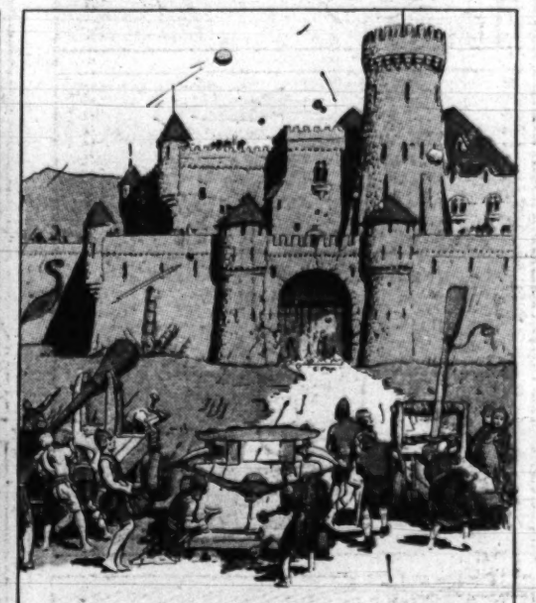
"YONDER STANDS MY ENEMY, BLACK ROBERT, A BRAVE AND RUTHLESS CAPTAIN. ONLY ONE OF US CAN SURVIVE THIS BATTLE!"



VAL AND HIS FRIENDS TOUR THE CASTLE TO BECOME FAMILIAR WITH ITS DEFENSES. THERE IS NONE OF THE CONFUSION THAT USUALLY ATTENDS PREPARATIONS FOR AN ATTACK, FOR THESE TWO UNYIELDING ENEMIES HAVE PLANNED EACH OTHER'S DOWNFALL FOR MANY YEARS.



FOOT SOLDIERS SURROUND THE CASTLE AND, LATER IN THE DAY, THE WAR ENGINES, RAM, BALISTA, MANGONEL AND CATAPULT THUNDER INTO ACTION AGAINST THE MAIN GATE
